WOMEN'S CLUBS AND WORK

Edited by Mrs. Sarah A. Evans.

THAT club work is beginning to be recognized in the councils of the nation is evidenced by the following letter, written to Mrs. Decker, and by her kindly communication to the members of the national board:

Dear Madam: Recently I invited the governors of the states and territories to meet in the White House on May 13-15, next, in a conference on the conservation of natural resources. In issuing the invitation I expressed the opinion that there is urgent need of taking stock of our resources, and I added my belief that the conference ought to take rank among the most important meetings in the history of the country.

The replies to the invitation have been most gratifying. They indicate that practically all of the governors, each with three special advisers, will attend the conference. The senators and representatives of the sixtieth congress, the justices of the supreme court and the members of the cabinet have also been invited to take part, and the inland waterways commission, which suggested the conference, will be present to reply to inquiries and make record of the proceedings.

A limited number of associations of national scope concerned with our natural resources will be invited to send one representative each to take part in the discussion. The general scope of conference is indicated on pages 24-26 of the preliminary report of the waterways commission, of which a copy is inclosed. I invite the cooperation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in bringing this matter before the people, and it gives me pleasure to invite you as president of the Federation to take part in the conference. Sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Mrs. Decker writes that as it comes but a month before the biennial convention she can ill afford to spend the time, as she would have to return to Denver before going to Boston, but says: I almost feel it a duty to go, as we have never before been recognized by such high authority as a real force in the nation. I shall make a desperate effort to go, even at great cost to myself in all ways."

A SHORT time ago the state president sent out the following letter to every federated club in the state:

"Portland, Or., April 7.—Madame President—I have often expressed myself as opposed, in general, to the use of woman's much-vaunted influence with the voters, but it must be admitted that occasionally there arises an emergency which not only justifies the use of such influence, but almost demands it. Such an emergency exists at the present time in the form of the referendum measure which places the whole matter of whether or not Oregon shall support its state university before the electorate of the state in the coming June election.

"The question to be decided then is not only shall the university receive the amount which the legislature, after a full consideration of the needs of the institution, decided almost unanimously should be given it, but the other question, vital to every Oregon mother, and close to every home, must the finest of Oregon's sons and daughters be lost to the state by being of a necessity sent to distant centers of learning, there in most cases forming connections which will permanently retain them? Oregon should undoubtedly decide in favor of building up an institution of higher learning in our midst as all other states have done for themselves. By so doing we shall not only add these highly trained young men and women to the citizenship of Oregon, but make it increasingly possible for greater and greater numbers of them to obtain these advantages without having to be so far away from home and home influences for the greater part of four years.

"Our own university has been struggling along without the financial support given to even the least of the universities maintained by any of our sister states. The needs of the school have grown until it is practically a question of no university at all, or of sufficient funds to enable it to reflect the dignity and credit that it should.

The amount voted by the last legislature was exceedingly reasonable, yet influences have been active which make a vigorous campaign in behalf of the university by all the friends of higher education a necessity, if Oregon is to avoid the risk of having no university, and at the same time be spared the humiliation of going upon record as repudiating the idea of higher education.

"For ever so many reasons Oregon cannot afford to have this appropriation fail. I hope most earnestly that you yourself, as well as every member of your club, will do all that is possible in seeing to it that the full significance of this matter is understood by the voters whom you may be able to reach. If this appropriation fails it will be because the voters simply do not understand the question at issue.

"I shall send you from time to time some pamphlets containing information regarding the university and its needs as issued by the University Alumni association. Please use these to the best advantage both in making the members of your club conversant with the facts and in properly informing the voters of your locality. More of these pamphlets will be furnished gladly if they are needed.

"I should also suggest as highly desirable the passing of strong resolutions by your club favoring the support of the appropriation and the publication of these resolutions in your home papers.

"Trusting that this matter will receive the serious consideration that the present emergency demands. Most sincerely yours, SARAH A. EVANS,

President O. F. W. C.

Since receiving it many of the clubs have passed resolutions indorsing the appropriation and pledging their influence toward sustaining the act of the legislature at the June election.

FOLLOWING the course of study outlined by the Federated clubs, the art class of the Women's club, meeting at the city library at 2 p. m., Tuesday, April 14, listened to a paper from the arts and crafts department on oriental rugs—localities producing and kinds produced. The interesting topic of oriental rugs has been taken up at some length by the class, the outline comprising history and geography, material and dyes, design and process, and localities producing, and kinds produced. "He who binds his soul to knowledge steals the key of heaven," and so with the little knowledge stolen from our libraries and from the recital of members who have studied rugs in their native countries, the class has received the key which has unlocked the fund of interest attaching to this branch of art.

But alas for the man who has a penchant for the antique rug—all over 50 years old being so classed. The so-styled antique may be a product of last year's loom and so processed as to deceive the keen-eyed connoisseur. In 1892 the customs house showed a receipt of 300,000 of these rugs, while last year there were over 3,000,000.

The characteristic beauty of the eastern rug is far on the way to extinction and these written pages of ancient history are little understood now, all of them dealing in symbolism. The geographical division of rugs is Caucasian, Turkish, Persian, Turkaman and Indian. This paper was read by Mrs. C. C. Chapman.

The subject for the next meeting will be discussed by Mrs. Kearney—"Metal Works; Gold and Silversmiths of Ancient Times."

The life of Rubens was treated by Mesdames Abendroth and White, who found so much concerning this man who is said to have had the keenest eye of any artist, and to be able to call up in his mind's eye and depict with his brush years later, anything once seen by him, that they will continue this topic at the next meeting. At that time Miss Elizabeth Sharp will give a paper on Dutch and Flemish art and Mrs. John Scott on English art of the seventeenth century.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Sarah Evans, state president of the Federated clubs, read a letter received from Mrs. Sara Platt Decker, national president, concerning placing the Art Handbook in the hands of the members of the Portland club.

FOLLOWING the art class of the Woman's club, on the same afternoon and at the same place, the large class in psychology, under the able leadership of Mrs. Alice Weister, is held.

The meeting last Tuesday was one of unusual interest and out of the regular order of business. The hour, at the suggestion of the leader, was given over entirely to an informal discussion on the training of children. It followed right in line with the lecture at the regular club meeting the Friday before, and the pivotal point of the argument was whether children should be given the strong meat of cold truth or whether the milk for babes be administered through the sentimental delusions of Santa Claus, the romantic conception of the stork's visit and the like, which from time out of mind have answered the questions of curious children. The consensus of opinion was that truth could never be anything but right and beautiful and the discreet parent would know how to present it in its truest and best psychological aspect.

The usual reading for the lesson was dispensed with for the day and the discussion proved to be a relaxation as well as a very beneficial feature.

CURRENT Literature class of the Woman's club was entertained at the New Nortonia last Wednesday by Mrs. Kutner. About 30 members were present. Mrs. Ogden concluded the book, "The New Missioner," by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

It was found to be one of the most charming books that has been discussed this year. It is a book with little plot but with the most charming character sketching, and then each character has its own little plot and story, and in that it gave much material for discussion.

Mrs. Ogden has the faculty of bringing out the salient points of a book and in "The New Missioner" she was able to grasp the spirit as well as the form of the story. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Lawton, 419 Larrabee street, Wednesday, April 29, at 2 p. m.

THE excursion committee of the local biennial board, with the cooperation of several Massachusetts clubs, are developing many interesting plans, and a choice of tempting excursions will be offered the visiting clubwomen on nearly every afternoon from the opening date of the biennial on June 22, to its close on June 30. A sail "down the harbor" will be one of the early attractions and later the trip to Plymouth will enable many Pilgrims to visit the rock. Historic Boston will be visited on foot and by automobile, and a special excursion will cover the park and playground system. A trolley ride to Lexington and Concord will bring the visitors under the hospitable care of the Concord Woman's club, and the Amesbury club will do the honors for Whittier land. The Salem clubs are eager to show their historic treasures, the clubs of Lynn will arrange an automobile ride to Nahant and along the beautiful north shore, and the Cantabrigia club will play the hostess for the classic shades of Cambridge.

FORESTRY club held its monthly meeting at the home of the president last Monday. It was a beautiful day and almost the entire membership was out. It was the annual meeting and a good deal of routine business was attended to. The officers elected to serve for the ensuing year were: President, Mrs. Breyman; vice-president, Mrs. Cartwright; secretary, Mrs. Pritchard; treasurer, Mrs. McRobert. It was voted, that in honor of the long and faithful services of the president, the club would purchase and, on Arbor day, plant a tree in the yard of the president's home. The variety of tree was left for the president to choose and when it is planted in a permanent place the club will hold some ceremonies in honor of the occasion.

At the conclusion of the business Mrs. White of Oregon City, read a very interesting paper on the common birds of Oregon. Mrs. White is a bird enthusiast, and the paper which she read, delightful as it was, was the least part of her entertaining talk. She is so full of her subject she found it hard to confine herself to type-written sheets, and the beautiful and poetic thoughts with which she interspersed her written facts lent a charm to the address which carried her audience by storm.

She had a number of colored bird pictures with which she illustrated her talk.

A rising vote of thanks was extended the speaker at the conclusion of the program. Mrs. George Harding of Oregon City, was a visitor, as were several others from the city.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. M. A. Dalton, 300 Pettigrove street, Monday, May 4, at 2 p. m.

MISS GEORGIE A. BACON, 39 Dean street, Worcester, Massachusetts, chairman of the local biennial board, sends out the following request:

Presidents of state and territorial federations and presidents of clubs belonging to the general federation are earnestly requested to send a complete list of their delegates and alternates as soon as appointed, to the chairman of the credentials committee, Mrs. Charlotte W. Bell, 13 Avon Place, Springfield, Massachusetts.

The local biennial board has offered to provide headquarters for state and territorial delegations without charge. Will the presidents of state and territorial federations kindly inform the chairman of the hall committee at once regarding the probable size of their delegations, that the necessary arrangements may be made? A notification as to the location of her state headquarters will be sent to each president one month before the opening of the biennial. Mrs. Ella C. R. Whiton, 36 Melville avenue, Dorchester, Massachusetts.

MRS. ALICE M. JOHNSON, chairman of the national transportation committee, announces the following eastern rates, but so far fails to throw any light on the western problem:

The transportation committee takes pleasure in reporting that reduced rates for the ninth biennial convention to be held in Boston in June, 1908, have been authorized by the New England Passenger association for all lines except the Eastern Steamship company, and by the Trunk Line association. The lines included in the latter are the Grand Trunk, New York Central, Hudson River, West Shore, Erie, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Lehigh, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Philadelphia & Reading, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio.

The rate is one fare and a third, certificate plan. A fee of 25 cents will be charged for each certificate issued.

ALICE M. JOHNSON, Chairman.

THE PRESENT DAY CLUB held its regular meeting Tuesday of this week at the home of Mrs. D. T. Van Tine, 724 East Madison street. A very spirited debate was held, and the fair, impartial judging was much appreciated by the club.

WESTON sends the following good report for the year 1907-1908:

Election of officers, October 12: President, Mrs. G. W. Proebstel; vice-president, Mrs. D. C. Lazier; treasurer, Mrs. F. D. Hasbrouck; secretary, Mrs. J. E. McDaniel. Number of members, 17; number of meetings, 14.

Club year will close with a banquet May 9, followed by the annual business meeting, May 23.

While this has been partially a needlework club, the plan followed at each meeting has been to have a program closing with a collation. At one meeting domestic science was discussed, and the refreshments were prepared and served by the domestic science class of the normal school.

The following subjects have been given at various times: A most interesting history of the Portland vase, a book review, Washington, radium, and others equally as interesting.

The meeting held April 4 was devoted to the discussion of civic improvement. A petition was sent to the city council asking for the cleaning up of the town, and an ordinance prohibiting expectoration in public places. Through the suggestion of the club a woman's mass meeting was called April 7 and a Civic Improvement association organized. An organizer was elected and six chairmen, each in charge of a district of the town and each to appoint a committee of five for her district. The year has been one of pleasure, interest and enthusiasm, and it is with regret we see it come to a close.

NEARLY two years ago the art committee of the General Federation decided to get out an art handbook, primarily for the convenience of women who, upon visiting a strange city, might be able to find without great labor the public works of art, where they were located, their meaning and significance and something of their history. It was intended to make it a little 20-page book, but the work proved so fascinating and the material grew to such an extent and was of such value it could not be rejected by the committee, who kept enlarging to such an extent that the book has gone to 80 pages, with a corresponding cost to the federation.

It was first intended to distribute it free, through the national bureau of information, but as it will now be a volume of 80 pages, the General Federation does not feel able to bear the expense and by vote of the board it has been decided to issue 1,000 copies and sell them for 25 cents, before or at the time of the biennial.

The book begins with the letter "A" and notes the works of art in various cities, including the historic buildings and some private art collections. It has a foreword by the president, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, and the chairman, Mrs. Patterson, who is making the collection. The president writes that it would be an advantage if those who desire the book would send for it before the opening of the convention, as the 1,000 copies will not last long among the 3,000 delegates who will be in attendance. It is the hope of the present board that this will be but a beginning and that each administration will supplement it with another, as of course the first one of 80 pages will only begin to touch upon the many works of art possessed by almost every city in the United States. Mrs. C. C. Chapman has been appointed to take subscriptions for Oregon, and any one wanting a copy of the book can write or apply to her, 430 Columbia street.

AMERICAN School of Home Economics sends out its belief in the following terse sentences:

"We Believe—

"That right living should be the fourth 'R' in education.

"That home-making should be regarded as a profession.

"That health is the duty and business of the individual; illness of the physician.

"That most illness results from carelessness, ignorance, or intemperance of some kind.

"That as many lives are cut short by unhealthful food and diet as through strong drink.

"That on the home foundation is built all that is good in state or individual.

"That the upbringing of children demands more study than the raising of chickens.

"That the spending of money is as important as the earning of the money.

"That economy does not mean spending a small amount, but in getting the largest returns for the money expended.

"That the home-maker should be as alert to make progress in her life-work as the business or professional man.

"That the most profitable, the most interesting study for women is the home, for in it center all the issues of life.

"That the study of home problems may be made of no less culture value than the study of art or literature and of much more immediate value."

MISS AMY BERNARDY, professor of Italian at Smith college, in her recent address before the conference of the territorial committee of the national board of the Young Women's Christian association for New England in Worcester, Massachusetts, gave some striking facts with regard to Italian women in this country. She has made a study of the conditions of Italian immigrant women, and finds that of the girls who leave Italy before they are 21 to work in American factories, one third die from the effects of the change. The proportion of Italian women in this country to men is one to four; the proportion of mortality is four to one. Industrial schools Miss Bernardy said, would do much toward changing these conditions. An Italian banker in New York is trying to interest American women in Italian girls as domestic servants.

IN THE LAST edition of the Spectator are two interesting paragraphs, under the caption "Two Cood Laws." The first paragraph begins in this way, "Rather interesting is the statement made by John Manning, district attorney, to the effect that the introduction of the whipping post as a curative agency for wife-beating has caused a wonderful abatement in the disease." and further that, "the number of cases of wife-beating reported to the police has decreased 75 per cent."

We are inclined to challenge the statement as to the "abatement of the disease." The phrase "reported to the police," is the keynote of our challenge. The disease has not abated one bit, but the cases "reported to the police," have been fewer. Why? Chiefly because a woman who will live with a man through the process of evolution from loving husband to wife-beater, is a rare creature, indeed, who after the beating, will in turn deliver him over to the official cat-o'-nine-tails.

We have in mind, the first case of wife-beating after the passage of the law—the first conviction rather. The poor woman had endured his abuse for years, had supported him, indeed, the last beating was administered because she refused to give him part of the money she earned in a restaurant. After he had been whipped and discharged from custody, she threatened to sue the county for physical violence against her husband. Women are still being beaten by their husbands and will be until our social system permits economic freedom for women—until women will learn that it is not necessary to deliver soul as well as body to the man she marries. No, wife-beating has not diminished on account of the law, but the "reports to the police" have diminished "75 per cent."

Only the other day a case came to our knowledge of a little woman who on the second day after her confinement, was dragged out of bed by a drunken husband and kicked. Did she have him arrested? No, she had three children, one two days old, who would support them? She is not strong enough, you know we don't hire people to work for us who are physically unable to do the work, and the county does not care for people as long as they can do "anything"—(meaning not specified)—and rather than be separated from her children she takes the beatings. Just one of the 75 per cent of the "abatement of the disease."

No, putting a man in jail and beating him will not cure him, it will only increase his vindictiveness. But putting him in jail and forcing him to work for money which shall be paid over to his family, will give him a chance to think it over.

We sincerely trust that if Senator Sichel be reelected, he will work for a repeal of the law which is a relic of the days of revenge. CLUBWOMAN.

WE SAT through the last session of the Woman's club, hoping that some one would bring forward a resolution indorsing the effort of Professor Downs of the Williams-avenue school, to secure a playground for the new school in that section. Now, my club sisters, if we are in earnest about playgrounds and sanitary schoolbuildings, and such things, do let us get down to work, and then work and do something besides talk and pass resolutions. We vote for a beautifully-worded whereas and therefore and be it resolved that we will take action and go home feeling that we are of the "true nobility" then forget all about it. It is not so?

Oh, yes it is. A month has scarcely passed since we adopted the resolution not to wear "the aigrette or the plumage of wild birds" and at the last meeting of the club an ex-president, who voted for the measure, appeared in an exquisitely becoming hat with the long graceful plume of the bird of paradise in the same hat.

Oh, women, women, stop and think! How can we look for confidence and respect when we have no confidence in ourselves and no respect for our votes.

But to go back to playgrounds; do let us help the Williams-avenue school get the extra block for the children.

SEA WATER MEDICINE.

Its Ancient Popularity Revived in Recent Years.

Common sea water, which centuries ago was a popular remedy in sickness, has revived its usefulness lately.

In addition to common salt sea water contains many important mineral substances, the total solid matter amounting to 3.2 to 3.8 per cent. Sea water has been given with good results in cases of dyspepsia, loss of appetite and tuberculosis.

In general, says the British Medical Journal, the appetite was improved and strength was rapidly regained. In order to obtain the best and most immediate results it is necessary to observe certain precautions.

The sea water must be natural, as it is impossible to imitate so complex a liquid. Indeed it has been proved that seasalt when redissolved in distilled water lacks some of the properties of natural sea water, exerting a tonic action upon a dog when injected subcutaneously.

It must be freshly collected, as it loses carbon dioxide on standing, with precipitation of some of its salts. It should be taken from the open sea, remote from rivers and other sources of pollution.

It should be sterilized by filtration, as heat dissociates the bicarbonates and destroys the natural equilibrium of the liquid. When required for subcutaneous injection it should be diluted with water to the same concentration as normal blood serum. Distilled water is not suitable for its dilution, as it sometimes causes pain.

See?

When March at last is over,
And part of April spent,
We'll have some days that belong to us,
For these are only Lent.
