DEMENTED FARMER ROAMS LINN WOODS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Lebanon, Or., April 20.—Considerable excitement was caused in this city and vicinity yesterday by the report that W. H. Beard, a prominent farmer, who lives two miles east of this place, had become demented and was at large. He left his home Saturday evening and roamed over the country all night. He was located yesterday morning about 8 miles from his home. When he left home he rode away on a pony and took his shotgun with him. Yesterday afternoon a large posse at one time had him surrounded in a wooded tract but he made his escape. The sheriff and one of his deputies were with the crowd but they were not able to capture him before dark when they had to give up the hunt until morning. The posse got his pony but he still has his shotgun. It seems he is making his way back toward his home.
