CHILDREN TO REGISTER FOR FESTIVAL DRILL

Organization to Be Effected This Afternoon at Ringler's Hall on East Side.

Children from the public schools will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the east side athletic hall, Ringler building, Grand avenue and East Morrison street, to register for the Rose Festival drill to be given the evening of June 4, and to organize formally.

The fact that the drill and parade will be held in the evening and not in the heat of the day, and the line of march will not be more than one mile caused the board of education to withdraw its objection to the participation of the children in the event, and as most of the children are anxious to enter it is estimated that about 3,000 will be in line.

Places Responsibility for Defeat Upon Democrats Who Registered as Republicans—Applies the "Oh Hell" Story to Himself.

Senator Fulton arrived in Portland last night from Astoria and will leave tomorrow morning for Washington to see what can be done to save the Fulton amendment to the interstate commerce law, which is now in the hands of Senator Elkins and his conferees of the senate committee on interstate commerce.

"Have you anything to say about the primary election?" Senator Fulton was asked.

"Well, what do you expect me to say?" replied the senator, grimly. "Simply this: Oh, hell!"

Then he chuckled and told the story: "I saw it in an old book called 'Flush Times in Mississippi.' A case was being tried in the supreme court of that state. The evidence began piling up for the plaintiff and he thought it looked like a sure case, until the court announced that the members of the jury must instruct you to disregard the evidence and return a verdict for the defendant." The plaintiff turned away his head and exclaimed "Oh, hell!"

Blames the Democrats. "But seriously, my defeat was undoubtedly brought about by the Democrats, as I have said before. They registered in great numbers as Republicans and voted for me. The majority of the Republicans of this state were undoubtedly in favor of my candidacy. There should be a law passed requiring that all those voting in the primaries shall take affidavit that they are bona fide members of the party in which they register, and second they should be compelled to prove that they had voted for a majority of their party candidates at the last election."

Was asked as to his chances for re-election, Senator Fulton said: "The cake most certainly will be elected. This is a Republican state and Republicans will vote for the Republican candidate. This talk about Governor Chamberlain's securing the senatorship is all both."

Referring to the Fulton amendment to the interstate commerce act giving the interstate commerce commission power to suspend changes in rates made by railroads, the senator had previously reviewed the matter, Senator Fulton said that the chances were against its passage at this session of congress.

He has not given it up, by any means said the senator, "but it is rather late in the session and Senator Elkins, chairman of the committee, is opposed to the amendment. Of course, if the bill were reported favorably and everything was satisfactory, it could be passed through both houses in a day. But that is not the case. The minority, but a powerful minority in the senate committee, is against the bill and I think the chances are against the passage of the amendment. But I am going to do my best to get it through."

Another Change Needed. "This amendment of mine is not the only change that should be made in the interstate commerce act. The commission should be given power to allow railroads to grant special rates for foreign shipments, because our shippers are brought in competition with foreign carriers. For instance, in the oriental trade. If our railroads into the Pacific coast ports were allowed to make such rates a vast traffic would come through our ports and be transferred to cars and sent across the country by rail instead of by water. By that means the Pacific coast would get a large amount of business which they now miss. If our shippers to and from foreign ports could have the advantage of special rail rates, the work of the commission, they would be able to compete much more easily with foreign shippers, who have the advantage of special rail rates. But I am not considering running for the senate on an independent ticket. I don't have to depend on a political job for a livelihood," said he.

The REAL FEMININE

An Out-Door School.

THE PROPOSAL to establish a school for deaf children in the city where they may have the opportunity of the same course of study that is presented to those who are in normal health, is one of the greatest interests. It raises the whole matter of educating the defective which has many aspects and has been the subject of the most thoughtful study on the part of educators for many years.

In this connection the open air school which has been established near Charlestown in the outskirts of Berlin for anemic and ill-nourished children is attracting much attention. It is for the benefit of all those who are not sufficiently strong to keep up in the ordinary school course.

In a magnificent forest known as the Grunewald a big barrack was erected and the children were taken as pupils. The domestic management is under a patriotic board of women, and the expense is met by the city. This description of the plan taken from the Philadelphia Telegraph is of interest:

At the end of six weeks the number had increased from 55 to 120. The children who attend the schools are chosen by the medical officers of the city schools. The preference is generally given to those showing signs of heart or lung affection, to anemic and debilitated children; to children who, although not ill enough to be confined to their beds, are not able to follow the strain of study under ordinary conditions, and to convalescents. On the grounds of the school, which comprise about two and a half acres enclosed by a high fence of wire netting, are a large school barrack, built of wood and tarred pasteboard, another barrack serving as a kitchen, a roomy lavatory, a bath house with showers, and a big wooden shed open on one side and covered by a wide overhanging roof, under which the children take shelter when it rains. Everything is planned in accordance with the most modern theories of pedagogy and medicine.

The food is of the best and is very inexpensive. In the morning, about quarter after 7, when the pupils arrive at the school from the electric cars, breakfast is served. This meal consists of a glass of milk with bread and butter, at noon, for their dinner, are given plenty of vegetables and about a quarter of a pound of meat cooked as they have another roomy shed with a high fence of wire netting, and at 7 in the evening before they leave for home, they are served with hot soup and bread and butter. The cost of all this does not exceed 12 cents a day for each child. As has been said, the expense is met by the city.

"The little pupils enter the school sickly and inattentive in their classes. They leave it well and strong, and so far advanced in their lessons as to be able at once to enter the ordinary grades of the Charlottenburg schools. A further benefit resulting from an institution of this sort is the affectionate intimacy which springs up between teacher and pupil. In the year 1905 the expense to the city of the forest school amounted to about $5,000.

"Within a few weeks London will also have its forest school, patterned after the Charlottenburg example."

New York Styles. WRIST-BAGS that are new have rounded tops in gold mountings fitted inside with a small change in the all the little vanities that a woman carries with her. The initials in large, glowing letters should be placed in the middle of the front side. Lovely coque boas and scarfs of marabout with muffs to match are fashionable for spring, and are especially pretty in the new wood-brown shades. Some of the feather and marabout scarfs are flat collarettes and others are round boas.

Folds of silk vest or plain cloth are stitched on the bottom of many skirts, which is considered very smart as a finish and also to weight down the skirt. The fold should be the exact shade of the material and may be from three to 12 inches deep.

Sleeves continue to be made both long and short; those reaching well below the elbow and finished with intricate lace or a transparent tulle are seen on afternoon toilettes, and the long ones which are now very small with little fullness are for the most part seen on tailored gowns.

Shoes with tops that exactly match their gowns are the correct styles in footwear, the vamps being of patent leather and the tops fastened with immense shining buttons. Tan shoes for every day wear are fully as popular as last year, and are shown in new lace and button styles and smart little pumps.

Tailored suits of white mohair will be extremely popular for summer and they are cut on the new lines—circular or gored skirt with short cutaway jacket, single breasted and half fitting. Some of the coats are trimmed with button trimmed straps and others are braided in white soutache.

Eggs as Food.

EGGS ARE RICH in protein, the tissue-building food. Without the shell the egg is 73.7 per cent water, 13.4 per cent protein, 10.5 per cent fat, 1.0 per cent ash and has a fuel value of 720 calories per pound.

A fresh egg will sink in water, one that is not so fresh will topple around, one that is spoiled will float. The shell of a fresh egg looks dull and porous while that of an old egg appears thin and shiny. When shaken a stale egg will rattle.

It is in white, whether to egg shells and not the shell itself which does the work of clarifying when egg shells are employed for this purpose. Eating of raw eggs is increasing greatly in popularity. In dozens of ways they are served at soda fountains, and as a home cure for nervousness and indigestion they have no equal. They may be broken into a glass of milk, coffee, or lemon juice.

The Daily Menu.

BREAKFAST. Bananas. Omelet with minced ham. Popovers. LUNCHEON. Coffee. Cold roast beef with horseradish. Rice olives. Boston brown bread. Rice fritters, orange sauce. Tea. DINNER: Clam soup. Broiled lamb chops. Green peas. Fried egg plant. Dandelion greens. Coffee. Brown Betty.
