PRESS CLUB TO BUILD PALACE

New York Newspaper Writers Will Erect a Twelve-Story Building.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

New York, April 23.—The New York Press club, of which John A. Hennessy is president, has ratified the action of its building committee for the improvement of the plot recently purchased at the northwest corner of Spruce and William streets with a 12-story structure, the major portion of which will be used exclusively by the club.

The tenants of the present buildings have been notified to vacate by May 1, when it is expected to begin work on the clubhouse. The project, including the cost of the ground, with complete furnishings, will represent an investment of about $250,000, and it is planned to install features which will make it one of the unique buildings in the downtown business section.

The first three or four floors will be rented as stores and offices, while the upper part will be exclusively for the use of the club. A large auditorium will occupy one of the floors, another will be given up to a complete gymnasium, and two floors will be set aside for dormitories. There will also be billiard and pool parlors, bowling alleys and a roof garden. The top floor will be used as a kitchen and service rooms for a dining club, which it is said will rival in appointments any similar institution downtown. There will also be a private dining-room for ladies. The membership of 525 will doubtless be largely increased before the clubhouse is completed.

TOBACCO TAGS BRING FINE PRESENTS

Tobacco Company Redeeming Tags From Many Brands.

According to reports from the local dealers in tobacco more people are saving tobacco tags than ever before in the history of the giving of presents in exchange for tobacco tags. This tremendous increase in tag saving is due to the action of the American Tobacco Company in offering a remarkable list of valuable presents in return for tags from various popular tobaccos.

Such brands as Master Workman, J. T., Horse Shoe, Granger Twist, Standard Navy, Sailor's Pride, Old Statesman, and about a dozen others, bear tags which can be exchanged for presents. An idea of what can be accomplished by so far-reaching a cooperative system is gathered from such sample offers as the giving of an English Steel Razor for only 50 tags.

Reports in the tobacco trade indicate that dealers throughout the country are laying in stocks of presents in order to be able to meet the rising boom in tobacco tag saving. In places where the dealers are not supplied with presents, the American Tobacco Company is redeeming by mail—tag-savers selecting the presents they wish from a free catalog.

You Are Not Held Up

Any more in prices. We pulled out of the old-style piecework and adopted the new system, "Sectional Work," now insisted on by the best fashion companies of the world to be the modern way of tailoring: better work and for less money. Each man is employed by the week and kept on one thing (sleeves for instance), thereby giving better results. It enables us to reduce the price of making; give better workmanship, a bigger volume of business, which means a saving of $10 to $15 to you. Our fine line of exclusive Scotch and English woolens that were made to order from $40 to $60 will now be $30 to $50. $5,000 stock to select from.

Attorney for K. Sumida, a Japanese cook found guilty last week by a jury in the United States circuit court on a charge of importing women to this country filed a motion this morning for a new trial. The motion is made on the grounds that there were several errors in law in the first trial and that there was insufficient evidence to justify a verdict of guilty.

We call attention to our choice line of Confirmation Suits in Long and Short Trouser Styles.

SEE THE FAT SLIDE

Vanishes Away as If by Magic by Simply Taking a Doctor's Prescription.

There have probably been more attempts made to cure fatty degeneracy and the tendency of people to put on fat than for any other annoyance. But the great majority of the cures demand harsh and cruel dieting, such as the drinking of doubly skimmed milk, undergoing torturesome, painful exercise, etc., and then do not accomplish the result without greatly impairing the strength of the body. As to patent medicines—we will say nothing. A gentlewoman who has been taking faithfully three times a day and before bedtime the Marmola Prescription says: "After a few days I could fairly see the fat slide. It vanished away and I now am strong and muscular and my nerves are in far better shape than they were. My digestion is better, I breathe freer, and have more desire for work and pleasure. Notwithstanding all this, I weigh 24 pounds less than I did a month ago."

The Marmola Prescription calls for the following three ingredients, which can be had at any drug store for a trifling sum: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ ounces Syrup Simplex. In these days when there is so much substitution going on, it is as well to see that you get Marmola in the original package, and then you have ample guarantee that for sheer merit of goodness there is nothing to equal it. Don't confound the Marmola Prescription with anything for which similar claims are put forth. It is in no sense a patent medicine. It is a doctor's prescription.

THE PLAY

Heilig—"The District Leader."

By D. S.

Tears at a musical comedy drama? Tears right in the midst of laughter? A wave of mirth overlapped by subtler feelings that bring the 'kerchiefs to the women's eyes when rollicking fun is at its height? What a paradox. At the same time how refreshing from the ordinary run of musical comedy aspirations, for "The District Leader" is strong on comedy and light on drama and extraordinarily well seasoned in music.

But the tears. Back a row and over to the right I saw a handkerchief raised. Then another. To the left the same tactics. Fred Truesdell, after giving a realistic presentation of the visions of an opium fiend, was singing "What's the Use of Dreaming?" The limelight was thrown on his horrible face, the house was dark, the audience fascinated. A silence one could feel added to the grotesqueness of the situation and augmented one of the clearest and most impressive tenor voices heard on a local stage in a long, long time.

If there was one deep breath drawn during Truesdell's exquisite, swinging rhythm it was not strong enough to be recorded. All the drama of the entire play was centered in this one hugely pleasing and melancholy song. No wonder there were humid eyes among the gentler sex.

Ergo, there is a reason for "The District Leader." The press agents promised one, but, of course, no one hardly expected it. In fact, there is that one and several others the press agents said nothing about, among them a gunny-sack political plot, brought to an amusing denouement, a bevy of pretty girls, and—Ethel Dovey.

Miss Dovey may not lead the "district," but she certainly leads her company without a struggle. She is a rare combination of the childish grace and beauty found in Marguerite Clark with the animation and bubbling mirth of Mary Marble. True, she hasn't the latter's laugh—no one else in the world has—but she has one of her own coinage and it suited the audience at the Heilig last night immensely.

Albert Denier, a country editor with a fondness for milk—in punches—and Frank Weed, who has lots of money to bet—in his mind—didn't lose a minute after they hit the stage in starting a laugh which subsided only during the brief intervals they were not present to keep it alive. For the portrayal of two ancient boys with a "still" they have won the Louisiana milk ticket.

To refer to Truesdell again. He is the hero, clever, and he sang his way straight to the heart of every woman in the house. There is that something in his magnetic, fetching voice that penetrates to a point right back of the wishbone. The men liked him, too, for they knew it was good music though it's a safe wager that the majority didn't know the difference between art and ragtime, and didn't care.

Except for a palpable desire to look pretty, Ward De Wolfe, a cub reporter, acquitted himself well. Of course as a cub reporter he is wholly impossible as any newspaper man can readily attest, but he kept a goodly portion of attention to himself and was worthy of the trust.

Other members of the cast were seen to advantage and for the chorus, be it said, it sings with lusty voice and exceptionally well.

As a whole the play is a radical departure from the usual run of comedy mixed with music and is worthy of crowded houses during the balance of its engagement. It caught last night's audience with the rise of the curtain and through three lively acts kept those in front of the footlights in a merry-go-round of genuine pleasure. There will be a matinee Saturday afternoon with the closing performance in the evening.

BOXTON TELLS STORY OF TROLLEY BRIBERY

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, April 23.—When the Ford trial was resumed this morning ex-Supervisor Charles Boxton, one of the first boodlers to confess, and who was trapped while taking a bribe, again took the stand, his testimony not having been finished when court adjourned Wednesday. Boxton was the eighth member of the boodle board to appear on the stand, having been preceded by Daniel Coleman, for the alleged bribery of whom Ford is on trial, James L. Gallagher, J. J. Furey, C. J. Harrigan, Max Mamlock, James F. Kelly and Edward Walsh.

The testimony of all these witnesses was practically identical, all admitting that Gallagher had paid them to vote in favor of an overhead trolley franchise.

The REALM of FEMININE

Woman's Work.

THE day has gone by when the profession of housewifery may be considered purely a matter of enthusiasm and inspiration. It is by this time "borne in," as the old-fashioned phrase goes, upon the mind even of the other sex, that as a career for women it offers unlimited opportunities for the exercise of all the knowledge that has been gained from the laboratory, the classroom and the trade school. That it requires a certain amount of the learned professions and some of the unlearned trades, while as a field for the exercise of all the virtues it has no equal.

The business man needs unlimited patience, exactness in detail, and a keen foresight for contingencies—the housewife needs all this and more. The business woman must meet discouragement, has need for a store of confidence, must build for the future; and so must her sister at home, rearing men and women for the world's needs.

It is very much the habit of the woman collegian to take herself and her accomplishments seriously. Much more than a man, she views her education as a responsibility and throws herself into the work of alleviating the world's condition with feverish energy.

One has only to consider the difference between the way in which a man takes his club life and the way a woman takes hers to see the difference. A man's club is for the sole purpose of ministering to his ease and comfort. He expects to find the material comforts waiting at his elbow, and to have no further responsibility than to reach out and take them. He may travel to Timbuctoo (if that is still on the map) or to Zambesi, and on his return he expects to walk in and take his customary chair and to have the waiter know what kind of a cigar he wants. And if these things are not forthcoming he is hurt.

A woman's club exists, almost without exception, as a key by which she may unlock the stores of the world's knowledge, or as a lever by which she may help the world along a bit on its way. Comfort she does not expect, ease she forswears, material wants she excludes; what she wants is to cultivate her own patch or to help her neighbors cultivate theirs.

And as this is her temperament, and as the possession of a right to enter into the world's activities is new to her, she has made something of a furore of her contribution to the outside work of the world. The whole world has looked on with interest at the unaccustomed sight of women entering the professions, building bridges, planning aqueducts, voting for United States senator, or planning the mural decorations of public buildings. She has taken herself seriously, and all the world has had perforce to do the same.

You may say that we are straying a long way from the text, but we are coming back to it.

It was the dignity of home-making, wasn't it? Well, the remarkable thing about it is that with all her zeal for doing the same kind of work in the world that a man does, and with all the demonstration of her ability in that line, the fact began to make itself felt that while she was doing men's work for them her own work was suffering. That is, it was not receiving proportionately the amount of interest it deserved, and a reaction set in toward the kind of training that would enable a woman to do a woman's work better than it had ever been done before.

This is the hopeful thing about the establishment in women's colleges of departments of home economics, of the same sort of a department even in the high schools and trade schools of the country.

The reasoning is this—if a woman can do so well with a man's kind of work what may she not accomplish in lines for which by nature and by temperament she is peculiarly fitted?

It is the difference between a woman's work well done and ill done that makes the gathering place of the family a boarding house or a home. It means the difference between children making a home circle, gently tolerant, self-sacrificing and affectionate, or a collection of cranky individuals.

In a word, it is the furthering of the world's work in its highest capacity, in the making of character, that is peculiarly woman's work, and it is more important than many high bridges or many laws. Men can still do these things, but no one but a mother can develop the best things in her children, and the world needs character more than it needs bridges.

To Clean the Refrigerator.

TO cleanse the whole receptacle at least once a week is imperative, and this does not mean merely wiping off the shelves with a wet cloth. That should be done every other day in hot weather, but a real cleaning means taking out all the food, removing the shelves and washing with strong ammonia or other disinfectant in the water.

Every refrigerator has a drain to carry off the melting ice, and none is alike. The same principle, however, applies to all; there is a trap, usually just below the ice compartment, to catch dirt there and prevent its clogging the pipe lower down. This trap disjoints or comes out easily so that cleaning is simplified.

To proceed properly with the work of cleaning, all the food should be removed, and if meat or anything of the kind happens to have been kept several days on one dish, put it on a fresh plate. This will help to keep it sweet longer. Take out all the shelves if they can be removed.

The ice compartment should be emptied, and there are usually a couple of under plates, as it were, sheets of tin or zinc in this. These, too, should be taken out and washed.

When the place is empty, have a tea kettle filled with boiling water made very strong with ammonia, and slowly pour this down through the drain. This is most important and should be done oftener than once a week to prevent stoppage. If there is any obstruction in the pipe the water may not go through, though, as a rule, it will make its way, grease being the usual obstacle, which boiling water melts.

After the water has all gone through, or if there is a stoppage, remove the trap and wash that again under hot water. Get rid of the obstruction if there is one, and be sure the whole drain is sweet and free when the work on it is finished.

Then, with a pan of hot water and a cloth, with plenty of soap, wash the whole inside of the refrigerator, wipe with a dry cloth and let it stay open a few minutes to dry thoroughly and avoid mildew. All this work should be done as quickly as possible that the cold air stored may not be entirely lost.

The shelves are put into the sink and washed there, dried and put into the air a few minutes before being replaced.

In the ice compartment only milk, cream and butter should be kept, and all should be tightly closed. A small stone crock is the best for butter, filling it each day or every other day from the main supply.

To keep a lump of charcoal in each compartment of the refrigerator, renewing it every week, is a simple and excellent way of disinfecting.

In the Kitchen.

SALAD Dressing Without Oil—Cream a small cup of butter and stir into it the yolks of three eggs. Mix together one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt and quarter of a teaspoonful of cayenne and add to the butter and egg. Stir in slowly, instead of oil, one cup of cream and add the juice of one lemon and half a cup of vinegar.

Fine Honey Cakes.—One pint of cold hominy, two eggs, a saltspoonful of butter, melted. Break up the hominy fine with a fork and add salt and butter. Beat the eggs, whites and yolks separately, add the yolks first and then the whites, and either fry them brown in a little butter or drop by spoonfuls on buttered plates and bake brown in a quick oven.

PRINCESS GOES TO KING'S HOME

Daughter of Former Crown Princess Louise Returns to Father at Dresden.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Berlin, April 23.—The home coming of the little Princess Monica Pia, youngest daughter of King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, and his former wife, now Signora Toselli, was made the occasion of an extraordinary demonstration in Dresden.

King Frederick brought the princess to Dresden himself and was welcomed at the railroad station by 10,000 people. The crown prince, his brother, Prince Frederick Christian, and the Princesses Margaret and Alice were also at the station to greet their father and sister. The spectators gave the little princess an enthusiastic welcome and many threw bouquets into the open carriage in which King Frederick and Princess Monica Pia drove through the streets to the palace. The scene was one of the most remarkable ever witnessed in Dresden.

The triumphant arrival of the princess ends a four and one half years' struggle for possession of the child. The princess was born after the sensational elopement of her mother, then Crown Princess Louise, with M. Giron, a Belgian tutor. King Frederick had made many attempts to secure her by force as well as by persuasion. Two years ago, when the crown princess was living at Florence, attempts were made to have her surrendered to the German envoy at Rome, but they were unsuccessful.

When the ex-crown princess married Toselli, an Italian pianist, in London last fall, detectives were sent to London by the king of Saxony with instructions to kidnap the princess, but this mission also failed. Realizing that he could not succeed by force or strategy, the king opened negotiations with his former wife, the result being that the princess formally surrendered the child.

By the terms of the agreement arrived at, Signora Toselli is to have possession of the child several weeks each year and an annual interview with her other children, as well as an income of $10,000 a year for life.

London, April 23.—The customary dramatic festival was held at Stratford-on-Avon today in celebration of Shakespeare's birthday anniversary. The old-world town was the Mecca for hundreds of admirers and devotees of the immortal bard, among the number being many celebrated literary and dramatic lights.

At present the various Shakespearean societies throughout the country are engaged in plans for the erection of a memorial which it is proposed to set up to commemorate the tercentenary of his death, which will occur in 1916. It is proposed to raise $1,000,000, of which half is to be spent on the monument. A fine site in London has been selected for the monument in Park Crescent, adjoining Regent's park and looking down the imposing vista of Portland Place.
