WEATHER REPORT

The storm yesterday over the middle Missouri valley is now central over the upper Mississippi valley, and the remarkably low barometer reading 28.96 inches is noted at St. Paul, Minnesota. The disturbance, although of great intensity, has not been accompanied by a very heavy precipitation. Rain, however, has been general in all the northern states and provinces from the Rocky mountains east to the middle Atlantic states. A high pressure area of considerable strength overlies the north Pacific states and fair weather prevails on the Pacific slope, with unusually low temperatures. A heavy frost occurred this morning in southern Oregon and a light frost in the Willamette valley and sound country. East of the Cascade mountains sharp frosts occurred nearly everywhere.

The indications are for fair weather in this district tonight and Sunday. Light frosts will occur again tonight and the temperatures will rise Sunday.
