WEATHER REPORT

The high area that made its appearance over the northern California coast last evening has moved northward and now overlies western Oregon. It has developed in the meantime into a high area of pronounced character. A depression which is central this morning over British Columbia has caused light rains during the night over northwestern Oregon and western Washington. East of the mountains fair weather prevailed. No frosts were reported, and temperatures over eastern Oregon, eastern Washington and Idaho were considerably higher than yesterday morning. The storm noted over the upper lakes on Saturday has remained practically stationary. It appears to be slowly losing energy, though general rains continue to fall over the entire eastern portion of the country from the Mississippi valley to the Atlantic coast.

The indications point to fair weather tonight and Tuesday over this entire forecast district, with frosts tonight. It will probably be cooler east of the Cascade mountains tonight.
