

POLITICS A GOOD GAME IN WASCO

Democracy Prepared to Interest G. O. P. With Winning Chances.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
The Dalles, Or., May 1.—From present indications Wasco county politics will not prove uninteresting at the general election in June. John Gavin, an attorney at The Dalles and well known in Wasco county, has come out on the Democratic ticket as a candidate for district attorney for Wasco and Crook counties. He will be opposed to Fred Wilson, present deputy district attorney, who is the Republican candidate.
It is rumored that George C. Blakeley is seriously thinking of coming out on the Democratic ticket and running for county judge, against A. E. Lake, the present incumbent, who is a candidate for reelection on the Republican ticket. Mr. Blakeley has twice been elected county judge in this county and both times has defeated strong Republican candidates, although the county was strongly Republican. Both Lake and Blakeley are very well known throughout the county and if Blakeley comes out there is sure to be one of the hardest fought contests Wasco county has ever seen.
There are two Democratic candidates for representative, Morse and Woodcock, both on Statement No. 1, opposing Dr. Dodds on no statement, and Carter on Republican voters' choice, and as the county is quite strongly in favor of Statement No. 1 there promises to be a hard fight on representative.
For these four positions the Republicans will certainly have no walk-over, especially if the Democrats, who in Wasco county are in the ratio of one Democrat to every two and a half Republicans, can center their vote on their candidates and win over a few Republican votes.

LA GRANDE ELECTS SATURDAY OFFICERS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
La Grande, Or., May 1.—The La Grande Entertainment and Market Day association, the official name of the organization formed to promote closer and pleasanter relations between the business interests of the city and the surrounding communities, has elected permanent officers, who will serve at least for the next five months, that being the time for which subscriptions were made. The directors are: Mac Wood and F. D. Haisten, prominent merchants; E. Currey, publisher of the Evening Observer, and T. J. Scroggins, assistant cashier in one of the local banks; O. A. Coffin, who has been identified with the movement from the first, secretary.

R. L. REED OF SILVERTON DEAD

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Silverton, Or., May 1.—R. L. Reed, proprietor of a barbershop in this city, died of consumption at his home on Water street yesterday, after an illness of several months. The funeral will be conducted by the Knights of Pythias lodge tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Reed was born near Silverton and spent most of his life here, except a few years, when he served in the Philippines. He was 33 years of age.

SOCIETY

by Dpusilla Drew

A brilliant assemblage, indeed, gathered last evening at the handsome new Masonic temple to give aid to the Baby home. The ballroom was crowded with handsomely gowned women and with men who added their support to this worthy charity. The Knights Templar were the hosts and they had attended to all the details so that a delightful evening resulted. Over 1,000 people attended and enjoyed the entertainment in the ballroom, the cardrooms or the reception-rooms.
The ball in the beautiful ballroom on the second floor was opened with a 15-minute drill by some of the Knights. Some of the emblems of the order were worked out in the figures and carried for great applause. When the dancing began the elaborate costumes of the Knights mingling with the rest of the company gave a striking bit of variety. The emblem of the order, the Maltese cross and crossed swords, was effectively displayed in huge proportions on one wall with the background of white lighted with yellow incandescents. The emblems were shown also in elaborate cover designs on the programs.
Frasp's orchestra and band played exceptionally well and responded generously to encores. The retiring rooms opening from the ballroom, handsome in red and black furnishings, were well filled between dances. Punch and lemonade were served in an adjoining alcove. In the large rooms on the fourth floor, card tables were arranged and many spent the evening with five hundred and bridge. An elaborate supper was served under the direction of H. C. Bowers of the Portland hotel, in the banquet hall on the third floor. Wilder's string orchestra played a pleasing program in the evening, starting early in the evening. The dance program downstairs was pleasantly interspersed with numbers by Wilder's male chorus.
The patronesses for the evening were: Mrs. T. B. Wilcox, Mrs. Richard Koehler, Mrs. Helen Ladd, Mrs. Charles Francis Beebe, Mrs. W. B. Ayer, Mrs. Walter J. Burns, Mrs. William Warren, Mrs. J. Hill, Mrs. J. J. Robertson, Mrs. H. W. Goddard and Mrs. L. W. Sitton. Working in conjunction with the committee were: Eminent Sir Louis G. Clarke, chairman; Eminent Sir Charles V. Cooper, secretary; Eminent Sir George E. Hill, Eminent Sir William A. Cleland, Eminent Sir Brydon H. Nicol, Eminent Sir William J. Fullam, Sir John G. Mack, Sir Henry C. Pittock. The following Sir Knights were members of the reception committee:
E. D. Freeland, eminent commander; D. G. Tomasini, generalissimo; H. L. Bancroft, captain-general; George H. Hill, prelate; W. V. Amosbury, senior warden; H. J. Boyd, junior warden; J. W. Cook, treasurer; W. S. Macrum, recorder; William B. Mackenzie, senior A. Avery, standard bearer; H. L. Pittock, warden; George F. Robertson, captain of guard; Joseph McClelland, guard; R. V. Smith, guard; A. Van Kirk, sentinel.
The floor committee was composed of the following: Charles V. Cooper, chairman; Harvey Beckwith, Joseph W. Hill, Harry A. Sarson, Frank H. Stinson, Albert H. Willett, Elmer B. Colwell, Deodat G. Tomasini, Arnold S. Rothwell, Hugh J. Boyd, Benjamin B. Beckman, Herman Wittenberg, Robert S. Farrell, Frank W. Ariss, Edwin D. Jorgensen, Harry D. Story, Victor A. Avery, Frank Robertson, William B. Mackenzie, William C. Bristol, William Davis, assisted by the following, representing the Baby home: Raymond Wilcox, Hawley Hoffman, Donald Munro, Irving Webster, William Warren, Tom Robertson, Elliott Corbett and Gerald Beebe.
