WEATHER REPORT

The pressure is falling over northwestern Washington, although no distinct depression has as yet made its appearance in that vicinity. A high pressure area overlies southern Oregon. Light rains occurred over western Washington during the last 12 hours, but elsewhere over this forecast district fair weather prevailed. A light frost was reported from Roseburg. The plateau depression has drifted southeastward and is now central over the panhandle of Texas. It is very energetic and general precipitation is reported this morning over the surrounding states. The precipitation was particularly heavy at Denver, Colorado, where the recorded amount was 1 inch. Snow was still falling at that station this morning at time of report. Heavy rains also occurred over the Ohio valley. Temperatures over the entire country, excepting the gulf states, were below the seasonal average.

Showers are indicated tonight and Tuesday over western Oregon and western Washington. East of the mountains fair weather is expected over eastern Oregon and southern Idaho, with probably frost tonight, while over eastern Washington and northern Idaho increasing cloudiness, with possibly showers, is probable.
