

BODIES IN HOTEL RUINS

Firemen Search for Victims of Avelina Hotel Fire—Ten Known to Have Perished in Flames—Many Injured.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 Fort Wayne, Ind., May 4.—Scores of firemen are today searching the ruins of the Avelina hotel, where between 20 and 30 bodies are thought to be buried as the result of the fire which destroyed the hostelry yesterday. Ten are known to have perished, but early today no additional remains of victims had been found.

In various hospitals throughout the city several guests of the hotel are suffering with broken limbs, internal injuries and bruises and cuts sustained in leaping from windows or in being trampled upon in the wild rush for safety.

Pathetic scenes are being enacted today about the heaps of ruins by men and women whose missing friends and relatives are thought to be buried in the debris. There is no hope of getting an accurate list of the missing and dead today, for the hotel register was burned up and there are no other means of getting this information at once. Chief of Police Anckenbruck said today that as far as he can learn the death list may reach 40, although there is no way of confirming this.

The rescuers are working under great difficulties. Before they can expect to reach any more bodies, they must remove pieces by piece, great piles of brick and charred timbers. The fire started at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning in an elevator shaft and a few minutes later the old frame building, which was erected 50 years ago, was a mass of flames. It burned so rapidly that those who perished were hemmed in by the flames and burned alive.

EUGENE CRIMINALS CONFESS AT HEPPNER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Heppner, Or., May 4.—Sheriff Shutt and Deputy A. M. Malory arrested two young men, Fred Craig and Cy Jones, in the Elkhorn restaurant in this place yesterday afternoon who are charged with assaults committed at Eugene, Oregon, about April 1. These men, in company with three or four others, it is charged, assaulted three young girls. One of the men was released for lack of testimony and two are held under bonds now at Eugene. Craig and Jones evaded arrest and have been at large ever since.

They admitted their guilt to Sheriff Shutt when arrested.

Tired of Living.
 (United Press Leased Wire.)
 Los Angeles, May 4.—John Bradley, 38 years old, killed himself this morning by taking strychnine. Shortly before he died Bradley became conscious and told the hospital attendants that he was tired of living.

LEWISTON HAND IN HAND WITH PORTLAND

Business Men's Excursion to Idaho City Is Successful in Cementing Interests of Great Producing Territory and Seaport.

The Lewiston excursion returned yesterday, every member of the party enthusiastic and willing again to celebrate anything that Lewiston wants celebrated.

Notwithstanding the soft roadbed on the new line the train pulled into Lewiston on time, and the air was noisy with the screams of every whistle that Lewiston could muster and it mustered no inconsiderable number. A reception composed of business men was at the depot with two bands, and without a by-your-leave they rounded up the Portlanders and marched them in a body to the Commercial club, where ex-Senator Helfelt, who is now mayor, made the welcoming address. His speech brimmed over with the kind of feeling that made his Portland hearers believe Lewiston and Portland were the so far as all their material interests were concerned.

Taken to View Orchards.
 The party was put aboard automobiles and carriages—again without a by-your-leave. In fact there was not an opportunity all day long for the individual visitor to exercise his own initiative—and whizzed away for a view of the city and of the Lewiston orchards on the bench just back of the city. Here were miles and miles of an almost level plain laid out as perfectly in streets and alleys as the most metropolitan of cities. Every lot contained five acres of ground covered with young fruit trees. Every lot was fenced with a uniform woven wire fencing.

Many of the hydrants connecting with the buried irrigation system had been turned open and made fountains of water perhaps 30 feet or more in height. The water company, which is a Portland concern financed by Walter F. Burrell and associates, had erected a booth where wines, grown on the property, were served. Many a Portlander there learned for the first time that at Lewiston in Idaho they grow grapes, and after tasting the wine was a little surprised when told that the grapes from which the wine was made had taken prizes at the biggest fairs against the best grapes from California. On some of the orchards the names of the owners had been painted on white board signs and many of them were names of Portlanders.

In the afternoon the reception committee provided motors and carriages for a visit to the Vineland-Clarkston district where 3,000 persons live well on earnings from 2,000 acres of land, an average of less than four acres to the family. It speaks something for the fertility of black dirt when men are content with the product of only four acres.

The official name of the celebration was the "Blossom Carnival" but not a blossom was to be seen. Providence this year had not waited for the first of May, or for the opening of the Riparia cut-off. But there was a world of young fruit everywhere, the apricots and almonds already forming.

Every automobile and every carriage stopped a moment before one pleasant cottage where lived an old couple, who are said to be making $1,000 a year from their single acre of orchard ground.

Business Interests Cemented.
 In the evening a smoker was given by the reception committee to the visitors, at which ex-Senator Helfelt presided and speeches were called for and delivered by many of the Portland delegation, who with nice phrases cemented the union of Portland's and Lewiston's business interests.

"A navigable river from the Grande Ronde to the Pacific" was the slogan of the meeting held Saturday evening. Portland business men were guests of honor and the speakers all dwelt on the vast importance of the opening of the Snake and Columbia rivers.

W. W. Cotton excited the utmost enthusiasm by the prediction that Lewiston is destined to be the great inland distributing point, and ultimately a large city. James E. Babb and E. H. Libby made welcoming addresses.

F. N. Deal urged the vast importance of utilizing the power in the rivers. "From their headwaters to their mouths the rivers are living dynamoes," he said. His appeal for a united stand to obtain improvement of the great waterways was received with enthusiasm. Swigert, W. W. Cotton and Herman Wittenberg followed with brief addresses.

While trains will not begin running regularly on the Riparia cut-off until the next wheat crop is ready to move, the opening of the road is expected to give immediate stimulus to this region.

NIGHT RIDERS RUIN TOBACCO OUTLOOK

Lexington Ky., May 4.—Through the methods of incendiarism and intimidation, adopted by the Society of Equity and the "night riders," the prevention of the raising of a crop of tobacco in Kentucky in 1908 seems a certainty. It is estimated that not more than 10,000,000 pounds will be raised in the whole state, where usually more than 150,000,000 pounds are grown.

Many tenants are leaving Kentucky because they say they cannot make a living for their families unless they raise tobacco.

FATE OF ORCHARD KNOWN TOMORROW

Boise, Idaho, May 4.—Harry Orchard's fate will be decided by the Idaho state board of pardons at a special ses-alon tomorrow. The recommendation that the sentence of death be commuted, made by Judge Wood at the time he pronounced sentence, will be presented by Orchard's attorney and it is believed no one will be present to protest against such action. Orchard is sentenced to be hanged May 15.

It is understood Orchard himself is opposed to a commutation of his sentence.

BOY THIEF DENIES STEALING DIAMONDS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 San Francisco, May 4.—Hoping to fasten upon him the theft of $4,000 worth of diamonds at the fashionable Xavier apartment-house, the police today arrested Leon Applegate, 23 years old, a former bell boy at the apartment-any suspect being arrested. Finally the police were called to investigate. Applegate was arrested on suspicion of stealing a watch and several articles of jewelry but denied any knowledge of the diamond theft. The diamonds were stolen on the night of April 3 from the rooms of Leonard Hammond, son of a millionaire lumberman.
