

MARTIN READS NEWS IN PAPER

At noon yesterday a man with scratches on his face was standing at the bar of the Turn Hall cafe, Fourth and Yamhill streets. One man in the saloon, a bartender, knew his name.

The first edition of The Journal, telling of the new developments in the Wolff murder, had just appeared. A customer came into the saloon and stood at the bar, holding before him the front page.

Looking over the shoulder of the reader, the man with the scratched face saw blazoned in black headlines the name of the man wanted by the police for the murder—Edward H. Martin, his own name.

The bartender who knew him was too busy to look at the newspaper, the suspected murderer was within a few feet of him. Seeing that no one was paying any attention to him, Martin turned and quietly left the saloon.

The bartender thereby missed a good chance at receiving the reward of $1,000 offered by the county court.

Only a short time before three detectives hurried into the Turn Hall for a sandwich and a glass of beer. They were on the track of Martin, but knew him only by name. Martin watched them come and go.

It was formerly his habit to sit at a table facing the Yamhill street entrance, but though he had visited the place every day since the murder, it was noticed that for the past four or five days he took a new position, sitting at another table and with his back towards the door.

This would make it necessary for any one trying to identify him to take a table facing him and look at him in a poor light. Martin's favorite drink was eggnog.

The bartender with whom he became acquainted Martin said that while stationed near New York city his expenses as an army officer were $1,000 a year and his salary at that time but $1,500 a year.

While he never referred to the use of drugs personally, he told this acquaintance that he had been much in the society of a certain society woman in New York who was a glass of beer habit. From this it is supposed that he wished to infer she had taught him the use of opiates, as any one who saw Martin frequently could readily see that he was using a drug in some form.

ROCKPILE TERM FOR MARTIN EVEN IF HANDS CLEAN

Should the police decide that Edward H. Martin is not guilty of the murder of Nathan Wolff, the first-strict money-lender, they can sentence him to 150 days at Kelly's Butte under a stipulation which he and Judge Cameron signed March 25, 1907.

On that date Martin, accompanied by his father and Father McDevitt, appeared in the police court to answer a charge of having been out after hours and of being a drug fiend. He had been arrested at 4 o'clock on the morning of March 24 at Sixteenth and Davis streets, by Patrolman Lelsey, and his father, who had come on from New York to visit the son, told the court of the circumstances of his downfall at that time.

Young Martin, he said, had acquired the drug habit while he was a member of General Morrill's staff in Cuba. He had later returned to the United States and been on the staff of Major-General Corbin, but had had an altercation with General Corbin, and rather than submit to court martial, had resigned.

The elder Martin said he resided at 217 East One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, New York city.

Mr. Martin said he advised his son to go west in the hope that the change of climate and of his way of living might break the chains of the drug habit. So strong an appeal did he and Father McDevitt make for Martin that Judge Cameron agreed to allow the younger Martin to sign a stipulation agreeing to accept the sentence of 150 days on the rockpile if he came before the court again. The elder Martin returned to New York soon after his son's release.

"13" TO BE CAKE'S NUMBER ON THE BALLOT IN JUNE

The thirteen hoodoo is on the trail of H. M. Cake.

County Clerk Fields this morning received from the secretary of state a copy of the official ballot for state officers and United States senator. Cake is No. 13. There are plenty of superstitions in politics, and there is abundance of precedent for regarding 13 as a fatal handicap.

Most recently in mind is the fact that in the late primaries Senator Fulton was unlucky No. 13. As the 13 hoodoo was too much for Fulton, the superstitious ones are asking whether Cake will be able to overcome it. In the primaries Cake was No. 12. In the June election Governor Chamberlain will take No. 14.

Thirteen for Cake is not the result of a plot. At least no one has yet been able to figure out a plot. It just happened. Names are placed on the ballot in alphabetical order, and Cake gets 13 because he has a right to it, and no one else has.

VETERAN MINISTER PASSES TO REWARD

Rev. Thomas J. Harper Dies at Vancouver at 91—To Coast in 1852.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Vancouver, Wash., May 6.—Thomas J. Harper, one of the oldest residents of Washington and the first Protestant minister in western Washington, died at the home of his son, P. H. Harper, in this city last night at the advanced age of 91 years.

Death was due to old age and a cold contracted last Sunday.

Mr. Harper was born in Tennessee and in 1852 crossed the plains to Washington. He had previously been ordained as a Baptist minister and at once established a church on Puget sound. He is survived by five sons and five daughters. With his death is broken up a most remarkable family, he being the head of five generations. The oldest son, P. H. Harper, is 72 years old.

The funeral will be held from the Vancouver undertaking chapel Sunday. Interment will be in the City cemetery.

ATE ICE CREAM IN PORTLAND; IS DEAD

Case of Charles E. Stanton, a Vancouver Lad, Puzzles Physicians.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Vancouver, Wash., May 6.—Charles E. Stanton, the 14-year-old son of Henry Stanton, died at the family home, 114 East Tenth street, last night either from the effects of eating ice cream a week ago or from brain trouble.

Just what caused the death the attending physicians are unable to tell.

Young Stanton with a party of friends went to Portland a week ago to spend the day and while there ate a dish of ice cream. Soon afterward he was taken sick and did not regain full consciousness from that time until death came last night. While the sickness came on at once after eating the ice cream, the physicians do not fully believe he would not have lived so long as he did. Investigation proves that he had been working hard at school and the theory is advanced that it was brain trouble.

RATE WAR WILL BE HARD FOUGHT

Harriman Declares It Will Be Higher Rates or Lower Wages for Employees.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Chicago, May 6.—The rate war which is raging between the railroads and the shippers promises to be a bitter one.

In Chicago the fight against the advance in freight rates will be fought principally by the Chicago Association of Commerce, which represents nearly all the commercial interests in the city. The organization will hold a meeting today to plan opposition to the increase in the east at once, and to pave the way for similar action when the rates go up over the country.

It is said that E. H. Harriman declares it is either a case of boosting rates or cutting the salaries of the railroad employees. The railroads figure that the increase, under the present tonnage, will net them $200,000,000. But the shippers say the roads evidently have not stopped to consider one fact, that in the case of an increase of rates the tonnage will decrease at a remarkable rate.

NEVER HEARD OF ROOSEVELT

Delaware Man Learns There Are Such Things as Cameras and Automobiles.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Georgetown, Del., May 6.—James T. Calhoun, 58 years old and a farmhand living 16 miles from this place, has just learned that Theodore Roosevelt is president of the United States and that there are such things in existence as cameras, airplanes and automobiles.

Making his first trip on steam cars and his first visit to Georgetown, Calhoun arrived in town today very much bewildered. He said that he was all tangled up and that he did not know whether he was walking on his head or feet half the time. He gasped when some one tried to take a picture of him.

"Ain't taking any chances with those darn things," remarked Calhoun as he leaped to one side, expecting the camera to belch forth a few six-pounders. When some one in the group of men standing around him asked him if he had any definite views on Roosevelt's policies, Calhoun calmly replied that he had once heard someone speak the Greek language and that that sounded very much like it.

"What?" said a listener. "haven't you heard about Roosevelt?" The farmer had just remarked that he had not when an automobile dashed by. This was too much for Calhoun. He's going right back to the farm.

He firmly believes that the story about airplanes is a fake.

OHIO INDORSES PEERLESS ONE

(United Press Leased Wire.) Columbus, Ohio, May 6.—Through the efforts of Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, W. J. Bryan today secured the endorsement of the Democratic state convention. Johnson lined up men and succeeded in squelching all opposition. The platform adopted is devoted almost exclusively to state issues.

13 VICTIMS

(Continued from Page One.) Guinness and that he was insanely jealous of Heltegreen. About the time that the money arrives from Aberdeen, the police that Heltegreen was wanted for murder in South Dakota. Investigation proved this story to be untrue.

Lamphere Threatened Woman. Lamphere's arrest after the burning of the Guinness home was the result of charges made against him by Mrs. Guinness shortly after the fire. She complained of the man's attentions to her and said that although she had discharged him he continued to hang around her farm. She asserted that Lamphere had threatened to burn her home and said she was afraid of him. It has also been learned that a few days before her death Mrs. Guinness made her will, which included provisions for her burial.

After Heltegreen's body was discovered in the sack the police dug deeper and unearthed the skeleton of a woman, who had been buried directly beneath the place where Mrs. Guinness's body lay. This skeleton is believed to be the remains of Jennie Olson, an adopted daughter of Mrs. Guinness, who disappeared September 1, 1907. At that time Mrs. Guinness said the girl had gone to Los Angeles to make her home with relatives.

Mrs. Guinness' two husbands died under suspicious circumstances. The first, Max Sorenson, was insured for $8,500, and the last, Guinness, had $8,500 on his life.

The delivery of five large trunks at the Guinness farm during the past six months leads the detectives to believe that the place was a clearing house for a band of murderers who shipped the bodies of their victims there for burial. The entire farmyard is being dug up in the search and the officers are confident that they will find several more skeletons.

Three Men Disappear. Mrs. Cristoferson, who lived near the Guinness family, today reported today that a year ago she saw a strange man, wearing a fur overcoat, enter the Guinness home. He became friendly with Mrs. Guinness but later disappeared. After his disappearance, Mrs. Guinness wore the fur overcoat, explaining that the man had given it to her.

Shortly afterward, Mrs. Cristoferson stated, a large man wearing a heavy red mackinac appeared at the Guinness home. Three weeks later he disappeared. Mrs. Guinness explaining that he had answered one of her matrimonial advertisements, but did not suit and left.

Two weeks later a lumberman who was reportedly from Wisconsin, went to the Guinness place and he disappeared a few days later—Mrs. Guinness explaining that she had dismissed him upon learning that he had two children, one of whom was a cripple.

The officers are confident the three men were murdered and that their bodies will be dug up on the farm.

Another theory advanced by the detectives is that the Guinness woman was alone in the terrible crimes. It was known that the woman frequently inserted matrimonial advertisements in the Chicago and Indianapolis papers, but apparently all of the men that answered
