WEATHER REPORT

The depression noted over Utah last evening remains practically stationery. It retains its energetic character and this morning general precipitation was reported from Utah, southern Idaho, western Montana and Wyoming. Snow was falling at time of observation this morning at Pocatello, Idaho. Temperatures in Nevada, Utah and southern Idaho were decidedly below the seasonal average, while in Wyoming and eastern Montana they were correspondingly above the normal. Clear skies prevailed in western Oregon and light frosts occurred at Portland and Roseburg. In western Washington the weather was generally cloudy. The Ohio valley disturbance is now passing off the New England coast. General rains over the entire northeastern portion of the country have attended this movement.

Fair weather is indicated for this entire district tonight and Sunday, excepting in southeastern Idaho, where showers are probable. Light frosts are expected in the interior of western Oregon and western Washington, and heavy frosts in eastern Oregon, eastern Washington and northern and southwestern Idaho. It will probably be warmer Sunday.
