

SENATE WILL BE ABLE TO AFFIRM COURT

John M. Gearin Declares It Is a Member's Personal Ability That Secures Useful Recognition, Not Affiliation With the Republican Majority.

"It is all rot and buncombe, the worst of all kind of round, partisanish."

This is the manner in which John M. Gearin, ex-United States senator from Oregon, looks upon the argument now being raised that a Democratic member has no influence or power in the Republican senate.

"Lambaste it as you will," continued Mr. Gearin, "the senate of the United States is composed, with possibly some half dozen exceptions, of great men. The biggest in the nation. The United States senate is the most democratic body in the world. It is conservative, it is true; it moves slowly, but a man in the senate is measured by his manhood, by his ability, his capability, his earnestness, his qualifications. If he measures up to the standard, if he is a big man, if he knows and is competent to work with the big men on big problems, he has recognition and power and influence. Politics is never discussed in the United States senate among the members. A man's position is determined just as are his religious beliefs. If a senator is a Democrat and a big man, if he knows, if he is capable, if he measures up with his colleagues, he is in the estimation and consideration of those colleagues a man for a fact. I have been there, have noted these things and I know."

What Mr. Gearin Accomplished.

Mr. Gearin represented the state of Oregon in the United States senate for two years and one half. In that length of time he did more for the state than any other new man who has ever represented the state accomplished in that same period. Working with Senator Fulton, the two were able to secure the largest appropriation for the state of Oregon ever given by congress. Senator Gearin since then has publicly stated that the assistance of Senator Fulton was invaluable in bringing to the aid of the state as it did support which could not otherwise have been secured. Senator Gearin, therefore, is qualified to talk of conditions in the United States senate. Being a man whose word has never been questioned, who stands high in the regard of the citizens of Oregon as a man of power and capability, much weight must necessarily be given to his statements.

"I think I am qualified to speak of the standing given a Democrat by the members of the United States senate," said a Democratic senator. "Mr. Gearin continued, 'As I said before, the United States senate is the most conservative of bodies, but it is at the same time the most democratic. When a new man enters the United States senate he is not asked whether he is a Democrat or a Republican. His certificate of election makes him a member of the club and he is measured up by his colleagues. If he meets the standard he is given recognition and has power."

"It is true that on questions of party the senate divides, but the line is drawn no farther. On questions of national import, on questions affecting a state, on problems of economic interest, on appropriations—on all these things the Democrat is given as much consideration as the Republican."

Personal Ability Counts.

"Senators do not gain recognition of the needs and wants of their state on party lines. They gain it in proportion to their capability. A senator does not go to the senate and say, 'I am a Republican and I want a large appropriation for the rivers and harbors of my state.' He goes to the senate and he says, 'Senator, my state needs aid for its harbors. It deserves it. It needs it now. It remains undeveloped. Congress ought to give it, and I want to talk to you about it.' It is only on party lines that the recognition of the senator that wins the recognition, not his politics."

"It is personal standing that wins recognition of the necessities of a state. It is the ability of a senator to make good in his grasp and understanding of national questions. In a word it is his manhood. If the man is big his influence is extensive. If he can reach the leaders of the senate and stand side by side with them in mental equipment and grasp, then he will be able to take his place with them and serve his state well, securing for it the aid that is insofar as it lies in the power of congress to give."

Democrat Not Helpless.

"Seniority of service means much to a senator. Experience is as necessary as the work of the United States senate as it is in any business. Acquaintance counts for much. This is true because the personal ability enters so largely into the usefulness and power of a senator."

"Once more I want to impress upon you that the old rule about the helplessness of a Democratic senator in the United States senate is all rot," concluded Mr. Gearin. "You can put it as you like, for you have been there and know. A senator's usefulness depends upon himself, not upon his party. It is only on party lines that questions that party enters into the consideration of an issue. There is no politics in politics. It is the question of the Columbia river bar. That is a question of economics bearing on the development of a state of the union. That is a question which affects the people of Oregon, and its prosperity. It is a business proposition and it is considered as such. It does not require a Republican to present this claim, but it requires a man, and the more capable he is, the bigger he is in the mental and the more tactful and diplomatic and shrewd, just in proportion as he possesses these qualities will he be able to make the thing that is the man, I say, and not the party that makes the great and useful member of the senate of the United States."

SPIRITUALISTS ROSE FORTUNE

Court Finds That Banker Was Insane When He Gave Money to Church.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Bloomington, Ill., May 9.—On the ground that Banker Crumbaugh was insane when he made out his will leaving $500,000 to the spiritualist church here, a jury which has been hearing the contest begun by his relatives today set the will aside.

The trial was very sensational, witnesses testifying that the spiritualists held fake seances to induce the banker to turn over his cash to them. At one of these seances a female medium put on the cloth over her eyes and Crumbaugh, that she was the long departed spirit of his dead son. The "spirit" called herself "Bright Eyes" and sent loving messages to Crumbaugh, directing him to leave all of his money to the spiritualists.

Don't Blow That Nose.

All the time, Wells' Inhaler will clear out instantly any cold and be convinced. 50c at the drugists.
