

Hornsilver Mining Shares 5 Cts. A piece

HORNSILVER IS WITHOUT QUESTION THE MOST PROMISING GOLD CAMP IN NEVADA TODAY, EXCEPT, PERHAPS, TONOPAH AND GOLDFIELD, AND

The TIGER BUTTE is the Most Promising Non-Shipping Mine in Hornsilver!

IF WE HAD A GALLOWS AND APPURTENANCES TIGER BUTTE WOULD BE SHIPPING, TOO.

It Would be Shipping Ore that Would Pay More than 1000 Per Cent on Every Dollar Invested in It—and that's True

Read the following from the Goldfield Tribune of May 8, to be had at the Oregon News company's, Sixth and Alder, or the news wagon, Sixth and Washington, and you will understand in a small way the stupendous interest the people of Nevada are manifesting in Hornsilver:

"Capt. J. F. Bradley, ex-sheriff, and also the only Republican in the state assembly from Esmeralda county, has struck it rich on the Red Top claim owned by the Great Western Gold Mining company at Hornsilver. He secured a lease on a block of the ground in a little gulch to the west of the main find some 800 feet, a few weeks ago. There were no surface croppings that look good to the average secker after a good thing. Ore was in evidence on the trend of the dyke east and west of him, and he surmised that a little depression in the earth would not cause that true fissure to change its course, and apparently wisely concluded that right in those depressions very high-grade ore would be found. His judgment was confirmed by assays made yesterday.

and as a result, that new little town of Hornsilver is growing so rapidly that nothing like it has ever been seen in this section of the country.

"One month ago today the first tent was pitched on the ground, and by actual count there were 210 frame and tent houses there yesterday. The news of a real mining camp has spread far and wide, and roads leading into the district are kept dusty by automobiles, stages and wagons loaded with all kinds of travelers and supplies from Goldfield.

"These in-going vehicles are met by others that are heavily laden, but moving more slowly, as the wagons are loaded with ore.

"The Bradley shaft is down only eighteen feet, and it is now being timbered. The wash was deep for that country and when the 4x7 shaft is timbered up, the work of sinking will be continued."

REFERRING AGAIN TO THE HORNSILVER DISTRICT, THE GOLDFIELD TRIBUNE SAYS:

That gold is where you find it is as true today as it was when King Solomon, the wise, gave utterance to the statement, several centuries ago. About two miles easterly of the Great Western mine, at Hornsilver, lies a gold belt bearing all the earmarks of famous gold producers.

The original point upon the face of nature, known as Lime Point, was so-called from a peculiar projection extending from the hills toward the low-lying desert, and containing a belt of white formation containing limestone. Since the rich strikes have been made in the vicinity of Lime Point, the possibly more appropriate name, of Hornsilver, has been given to the new town and district.

In the same easterly and westerly trend of the mineralized zone, and about one and one-half miles easterly of the Great Western shaft, the formation changes to a considerable extent, and the conditions are largely reversed. The gold belt referred to is a slate and lime contact, with well defined veins, showing upon the surface in many places 100 feet in width, and panning free gold all the way across.

Dr. Frances E. Williams, J. Prescott Dyos and P. L. Duffy have procured a lease upon block 4 of the Sunset claim of the Lime Point Gold Mining and Milling company's estate, comprising a block 300x600 feet, and have incorporated the Frances Lime Point Mining company, for the purpose of developing the lease. Upon this block of ground is an 80-foot shaft showing three feet of ore at the bottom, a general sample of the entire width carrying assay values of upwards of $30 a ton. Upon the same block, in a 40-foot shaft, the stringers return assay values from $85 to $105 per ton. The ore is strictly free milling, and by screening the ore the company expects to sack shipping grade within 30 days after mining operations are under way.

The company now has all arrangements made for the installing upon the property of a first class hoisting plant, which will be in charge of Superintendent P. L. Duffy, who is well known as one among the most proficient and economical mine operators of the Goldfield district, having for the past two years handled the Atlanta Boom Mining and Leasing company's operations on the Atlanta.

The company also owns a group of claims near Hornsilver. The officers of the company are W. B. Thomas, Jr., president; Dr. Frances E. Williams, vice-president; J. Prescott Dyos, secretary and treasurer, and P. L. Duffy, superintendent and mine manager.

ALL NEVADA NEWSPAPERS ARE BUBBLING OVER WITH HORNSILVER.

The camp is found on nearly every page. Its publicity is greater far than Goldfield's ever was, and

WITHIN A YEAR, IT IS FIRMLY BELIEVED, IT WILL BE THE BIGGEST MINING CAMP IN THAT GREAT STATE.

And now is the time to secure a holding there. There never will be such a chance again. Our officers in Goldfield declare that we must sell these 25,000 shares at ONCE, and to force that issue the price is cut from 12 cents to 5 cents each.

THIS SALE IS A MONUMENTAL SNAP FOR SOME ONE. IT IS ABSOLUTELY A CUT RATE PRICE IN GILT-EDGED MINING SHARES. IT IS HANDING OVER TO SOME ONE, OR SOME PEOPLE, THE NUCLEUS OF A FORTUNE FOR AN INFINITESIMAL SUM OF MONEY.

But we MUST have that hoist, or our mine is not worth the blast of a peddler's horn. And we are going to have it. People are buying these shares at 5 cents, and that right quickly. You would better call for your share at once.

FOR FOUR LONG YEARS WE HAVE BEEN DEVELOPING TIGER BUTTE.

We worked in the mine so long as we had a dollar and then in some other mine to get a fresh start. Now we have the ore and only lack capital to buy the gallows, or hoist, to bring the ore to the surface, and we will be shipping just as much as any of them.

WE NEED ONLY A LITTLE MONEY, AND ARE SELLING 25,000 SHARES OF STOCK AT 5 CENTS THE SHARE THAT WE MAY SPEEDILY RAISE THE REQUIRED FUND

The young men who found, developed and own the mine today, when the company was incorporated, took stock for every dollar due them, and these shares are on deposit in a Goldfield safe deposit vault, and never will be disturbed until the mine becomes a shipper of high grade ore. This solemn compact was entered into when it was discovered that Tiger Butte really was a valuable mining property, and will ever be adhered to. This exemplifies the value attached to the proposition by those best acquainted with its worth.

FEAR HIS POPULARITY

poration greed and his advocacy of more stringent laws in behalf of the people are avoided.

Governor Chamberlain says he is not surprised that he should be singled out and measured for defeat by the railroad interests of the state. Their enmity was aroused first, he declares, when he succeeded in effecting the passage of the fellow-servant law and thus gave railroad employees the right to sue the companies and secure damages for personal injuries when it was shown that the railroads had been negligent.

Angry Because of Criticisms.

"If they are working now to defeat me," he says, "it is because I have in the past berated them for not extending lines into central Oregon which for years has justly clamored for transportation facilities. Again, Harriman's enmity against me was aroused when at the irrigation congress at Sacramento I took a position demanding the regulation of the sale of railroad grant lands or in lieu of that their immediate forfeiture to the government, in reality advocating the same measure contained in the present resolutions now before congress."

"Since then and in fact throughout my present campaign I have not hedged on my advocacy of an eight-hour a day law, a railway liability law for the protection of railway employees, and greater powers for the restriction of the railroads through the interstate commerce commission. I am not surprised if the railroads now are bending their efforts to turn votes against me."

It is a question how far the corporate interests of the state will go in their attempt to defeat Governor Chamberlain in his race for the United States senate. The seal of approval which has been placed on his policies by a large majority of the people in every district he has visited in eastern Oregon precludes the possibility of the railroad interests working against him in the open. Should the corporations adopt any method but the present unhand-doned one it will result in turning votes in his favor instead of in the direction the railroads wish.

CHAMBERLAIN AT CONDON CLINCHES POPULAR SUPPORT

By Don F. Steffen.

Condon, Or., May 13.—Gilliam county's new courthouse was not half large enough last night to accommodate the large crowd that listened to the address of Governor Chamberlain here. Long before the governor was introduced the courtroom was crowded and the aisles and corridors in the halls filled to overflowing. Scores of people were turned away at the doors.

Governor Chamberlain found responsive audience in his declaration that Statement No. 1 and the people's determination that the state legislature shall obey the popular will is the one greatest issue before the voters in the present campaign. The people of Oregon must decide this time, he declared, whether they would elect men to the legislature who would do as the public wished or men who would go to the legislature, after receiving the people's vote, and following the precept of Vanderbilt, tell the public to be damned.

How Cakes Aided Chamberlain.

"Statement No. 1," said Governor Chamberlain, "embodies freedom from the reign of bribery and corruption which has disgraced Oregon in its senatorial elections and legislative matters for 30 years. It will give back to the people the powers delegated to the legislature, which legislators have shamefully misused. The very fact that its certain adoption in this state is a signal for the overthrow of the corrupt ring which has heretofore ruled politics and sold the people in its legislative debaucheries, is also the signal for the opposition against me and my advocacy of a state ruled first, last and always by the people.

"I am not alone in the vigorous stand I have taken in this matter of casting out the corrupt, machine-ridden legislature and again placing the people in control. Oregon has never been more determined that it shall come into possession of its own than at the present time. Especially in his speech throughout the eastern part of the state, thanks to my opponent, Mr. Calk, this deep seated conviction is largely due to his earnest efforts before the primary election.

Issue Is the People's Will.

"Throughout this entire district he held up Statement No. 1 as the only and sure remedy for legislative corruption and bribery such as has been characteristic of this state. He drove that declaration home so that these people—and to their credit be it said—have riveted it into their systems so deeply it can never again be uprooted. Mr. Calk received his nomination on this position, which he took in behalf of the people, and now he has repudiated his own platform. Statement No. 1 no longer receives commendation from him.

"The eyes of the whole nation are centered on Oregon; not as my opponents say, to see whether this state sends a Democrat back to congress, but to learn whether the people's will in this state is supreme and whether a condition of corruption is to be forever eradicated from its legislature."

Proceeding Governor Chamberlain's address, which received round after round of applause, Oglesby Young, candidate for railroad commission, spoke. J. A. Jeffrey, candidate for representative from the Second congressional district, followed the governor in a brief address.

Governor Chamberlain will speak at The Dalles and Hood River today.

CALLED NAME, WOMAN SUES

Author of Book on Mosquitoes Says Critic Dubbed Her a "Paerophorn."

Washington, May 9.—Miss Evelyn Grosbeck Mitchell will not submit tamely to being called a "feminine paerophora." She has sued Dr. Harrison G. Dyer, assistant curator of the National Museum for $25,000 because he called her that. She says, furthermore, that the phrase was inspired by Dr. Dyer's envy of her success in scientific lines.

Miss Mitchell recently wrote a book on mosquito life as a tribute to the memory of Dr. J. M. Dupree, under whom she had worked and whose notes she had acquired. Dr. Dyer is alleged to have written an article in the Canadian Entomologist in which he says of the author:

"I regret to notice a lamentable lack of credit to Dr. Dupree. Following the example set by the object of her study, Miss Mitchell has played the part of a feminine paerophorn among the non-scientific circles of Washington."

IS PRISONER WHILE GUARDS ARE ILL

Queen Must Wait Until They Recover or New Body Can Be Trained.

Rome, May 12.—Queen Marguerite is a prisoner in her own palace because the members of her bodyguard, six bicyclists, are seriously ill with malaria. Until another group of bicyclist bodyguards can be trained for the royal service, her majesty will not venture out of doors.

This is according to a promise she made to her husband, the late King Umberto, who was assassinated because he despised guards and policemen for his own protection. In his dying hour Queen Marguerite promised him to be so careful that she had been, surrounded by six bicyclists, which has been the queen's carriage or auto in the following manner: Two ahead, one on each side and two in the rear. Their speed must be equal to that made by the royal vehicle, and their eyes everywhere.

Of late her majesty has been driving much in the Campagna, which has been called "the home of malaria." The Campagna is particularly beautiful in the spring, and the queen likes to rush through the picturesque landscape at high speed. She often exceeds the limit in order to escape the poisonous vapors arising from the swamps which form a large part of the Campagna.

Of course this sort of travel proved exceedingly hard on the six bicyclists, obliged to compete with a 30 horse-power machine several days in succession. They got overheated and were obliged to drink from one of the lakes in the malaria territory. All six men contracted malignant malaria, and the doctors have given up hopes of saving their lives.
