WEATHER REPORT

The pressure is comparatively uniform over the country west of the Rocky mountains this morning and there are no well-defined high and low areas. Along the southern California coast the barometer is moderately high, while a depression appears to be developing over the southern plateau region. Light rains are reported this morning from central and northern California stations, while cloudy weather is general over the entire plateau region from southern Nevada northward to British Columbia. Light, scattered rains also fell over western Oregon and western Washington during the night. Light frosts occurred over southern Idaho this morning. The disturbance noted over the Texas panhandle yesterday morning has drifted northward and is now central over western Nebraska. It retains its energetic character and general rains have fallen during the last 24 hours along the eastern slope of the Rock mountains, the entire Mississippi valley and the lake region.

Cloudy weather is indicated over this forecast district tonight and Friday, with probably showers west of the Cascade mountains. East of the range showers are possible.
