THE PLAY

Helig—"When Knights Were Bold." B. J. P. S. One of the funniest farces that has ever made a Portland audience hold its sides and laugh until it was physically unable to laugh any more is showing at the Helig. Francis Wilson is with it—almost it is—did not see Mr. Wilson in "When Knights Were Bold" is to deliberately throw away the opportunity of a season. It's not only that Miss Marlowe's play is funny and that Mr. Wilson is 10 times more joyous in farce than in musical comedy, but the satire of the piece is so good, its attack upon the old times, ancestor worship and blank verse are so effective that its lesson can not be lost. Mr. Wilson, broadsword in hand, foists with the spirit of the dead past and comes out so complete a victor that it is unfortunate he is not going to be here longer and reach more people with the news of his conquest. There are several societies that are powerless to pierce the armor of the believers. It's a matter entirely distinct from the question of veneration for age. Veneration for age is a virtue but ancestor worship when carried to the usual extreme is a vice and requires unusual treatment. The best of the thing is that if the societies were taken to see Mr. Wilson they would forget within 10 minutes why they came and would be laughing with the rest of the audience, choking over the very same lines and situations that appear in the hot pot and would catch themselves leaning forward in their seats to eagerly await the next move on the part of Sir Guy de Vere, traitor of tradition. Sir Guy is a baronet, and his ancestor dates from the thirteenth century, a sort of thing. But when the curtain rises upon him, where he is host at a week end party, he is found to have a sword in the back of his head. This is a factual device kills any romance that you and I might feel for his name and estates. He is destined to death by a herd of relatives and hangers on, who remind him of his duties to the past, engendered by the great lords of his famous ancestors. In the midst of it all the whole scene is changed back to the twelfth century where in clanking the armor and ear splitting blunk verse the party holds high jinks. When Mr. Wilson dons his suit of mail and goes forth to battle the whole house is convulsed and the ensuing half hour, if not restful, is at least as enjoyable a one as you will spend in a theatre for some time to come. The company supporting Mr. Wilson is of unusual ability. Miss Mary Boland, who is the leading woman, is charming, and although she is not very convincing in the first act, is altogether pretty and Joseph Allen Barker, the seneschal, is too funny for words. The stage settings in the first and third acts particularly are delightful, the baronial hall being a gorgeous bit of scenery, with its fireplace, its tapestries and its background of fields and valley. "When Knights Were Bold" is decidedly worth seeing.

AT THE THEATRES

Francis Wilson at Helig. The attraction at the Helig theatre, Fourteenth and Washington streets to-night and tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock will be the distinguished American comedian Francis Wilson and his excellent supporting company in the delightful comedy, "When Knights Were Bold." Seats are now selling for both nights.

"Secret Service" a Big Hit. If there is a theatre goer in Portland who has never seen Gillette's noted play "Secret Service" he should by all means take advantage of the Baker week company's production this week. Every scene is a gem, and the plot and characters are intensely strong and interesting.

Musical Comedy. There is only one place in Portland to see the musical comedy, and that is at the Star theatre. The Armstrong company is making a specialty of this class of entertainment and each week offers a new travesty. This week "The Toreadors" is the bill.

Headed by Harrigan. At the Grand this week there is one of those tip-top vaudeville bills such as Portland is entitled to. It is a first-class vaudeville entertainment with a number of specialties that of James Harrigan, the comedy juggler.

"Nell Gwynne" Makes a Hit. The Allen company's revival of that beautiful romantic drama "Nell Gwynne" at the Lyric met with great success last night, and again this afternoon delighted a large audience. Verma Felton's success in the title role is one of the most marked she has ever made.

Anderson Dreads Gallows' Shadow

Joe Anderson, Under Sentence to Hang June 26.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.) Salem, Or., May 19.—Shivering and almost speechless with fear, Joe Anderson, convicted of the murder of Engineer Logan and sentenced to be hanged on June 26, asked for a priest yesterday afternoon and will become a Catholic. Anderson was brought to the penitentiary Friday evening by Sheriff Stevens and it was not until yesterday that it was observed that he was greatly disturbed. Yesterday at noon Anderson could hardly speak above a whisper, his fear was so great. He cringed in the farthest corner of his cell like a wild beast when the guards approached or the least noise was made in his tier. Father Moore was with the prisoner the greater part of yesterday afternoon and has also spent the most of the morning today with him. When Father Moore left the prison last evening Anderson seemed to have been much quieted by the priest's visit. Anderson told Father Moore that he expected to get a new trial and asked the father to aid him. Anderson's nature is a peculiar one. Despite the fact that he has spent 17 years of his life behind prison bars, an

TEMPORARY HALT IN TIMBER-LAND BUYING

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Klamath Falls, Or., May 19.—J. W. Alexander of the Weizerhauser Lumber company is in this city on business for his company. He states that he is here to buy timber, but that he expects to buy when special inducements are offered. There is but little movement in timber in this section, and none is expected until after the presidential election. While the price of farming lands in this section has increased in the past six months, timber land has decreased from $1.50 a thousand to 75 cents and $1. However, flood holders claim are not worrying over conditions, as they feel sure the slump in timber is but temporary.

CONVENTION RATES WILL BE REDUCED

(United Press Leased Wire.) Chicago, May 19.—In making rates of 1 1/2 cents a mile for the Shriners' convention in the Twin Cities the Wisconsin Central railroad has set an example which undoubtedly will be followed by other western roads. That the interstate commerce commission is taking keen interest in the squabble of the roads over convention rates and would like to see the matter settled is evidenced by a statement made today by a member of that body who declared that he thought the roads were hurting themselves. Two members of state commissions in the west expressed similar opinions, adding that it is not unlikely that the legislature of their states will pass laws making the legal rate 1 1/2 cents per mile.

Valued Sams as Gold. B. G. Stewart, a merchant of Cedar View, Mississippi, says: "I tell my customers when they buy a box of Sams' New Life Pills they get the worth of that much gold in weight. It afflicts with constipation, malaria or biliousness. Sold under guarantee at Skidmore Drug company's store, 25c."

COMMENCEMENT AT EUGENE DIVINITY

Four Graduates This Year and Five Ordained to the Ministry.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Eugene, Or., May 19.—The commencement exercises of the Eugene Divinity school were held in the First Christian church last night before a very large audience. Rev. Morton L. Gregory of Walla Walla, Washington, delivered the address before the class, while President R. L. Campbell of the University of Oregon delivered a short address. The graduates of the school this year are Ernest C. Wigmore and David E. Olson, taking the classical biblical course, and Anna A. Harden and Nathan Engel, both taking the English ministerial course. After the graduating exercises the annual alumni banquet was served in the church basement, many of the graduates of the school coming from a distance to be present.

Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class was delivered by Rev. C. Hilton, pastor of the Christian church at Milton, Oregon. At this service the following were ordained to the ministry, all being students of the school: Frank Leach of Seattle, Leon Myers of Eugene, Ethel C. Curtis of Colfax, Washington; Howard McConnell of Eugene and Henry Van Winkle of Sunnyvale, Washington. Rev. J. S. McCallum, pastor of the Christian church of Eugene, directed the service of ordination. The articles of incorporation of the school have recently been changed so that the scope and work of the institution may be enlarged. The name has been changed to the Eugene Bible university. The school was organized 12 years ago and the first year it had four pupils. This year it has 53 students in the divinity school proper, besides many in the school of music, the school of oratory and the preparatory department, making the total number of students over 130.

ORCHESTRA WILL GIVE GREAT LISZT NUMBER

Few composers play upon the emotions with such fiery passion as Liszt. His great work, the Symphonic poem "Les Preludes" will be rendered with consummate skill at one of the orchestral concerts to be given June 3 and 4 at the Armory by the New York orchestra under Walter Damrosch. This noble and impassioned work is an expression of the composer's views of life and its missions. It has been thus described: "Life is only a succession of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is sounded by death, whose life is the first morning glow of every heart, but fate cuts through its joy with the storm of life, whose rude breath destroys its illusion. The wounded soul seeks for rest and relief in the seclusion of pastoral life, but in this inactivity; for when the trumpet sounds he plunges anew into the battle of life, where in the post of greatest danger he arrives again at full consciousness of himself. The three great orchestral concerts
