LESSEN THE INFLUENCE OF WOMEN FOR GOOD

Clarence True Wilson Declares Wife and Home Should Be Represented at Polls by Husband, but That She Should Not Go Herself.

Portland, Or., May 23.—To the Editor of The Journal—In reply to certain criticisms of my recent address I have 15 reasons to state for voting against the suffrage amendment:

1. Because it is a betterment of quality we need among our voters and not merely a doubling of quantity.

2. Because experience has taught that the expenses of elections have been greatly increased without any perceptible gain to the state. I am told that in Wyoming a candidate is required to furnish carriages and drivers to bring the women to the polls in style, an item almost doubling the expense of running for office.

3. Because, while I have little sympathy for the taxation argument in relation to voting, yet if the taxpayers are better voters, as claimed, then women ought not to vote, as the proportion of taxpayers among them is 20 times less than among men. Grant the ballot to women therefore and you greatly reduce the relative number of taxpaying voters.

4. Because I do not like the influence of "doing politics" upon the faces, the habits, the character of our lovely women. I have seen some of these hard featured female politicians from Colorado, Utah and Wyoming and never till I am blind do I want our Oregon women to look like them, act like them or talk like them.

Household Unit of State.

5. Because the household, not the individual, is the unit of the state, and the vast majority of women are represented by household suffrage.

6. Because the women not so represented suffer no practical injustice which giving the suffrage will remedy.

7. Because equality in character does not imply similarity in function, and the duties and life of men and women are divinely ordered to be different in the state as in the home.

8. Because the energies of women are engrossed by their present duties and interests, from which men cannot relieve them, and it is beter for the community that they devote their energies to the most efficient performance of their present work than divert them to new fields of activity.

A son of one of these "new" women recently went into a restaurant. On the wall he saw a card. "The kind of coffee mother used to make." Calling the waiter to him confidentially he inquired, "Do you really have the kind of coffee mother used to make?" "Yes, sir," was the ready response. Thoughtfully he replied, "I believe I will take a cup of tea."

9. Because political equality will deprive women of special privileges hitherto accorded her by the law.

10. Because suffrage logically involves the holding of public office, including jury duty, and office-holding is inconsistent with the duties of most women.

Increases Influences of Worst.

11. Because unfortunately it decreases the influence of the best and increases the influence of the worst. The home loving women who now are exempt from the burdensome duties of politics would have little taste or inclination for such things, and the busy gadders about who now make life a burden to us would "rush in where the angels fear to tread."

12. But another reason why I should hate to see equal suffrage is the persistent aggressiveness of the women who run that agitation. It is worth a man's life to dare differ from them in the open now. What would it be if they were interested in several candidates and measures? We would either have to lie to them, as lots of men find it necessary to do now, or to run when we see them coming.

13. Another thing that makes me tired is this constant brag—ing on themselves. "The brain and heart of woman." I have heard 40 times during this winter, as if man had neither! If our sisters do not stop arguing by self-praise, we will stop bragging on them. Men don't brag on themselves like that. Take a lesson in modesty from us!

14. Women are not adapted to politics, for the politician must get some refusals or defeats, and you know the proverb about a "woman scorned." And any woman who finds herself refused thinks herself scorned.

Do Women Do Duty Now?

15. What a presumption it is to have woman suffragists tell us what great things the women will do if they get the power hitherto exercised by men. Do the women do their part in life now so much better than the men as to justify such expectations? There are more homes neglected, with houses unkept and children running the streets, than there are business establishments neglected by men. Men not only attend to their own business as well as women do, but actually surpass them on their own ground. Cooking and dressmaking, for instance. The finest dishes are prepared by men. And when your wife wants the finest dress she insists on having it "tailor made," which means man made. It is presumption that she will beat men running politics.

But it is a question of rights? Yes, it is a question whether to please the little coterie of women agitators men ought to force the duty of voting on every woman in Oregon. If I am in the next legislature I shall propose a bill to submit the question of woman suffrage to women, but I shall vote against the bill that seeks to have the men compel the women, though unwilling, to assume the duties of voting citizenship. There is enough domestic infelicity now, without introducing another element. If women vote just like their men folks we have only more votes to count. If they vote differently, more trouble. Go slow.

But perhaps they think that they can do men's work better than their own. How do I know voting is men's work? Because voting is the American plan of governing, and government has always been regarded as being masculine in its requirements. Government is expressed force. It is not sentiment, is debate may be a clash of opinions, but balloting is a clash of wills. Back of the ballot box stand the police, the sheriff, the courts, the army and navy. A vote that can not be backed up with force is no vote at all. Suppose the women should vote on one side and the men on the other of the temperance question, for instance, who would enforce the law? Suppose that in the Lincoln campaign there had not been power enough to enforce the decision at the ballot box, where would the United States come out? No, sisters, you have more than you can attend to now. Don't bother about the men's jobs.

Man the Representative.

I have always claimed that voting is a representative duty, that when a man enters the voting booth he is there as the representative of the wife and children at home just as much as the legislator is representing his constituents in the general assembly. The family is the unit of civilization, and the man is its public exponent. Too many representatives of the same unit means less responsibility and more confusion. If women are all going to vote exactly with their husbands, what good will it do? If they are going to nullify their husbands' votes, and their husbands are men of strong convictions hell is going to be uncapped in every house. I know a man who voted for 20 years in Wyoming, and his wife voted in every case the opposite ticket. Both might as well have been disfranchised! Their citizenship went for nothing, and I am not surprised that the husband and wife are each against the woman's suffrage movement now. We can dispense with women in politics, but not in the finer sphere of home life. She has tenfold more influence now than she could gain scrambling for office. She is no better adapted to politics than her silk dress is for a floor mop.

SAUSAGE, BOOZE AND CIGARETTES

Three Important Factors in Chicago Man's Trial for Abandonment.

Chicago, May 22.—In a trial for abandonment, brought against James A. Smith, Mrs. Genevieve Smith, his wife, who had been accused of taking more interest in gin fizzes, whiskey highballs and cigarettes than in getting Mr. Smith's breakfast, said:

"My husband bought me cigarettes, taught me to smoke, and then turned against me."

"She gives me embalmed potatoes and canned salmon," said Smith on the stand. "Yes, and then she goes out to the saloons. And, oh, how she does smoke cigarettes!" he continued, frowning at the woman who had accused him of deserting her.

"I dare her to remove her glove," said Mrs. Kate Kane Rossi, attorney for Smith. "She don't dare because she knows that the cigarette stains on her fingers betray her." Mrs. Rossi waited with a sneer on her face, and Mrs. Smith crimsoned. Then she removed her long, black glove. With a look of contempt for her accusers, she held a white and spotless hand up for the judge to inspect.

"Ah, but that's not the hand you roll the cigarettes with," observed Mrs. Rossi. "Let's see you take off the other glove."

This Mrs. Smith refused to do.

At her home Mrs. Smith denied that she was a habitual smoker. "I only smoked when my husband wanted me to. He seemed to like to have me smoke when he smoked, and we sat down together in a chummy way, you know."

Mrs. Smith said that she cooked all that her husband provided for her.

"For a while he would bring home sausage meat, and then the next day he would bring home link sausage, and then it would be sausage meat again, until sausage got to be a joke, and I told him I wished he would bring home the whole dog and be done with it," said Mrs. Smith.

THIRD WIFE WAS HIS FIRST LOVE

No. 1 Divorced Him—No. 2 Killed Herself—He Deserted No. 3.

St. Paul, Minn., May 22.—Engaged 20 years ago, reunited and reengaged last August by an accidental meeting, married after the suicide of his second wife and the third wife now deserted, are in the story of the marital tangles of E. C. Gilbert, a traveling man formerly of New York.

Twenty years ago Gilbert met Miss Eva Plantow at La Crosse. They became engaged and were about to be married when Gilbert looked too long on the flowing bowl and finally made a zigzag approach to his fiancee's house, which put a finish to his marital plans. She broke the engagement and they drifted apart.

Both were afterward married. Gilbert's wife secured a divorce and several years later he was married again, this time by a former friend. They did not agree and last June in Minneapolis the second wife committed suicide. In August, Gilbert accidentally met his original sweetheart, who was en route to Eau Claire to celebrate her mother's birthday anniversary. They renewed their 20-year-old attachment and were married. During the short months of their engagement Gilbert borrowed $150 to pay, so he said, the remaining expense of his second wife's funeral.

Gilbert disappeared recently. His wife says she has tried in vain to locate him and the police say his trail don't lead anywhere at all. He has just vanished, that's all, and his third wife is wondering why she was induced to sell some Eau Claire property, which went in part with the $150 funeral money.

CORK LEG SAVES MAN WHO TRIES SUICIDE

Light Peg Keeps Schroeder Bobbing in Delaware Until Help Comes.

Philadelphia, May 23.—"Spar buoy adrift in the river! Better report to the harbor master!"

"Long Tom" Link, who is the blue-coated authority on matters maritime where Fairmount avenue meets the Delaware, spat in scorn.

"Stow th' land lubber guff! Spar buoy! That's the tube of a submarine, my hearty; can't you see her list to starboard?" Telephone League Island for the mine engineer and have her blowed up."

"G'way!" roared Kelly, the positive.

"That thing a submarine! It's got the speed of a liner. That's a hipperpertamus gettin' a swim. Shrapnel shell is the only thing as will dent his hide—less'n Biffalo Bull can hitch him with a lasso."

During the conversation the object which brought it about had worked its way around the end of the pier, with many and many a list to starboard and many a swift lunge to port. When the three observers manned a skiff and rowed out to investigate, they found William Schroeder at the bottom of it, bobbing about with the driftings of his cork leg.

When they had pulled him out, William seemed vexed, and presently jumped in again. The boat overturned, and all four men struggled in the water until William cast loose the fastenings of his limb and went to the bottom. Then they were all saved separately. Schroeder was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, and the leg went home to 703 North Front street. Both will appear in court, and Schroeder must answer a charge of attempted suicide.

Active Life of City Missionary Heacock

Rev. John F. Heacock.

Rev. John F. Heacock is the son of Hugh F. and Mary O. Heacock, the former a Quaker and the latter a Methodist.

Mr. Heacock as a child was sent to the Presbyterian Sunday school and at the age of 14 joined the Presbyterian church. After remaining a member of that church for 14 years he joined the Baptist church. He received his education at Lewisville, Indiana, where his parents lived, and took his theological course at the Southern Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville, Kentucky. During the years of seminary life he preached in country churches in Kentucky and did evangelistic work during the vacations and baptized 300 people during this time. After leaving the seminary he organized a church at Addyston, one of the Cincinnati suburbs. He remained as pastor of this church for four years, during which time a new church was bought, costing $3,000, and 200 people were received into the church. For two and a half years following this pastorate he was engaged in evangelistic work in northwestern Missouri, where he was eminently successful. In a meeting held at Fairfax during this time there were 70 conversions, and at a meeting at Elmo there were 90.

Mr. Heacock then moved to Louisville, Arkansas, and took charge of the First Baptist church of that place for two years, which had a remarkable growth along all lines of activity.

Mr. Heacock came to Portland, November 1, 1907, and is employed by the home mission board doing city missionary work.

During the six months he has been in Portland he has baptized 20 persons and has received 30 by letter and restoration who have been added to the Highland and Lents Baptist churches, and there are 10 more awaiting baptism. He is also engaged in raising money to build a $10,000 church edifice at East Sixth and Alberta streets.
