WEATHER REPORT

The high area overlying the Pacific northwest appears to be slowly moving inland. It retains its pronounced character and this morning fair weather generally prevailed throughout this district excepting in southeastern Idaho. At Spokane, however, a light rain was falling at time of report. The Wyoming depression now appears in the form of a trough of low pressure extending from New Mexico northeastward to the Great Lakes. Light to moderate precipitation occurred over the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains and over the lower Missouri valley during the last twenty-four hours. General rains also occurred over the Great Lakes and middle Atlantic states.

The indications point to fair weather over this forecast district tonight and Thursday. It will probably be warmer Thursday.
