THIEF FLEES ON VICTIM'S TICKET

Peculiar Case at Astoria in Which Alleged Robber Is Robbed.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Astoria, Or., June 8.—Just before the steamer Roanoke sailed for San Francisco Friday a man named Cole rushed up to the ticket office and demanded two tickets for San Francisco. He was accompanied by another man, whose name is unknown. As both men were intoxicated and Cole stated he was going to Frisco alone the agent would sell him only one ticket. He was paying for the ticket Cole flung around $20 gold pieces in a lavish and reckless manner. He finally picked them up and staggered away. About half an hour after a man rushed into the steamship office demanding to know if his partner, Cole, had bought tickets to San Francisco. He had bought tickets to San Francisco, but in a drunken condition, minus his ticket, money and friend, who was arrested later, but on the showing he was able to make the authorities liberate him. The presumption is that whoever robbed Cole used the Roanoke ticket and got away and messages have been sent to Eureka and San Francisco to arrest and hold the party who has a ticket of a given number and hold him until a warrant and extradition papers can be sworn to and an officer sent after the culprit.

The society has been working to get such an invention for a long time and some time ago offered a prize of $500 for one that proved a success. Bergh says he will not take the prize.
