

4,600 CHILDREN TO GIVE DRILL

Will Show on Multnomah Field What Is Being Done in Public Schools.

Those who enjoyed seeing the children's Rose Festival drills of last year and who regretted that they were not to have the same privilege this year will be more than gratified at the spectacle to be presented tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when 4,600 children, in 23 regiments and representing 21 schools march, counter-march and go through the evolutions of wand, calisthenic and Indian club drills in the field day exercises at Multnomah field.

Portland schools have earned a reputation for thoroughness and proficiency in physical culture which is recognized. Much of the credit is due the teachers who daily drill the children under their care in these exercises. The work is uniform throughout the city, and is under the direction of Robert Krohn, who has spent 14 years in this work in the Portland schools.

The last rehearsal of the whole battalion was held this afternoon, and it was a remarkable spectacle to see these 4,600 children go through the whole program without a break in absolute precision.

The assembly tomorrow will be as follows: The advanced pupils in the Indian club drill will assemble on Yamhill street between Sixteenth and Chapman, the 1,000 pupils with wands will form on Yamhill between Fourteenth and Sixteenth, and 2,600 pupils in the calisthenic drill will form on Yamhill between Tenth and Fourteenth. From here they will march directly to Multnomah field in columns of eight when they will divide into brigades in front of the big grandstand.

The proceeds of the drill will be devoted to the Grammar School Athletic League, every one connected with the drill having donated his services to this purpose.

JOHNSON IS ELEVATED TO HIGH POSITION IN STATE GRANGE

J. J. Johnson, Lecturer State Grange.

J. J. Johnson of Mount Scott, has been elected state lecturer for the Patrons of Husbandry and editor of the State Grange Bulletin to succeed Mrs. Clara H. Waldo, who has held the position for the past four years. Mr. Johnson will assume his new duties at once and June 15 he will speak before a large mass meeting of pioneers and grangers at Brownville in the interest of the grange work. July 4 he will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting of five granges in Josephine county.

Mr. Johnson has been identified with the state grange almost since its beginning and has had 30 years' experience. At the last meeting of the state organization in Eugene last month the state master declared Mr. Johnson to be the best authority on the state or national title work. There was much talk of making him state master at that convention. He has for the past five years been the master of the Evening Star grange which comprises the granges of the county. There are individual granges in towns, and those of any county that wish may unite in the Pomona grange, a business organization for uniting efforts. Though Mr. Johnson lives at Mount Scott and is a practicing lawyer in Portland he has always been practically interested in agriculture and owns a farm of some 150 acres near Lent.

The duties of his new position include editing the official paper, visiting each grange once a year, furnishing literature, and giving suggestions to the minor lecturers and in every way promoting the work and preparing it for the official organizers that follow him.

The work is purely educational. There are now 123 granges in the state with over 7,000 members and in the past eight years it has more than doubled its membership. Mr. Waldo has done excellent work in the office. She is preparing to go abroad with her daughter.

"THE PLAY"
By J. F. S.
Baker—"Lovers Lane."
"Lovers Lane should always be reserved for June presentation. It's one of those summer plays, nice and quiet and mostly sunshine, with here and there a little gust of wind, that is not too fierce and a dash of rain that serves to make the sunlight all the more grateful when it comes again. It's a charmingly lazy play. It doesn't require much exertion on the part of the actors nor of the audiences, nor, thank heaven, of the critics. Anybody can go and be comfortable and love his neighbor as himself even to the point where he overlooks a shove and a poke with the elbow. I caught myself looking benignly around at the house to such an extent that the young woman who always sits behind me remarked triumphantly, "He can hardly keep from smiling."

So, you see, the mollifying effect of the Fitch pastoral and the pleasing naturalness of the Baker players was such that the lion misstray, like the ox and a little child might have played with the asp. When it comes to saying who pleased most, honors must be given to Mrs. Gleason who was lovely as Matty and Miss Seymour who probably never has been more entertaining than when she plays the part of the mischievous founding. It's almost impossible to say too many good things about the play. The young woman who makes Matty so human, so delightfully natural, every word and gesture is so well done that the wonder is that anyone could ever play the part successfully. There are roles in which Mrs. Gleason is perfect, and Fitch's Matty is one of them.

And, incidentally, there's a new actress—Miss Louise Murray, who is the most promising beginner that the Baker has shown for a long while. In the part of the cook her comedy work kept everyone laughing as long as she was on the stage—very few of the new people in the company have sprung into favor with the Baker audience as Uncle Bill, William Gleason is extraordinarily good and the others of the company fall into line well. Mr. Alison says the sainted person, Miss Newell is attractive as Mary Larkin, Louise Kent is a trifle theatrical as Mrs. Woodbridge, while Rhea Mitchell does a good bit of work as Bessie Steele.

Mr. Dilla has staged the good old play of the wedding ring, but has none, while all the time the bellman, who is reasonably decorated with jewels, and the other at the close of the third act, when Uncle Bill, the bellman, who "hain't missed ringin'" that bell for 20 years, exactly on time, slips a cog and someone behind the scenes has to yell out loudly, "Ring that bell, blank you, ring it!"

Otherwise the play goes smoothly and probably Uncle Bill's aberration was only momentary.

The battleships Maine and Alabama, which have been detached from the Atlantic fleet and are to precede it on the trip around the world by about a month, sail from San Francisco today. Stops will be made at Honolulu, Manila, Singapore, Colombo, Aden, Suez, Panama, Gibraltar and Horta, arriving at Hampton Roads toward the end of October.
