BRITISH BARKS ANDORINHA and Lydgate Coming in Ballast. ONE HAS RECORD FOR LARGE CARGO.

Exporters Begin in Earnest to Prepare for Handling of Immense Wheat Crop That Will Be Harvested This Summer.

Two immense wheat cargoes will be sent away from here this fall on sailing vessels according to an announcement made this morning. They will be carried by the British barks Andorinha and Lydgate and combined will represent about 375,000 bushels.

The Andorinha was here in January, 1934, and took away the largest wheat cargo ever set afloat here on a sailing ship, the total amount being 250,000 bushels. It was about the same time that the mammoth tramp steamer Lino Brantley here with the record-breaking steamer which cargo, her shipment being 250,000 bushels, the largest wheat cargo ever set afloat from any port in the world.

The Andorinha registers 2,100 net tons and will come here in ballast from Iquique where she arrived January 22 with a part cargo of general merchandise from Europe via Valparaiso. She is in command of Captain Griffiths.

The bark Lydgate, while not as large as the Andorinha, is a big carrier, her net register being 2,350 tons. She left Hamburg February 9 for Santa Rosalia and will arrive here about March 21. She is in command of Captain Griffiths.

It is possible that the big windjammer will get away with still larger cargoes than they carried on their former trips, because she now knows under consideration to have the loading line on British sailing vessels raised from 100 to 125 tons, an increase of one-fourth of that now indicated by the Pinnacel mark. This would give the Andorinha about 40,000 more bushels than she took out last time.

Sailors Afraid to Leave Vessels Because of Rough Element. In letters from steamers at San Francisco it appears that the sea pipe fouled at the water front a few days before he began what appeared to be systematic warfare on the secondhand dealers in this city.

In a letter to a friend here one ship's officer writes that it is dangerous to go ashore because one never knows when one might be attacked. A fireman belonging to the Norwegian steamer Transat was knocked down with a sapsie and robbed while the sailor and several others were attacked in similar manner.

Jack La Rose, under arrest here on suspicion of being the gaspise thug who killed Pawnbroker Neuman and the Chinese policeman on a nearby street, came from San Francisco a few days before his arrest here and it is believed possible that he is the man who did some of the work along the San Francisco waterfront. La Rose was formerly a marine fireman.
