CARDINAL LOGUE TO AMERICANS

Says Evils of Divorce Cannot Be Overestimated—Other Sins to Be Avoided.

Cardinal Logue, before departing for Ireland from New York, gave some wholesome advice to the people of the United States. In part, the Cardinal said:

"In saying farewell to America, I desire to express my deepest sense of gratitude to the people of this mighty nation for the magnificent reception I have received everywhere, and from everybody I had the pleasure of meeting, not only from those of my own race and faith, but also from representatives of nearly every nationality and of many different religious beliefs.

"I am leaving your hospitable shores with impressions that will never fade from my memory. My admiration and my affection for this country are not of yesterday. I have always entertained the highest conception of the lofty purposes of the American republic; but my experiences here during some few weeks have afforded me an opportunity to come in close touch with the reality.

"I found a land blessed by God with most bountiful natural resources, and I saw a people happy, contented, prosperous and worthy of the advantages which this country affords to all, and even to the stranger, to the poor emigrant whom dire necessity drives from his native home, and to the exiled patriot, whose only offense that he sought liberty and justice in his own land and found them not. America has a glorious future before her, if she but be true to the ideals of the founders of the republic.

"Prosperity and material power are beset with dangers; prosperity often degenerates into luxury, and power may turn into injustice. America, I am sure, will be well able to take care of herself in the face of a foreign foe; her greatest enemy will be within her own borders. Luxurious living would weaken the strength of the country and injustice would ruin its prosperity.

"I could not but be struck on my visit to the home of Washington at Mount Vernon, on the banks of the Potomac, at the perfect air of simplicity that marked the homestead and the tomb of the father of your country.

"If I may be allowed to draw a lesson from Mount Vernon, I should like to visit to the American people that the alarming increase in the number of divorces in the United States is a great and crying evil, full of danger.

"The greatness of any country must be measured by the strength and purity of the home. Divorce disrupts the home, in which the first lessons of respect for authority and the necessity for obedience must be learned, and these lessons cannot be instilled into the mind of the child if the home be not what it ought to be.

"Among the mementoes of my visit, I am taking back with me a beautiful American flag, presented to me some few evenings ago. I prize it most highly, both for its intrinsic beauty and for what it has represented and does represent to the people of my race and faith. They found under its starry folds a sanctuary from oppression, and advantages of happiness denied them at home. May the stars and stripes be true to its past glorious history, and never be unfurled in an unjust cause, but ever remain the flag without a stain."

VACATION GOERS' CATECHISM

By C. E. Quincey.

Q. What is a vacation?

A. A vacation is a period in which a man gives up work that he can do easily for work that he can perform only with great difficulty.

Q. What is an ideal vacation?

A. One spent in a tent or in a boat.

Q. Why is this an ideal vacation?

A. Because it entails an extraordinary amount of unusual and laborious toil.

Q. Describe a vacation in a tent.

A. Words are futile.

Q. How far can you go with the aid of a dictionary?

A. A tent is a piece of canvas so arranged that it catches every raindrop within a radius of 20 yards, and, having collected them into a reservoir, dumps the resultant lake upon your bunk.

Q. Has a tent any other uses?

A. Yes; it catches every fly within a hundred yards and keeps the temperature 10 degrees higher in its shade than in the sun.

Q. Why do people take their vacation in a tent?

A. Because it is so acutely uncomfortable that they think it must be doing them good.

Q. Is tent life a benefit?

A. Yes; to the tent-makers.

Q. What is the difference between a tent and a city flat?

A. The flat has considerably more room and is within striking distance of the necessities of life.

Q. What is the great advantage, if any, of the tent?

A. It looks remarkably picturesque in photographs.

Q. What is the pleasure of a vacation in a boat?

A. Its exquisite discomfort. A boat is so constructed that the stocks or pilory were a spring mattress by comparison.

Q. Has the boat or canoe any advantage over the tent?

A. Yes; in a squall the tent will simply become an airship and soar out of your reach, leaving you sitting on the sand, whereas the boat or canoe will capsize, mingling you with the ocean until some fisherman comes and pulls you out for $5.

Q. A boat or canoe, then, must be very healthy?

A. Undoubtedly; to have blistered hands and wet feet is so acutely uncomfortable that it must do one lots of good.

Q. What do you know about tan?

A. Tan is a freckle that has overflown its banks. It is preceded by a succession of blisters and abrasions, and is valued as a sort of laurel of martyrdom to the sun.

Q. Are there any other vacations that do one good?

A. The vacation "rafoo" is one of them. Some feet and aching legs are its greatest benefits. Also being caught by nightfall 10 miles from anywhere but a mosquito swamp. The mosquito then upholster the face, hands and neck to resemble the appearance of the feet after a 50-mile hike.

Q. Does the walker enjoy walking?

A. Oh, yes; he feels greatly superior to the callous soul in the motor car whizzing by to a comfortable dinner in a distant roadhouse. The walker admires the country—that is, as much of it as he can see through the auto's dust and in the intervals of dopping out how far he is behind Weston's 24-hour record.

Q. What appears to be the main object of a vacation?

A. To live as uncomfortably and to work as hard at some strange and trying form of manual labor as one can, after a year spent in an office chair.

Q. Could you suggest any improvement upon present methods in this direction?

A. No; for brackling, ditchdigging and nosing are child's play beside

BEEES KILL HORSES AND STING FARMER

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Fresno, Cal., June 12.—Bob Stafford, an employe of the J. V. Biens ranch near Kernman, lies at the point of death today as the result of having been stung by a swarm of bees that killed three of the horses of his team.

Stafford was driving a four-horse team, when the animals became frightened and ran away, breaking through a fence and crossing a field used as an apiary. Bees issued from the overturned hives and in a few minutes three of the horses had died from their stings. Stafford was himself badly stung and is not expected to live.

LA GRANDE TO HAVE THE GRANDEST FOURTH

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

La Grande, Or., June 12.—This city is to have the most elaborate Fourth of July celebration ever attempted in eastern Oregon. A committee of seven business men, members of the La Grande Commercial club, has been appointed by the president of the celebration association to prepare a program and solicit funds. There is a considerable sum in the treasury left over from the last celebration. Two meetings have been held and the first of next week will see every committee at work. The biggest business interests of the entire county have pledged their support. Nothing but unpropitious weather can spoil the first four days of July for the patriotic thousands who are expected here. An attempt was made to get Governor Chamberlain to deliver the address, but he had a previous engagement.

INDICTMENT OF MANY SHIPPERS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
