DISEASES OF BEASTS

Careful Research Develops Some Interesting Problems That Confront Veterinarians—Progress of Science in Animals' Diseases.

By Dr. S. B. Nelson, State Veterinarian of Washington.

Seattle, June 15.—The great public in most cases appreciates the value of sanitary police regulations just as soon as an outbreak of some contagious or infectious disease occurs which interferes with its health and happiness, especially if it is a disease from which the results are very fatal. Therefore we find that even back in the middle ages persons unofficially, or with official authority conferred on them, have taken official or unofficial charge of such outbreaks. Naturally it was only a matter of time until such persons, who seemed to have more or less knowledge relative to the various phases of such outbreaks, and who became more interested in the control of them, were selected to assume the responsibility of this work. This, associated with the human never-ending desire to learn and know more about these and relative conditions bearing on the health of man, developed onward and onward toward the profession of today which we know as "medicine."

Belongs to Physicians.

Later persons of this medical class were generally chosen to officially represent the public in this work, which custom has grown and developed until it is now conceded by common consent that this function first and properly belongs in the sphere of the specially educated physician. This being true relative to the physician of the human family, the same is equally true of the veterinarian, the physician of the lower animals, who has likewise developed from small beginnings of uncertain conditions into the high specific station he now occupies, and so both physician and veterinarian have struggled upward in the search of truth which to some extent would alleviate worldly suffering, little realizing that the labors of the ons had a direct bearing on that of the other.

During those early times the immediate cause of communicable diseases was not known, but with the carefully proven results of the labor of science as to the cause of many of them before him the physician realized that certain ones of these epidemics were entirely preventable, either by destroying the cause of the disease or by changing the animal economy of man so that, even if the cause of a certain disease did gain entrance into the system, it could not develop that abnormal condition of the body which we know as disease. Consequently there grew out of this knowledge two fundamental conditions to be practiced in controlling epidemics of disease—compulsory vaccination and through quarantine.

Highest Pinnacle.

Through these means the highest pinnacle of preventive medicine would have been reached, had it not at a later date become positively known that certain of these contagious diseases were communicable to the various species of the domestic animals, and then again transmissible to man. This, therefore, presented to the physician a new problem for solution. Would he be able to solve this alone, or were there others to whom he would direct himself for consultation and assistance?

There was a time when the physician was not permitted to use the human body for the purpose of dissection, and he had therefore to obtain his anatomical knowledge from the comparative study on the lower animals. It was then that he was better able to cope with the problem than he is today, because he then had to familiarize himself with the pathological lesions of contagious diseases in the lower animals, which opportunities he neglects today, as he is not now compelled to use the lower animals for dissection.

Diseases of Animals.

The following diseases in the lower animals are communicable to man, either directly or indirectly, through the food which the animals furnish for mankind: Typhoid fever, diphtheria, glanders, rabies, scarlet fever, actinomycosis, anthrayx, tuberculosis (unless Dr. Koch's late theory is proven), etc. Yearly America contributed her quota of deaths from the first mentioned diseases, but it is from the last one, tuberculosis, that the death rate is great, and which in consequence demands the most serious attention. This is the disease of which the honorable president of the Iowa state board of health, Dr. J. M. Emmert, said in a recent address:

"To this 'great white plague' the United States contributes 150,000 deaths, and the world 5,000,000 deaths per year." This alone comes from the human family. This last disease, as well as many of the others, is of common occurrence in the domestic animals, especially the cow, and many are the outbreaks that are directly traceable to the lower animals through the various food products they supply, as well as by direct contact.

It is this that has led the physicians through force of necessity to seek the advice of the veterinarian, who, through constant contact with and careful study of, has become more conversant with both anatomical structure and pathological lesions in the domestic animals, as well as the hygienic conditions demanded about the stables in which the animals are kept.

Veterinarian of Today.

The veterinarian of today has been so educated that he is properly qualified for a duty thus brought to him.

He is given a thorough course in anatomy of the various domestic animals, histology of the different animal tissues, pathological lesions, both ante- and post-mortem, as well as macroscopical and microscopical. He has unsurpassed opportunities to observe such lesions, as he may avail himself of nearly every patient that dies. Besides these, there are the great abattoirs in which thousands of animals are daily killed for food purposes, which gives him great quantities of material for study; so that he becomes exceedingly expert in his knowledge of normal meat, and there is quite as much importance in knowing normal as abnormal conditions.

In addition to this, every institution of veterinary learning gives the student the opportunity to make himself exceedingly familiar with technique and details of bacteriological investigation.

State boards of health are, at present, the great official organizations on which the public depends for its protection against whatever is or will be detrimental to its general health, whether this be contaminated food from a diseased animal, or the diseased animal itself.

Food Protection.

This protection is given by thorough control of the domestic animals and the foods produced from them. The more conscientious, and the closer such control is, the smaller will be the bearing of these factors; and, other things equal, the greater will be the average percentage of public health.

It has previously been shown that the veterinarian, by his education, is the proper person to represent the state boards of health in this branch of its labors, and that thus in theory a state board of health is not complete in its personnel without a veterinarian as a member of such board.

Now if by education the veterinarian is the proper person to place in charge of this work, let us see if he has proven himself capable in practice.

Cattle Suffer.

There was pleuro-pneumonia in cattle, an exceedingly contagious disease which affected the cattle of many countries. In the United States it existed in cattle of several states. With thousands of cattle to examine it was a prodigious undertaking to try to eradicate the disease from America. Yet by the work of veterinarians, this work was accomplished in less than five years, and at a cost of less than $1,500,000.

In Denmark Dr. Baug, with his corps of veterinarians has, during the past five or six years, by the aid of the tuberculin test and proper sanitary regulations, decreased the percentage of tubercular cows in that country over one half.

There are many other cases of about the same character and importance, showing that the veterinarian has been and is capable of performing practically this division of the duties of the state boards of health.

I trust that this short paper has impressed you to some extent as to the value of the veterinarian as a member of the state board of health, and similar boards, and it is to be hoped that in the near future many other states will follow in the footsteps of Minnesota, Iowa, and Washington, by having a veterinarian as a member of their state board of health.

MAKING CURE FOR ADVANCED RABIES

Chief of Paris Pasteur Institute Believes He Can Make Man Immune.

Paris, June 15.—Dr. Auguste Marie, chief of the laboratory of the Pasteur institute, has been experimenting for several years with the modified treatment for advanced cases of rabies like that of Mr. Marsh of Brooklyn, recently, and although he was unwilling to give details of the results until he makes them known through an official source, he said today they are most encouraging.

With the Pastuer treatment as used since its discovery, in 1885, until now full immunity is not reached until nearly five weeks after the first injection is given, the treatment lasting a minimum of 15 days. In cases of severe bites on the face the disease may develop in three weeks or even less.

Dr. Marie has succeeded in obtaining from sheep which had been made immune against rabies a serum which, when mixed in certain proportions with fresh virus of rabies, renders the latter innocuous when injected into animals and man. This mixture of virus and serum permits the beginning of the Pasteur treatment with a material which obtains immunity much quicker than when the ordinary method is used. It is precisely what had been needed for severe cases and the results obtained within the last two years have amply fulfilled Dr. Marie's hopes.

Furthermore, the new form of treatment will be of great practical value in immuning dogs, inasmuch as two injections rapidly immunize a dog against rabies and this immunity lasts for a year or more. The new method will be introduced in the New York Pasteur Institute when Dr. Rambaud, who sails on La Provence on June 13, returns, Dr. Marie having supplied him with enough of his serum to fill the needs of the New York institute until it is able to make its own serum.

YOUNG WOMAN MAKES BIG HAUL OF WEALTH

Boldly Steals Securities Worth $100,000 From a Railway Van at Station.

Liverpool, June 15.—A fashionably dressed young woman successfully engineered one of the most daring robberies in the annals of crime in the provinces. She escaped with a haul of about $100,000 worth of securities, but was arrested at Liverpool yesterday with the stolen property in her possession.

The arrested woman was immediately handed over to the Manchester police. It is stated she has refused to give any information which will lead to her identity.

Cool daring is the feature of the story of the theft, which took place at the Cheshire Lines railway station on Monday morning. The Liverpool train was being got ready when a woman and man had four parcels placed in the guard's van. It appears that the guard did not see the parcels placed in his van, and there was nothing to show to whom they belonged.

Some minutes before the train was due to start a smartly dressed young woman approached the guard and informed him that she expected some friends to catch the train. She intended traveling with them, but if they did not catch the train she would require one of the parcels that had recently been placed in his charge.

When the guard was about to wave his flag for the train to start on its journey the young woman rushed up to him and asked for the package which she had previously selected.

The guard did not entertain the slightest suspicion. Indeed, he had little time to make any inquiries. The parcel was handed to the stranger, and a porter was instructed to carry it to a cab. This was done, and the young woman told the cabman to drive to the Mosley hotel. On the way, however, she must have changed her directions to the driver, because shortly afterward she was seen on the platform of the London road station with the package in her possession. She was asked by the officials there if she required any assistance, but she replied that she did not.

Meantime, the owners of the package, who were breaking their journey to Liverpool at Warrenton, discovered their loss. They had been traveling together, and had recently been staying at the Midland hotel, Manchester. The missing package contained securities worth $100,000, some valuable furs and a quantity of jewelry.

LIVED TWENTY YEARS 'NEATH UMBRELLA

Hermit in English Woods Leads a Happy Life Without a Home.

London, June 15.—In a wood about 30 miles from London lives an old man who for 20 years has known no other roof than an umbrella.

A representative of one of the morning newspapers found him yesterday afternoon seated under a large carriage umbrella amid the pine trees, making ready for his tea. Close by was a perambulator packed with miscellaneous goods, including several umbrellas, clothing, etc. The old man, who is an ex-soldier, looked in excellent health.

"Twenty years ago I took to the woods," he said. "During the great snowstorm a few weeks ago I slept soundly, and when I woke up in the morning I was covered with snow many inches deep. But I am never ill. I have not had a day's illness in my life. I have lived a simple, single life, and I have no more worry than that tree has. I have no rates and taxes to pay, I have no wife to bother me and I have plenty of friends.

"How do I live? Well, all the village people know me, and they provide me with tea and bread. A man does not want much to live on, you know. I am quite happy under my old umbrella.

"I can sew as well as a tailor, and I mend all my clothes. I have several changes of clothing in my 'motor' (referring to the perambulator). I have clean shirts, socks, boots and other things here. No one ever interferes with me. I never light a fire, and I never ask for money.

"When darkness comes on I put up my big umbrella, take my boots off, put my legs into a sack and cover myself up with clothing, on top of which I place this mackintosh. I tie my perambulator to my legs or arm, and settle down for the night."

KING DISPLEASED BY OPERA CROWD

Prices Too High for Real Nobles, So Only Middle Class Comes, He Says.

London, June 15.—During President Falliéres' visit a vague report got about to the effect that King Edward was ill. The rumor seemed based on nothing more substantial than the fact that King Edward, who always looks genial at public functions, undoubtedly looked the reverse during his visit to the military tournament and at the gala opera performance at Covent Garden.

The fact is that the king, whose general health is excellent, is much troubled by increasing deafness. Three months ago it was hardly noticeable, possibly because every one in the royal set habitually talks loudly owing to the queen's deafness.

But since his return from Biarritz the king has been worried over his own difficulty in hearing.

His majesty's air of displeasure at the gala night at the opera, however, was probably not due so much to his inability to hear Tetrazzini and Melba as to annoyance at the general company in the opera house. He called them middle class. He expressed the opinion that the prices charged are too high for the old nobles.

WOMAN BREAKS THIGH WHILE TURNING IN BED

Scranton, Pa., June 15.—Mrs. Margaret Barrett of South Church street, Carbondale, who has been ill for the last two months, broke her thighbone while lying in bed last night. The injury resulted while she was turning over.

The case is an unusual one, and physicians are taking great interest in it. Some believe that the bones became brittle as a result of Mrs. Barrett's illness.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve Wins.

Tom Moore, of Rural Route 1, Cochran, Georgia, writes: "I had a bad sore come on the instep of my foot and could find nothing that would heal it until I applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Less than half of a 25 cent box won the day for me by affecting a perfect cure." Sold under guarantee at Skidmore Drug company's drug store.

Be a Strong Man

DR. TAYLOR, The Leading Specialist

To be strong and manly is the aim of every strong man, and yet how many we find who are wasting the vitality and strength which nature gives them. Instead of developing into the strong, vigorous, manly young fellows that nature intended them to be, they find themselves weak, stunted and despondent—no ambition to do anything. They struggle aimlessly along, sooner or later to become victims of that dread disease, nervous debility; their finer sensibilities blunted and their nerves shattered.

I Cure Men's Diseases

I have treated hundreds of men who have long suffered a gradual decline of physical and mental energy as a result of private ailments, and have been interested in noting the marked general improvement that follows a thorough cure of the chief disorder. My success in curing difficult cases of long standing has made me the foremost specialist treating men's diseases. This success is due to several things. It is due to the study I have given my specialty; to my having ascertained the exact nature of men's ailments, and to the original, distinctive and thoroughly scientific methods of treatment I employ.

To those in doubt as to their true condition, who wish to avoid the serious results that may follow neglect, I offer free consultation and advice, either at my office or through correspondence. If your case is one of the few that has reached an incurable stage, I will not accept it for treatment, nor will I urge my services upon any one. I treat curable cases only, and cure all cases I treat.

IN UNCOMPLICATED CASES
My Fee Is Only

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON.

No dangerous minerals to drive the virus to the interior, but harmless, blood-cleansing remedies that remove the last poisonous taint.

VARICOCELE.

Absolutely painless treatment that cures completely in one week. Investigate my method. It is the only thoroughly scientific treatment for this disease being employed.

FREE

My colored charts, showing the male anatomy and affording an interesting study in men's diseases, will be given free upon application. In all my work I am thorough, painstaking, and careful to give just the right treatment required in each individual case. For 25 years I have been proving by ability, and my business methods have always been strictly reliable. My unqualified success is due to a thorough medical education, supplemented by years of experience in men's special diseases only. My treatment is as correct as modern science can make it. Others may offer inducements, such as cheap treatment or quick treatment, but my foremost claim is for thoroughness, which in the long run—IN EVERY CASE—means the cheapest and the best.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS.

You can depend upon a quick and thorough cure by my treatment. A quick cure is desirable, because a slow cure is apt to be no cure at all, and a chronic development will come later. I cure you beyond the possibility of a relapse, and in half the usual time required.

REFLEX AILMENTS.

Often the condition appearing to be the chief disorder is only a reflex ailment resulting from some other disease. Weakness sometimes comes from varicocele or stricture; skin and bone diseases result from blood poison taint, and physical and mental decline follow long-standing functional disorder. My long experience in treating men enables me to determine the exact conditions that exist and to treat accordingly, thus removing every damaging cause and its effects.

How You Can Be a Boy at Sixty

There's no rational excuse for a man who is not yet sixty years old grunting and complaining about pains in his back, stiffness in his shoulders and legs, that "tired feeling," weak back, nervousness, indigestion, constipation and failure of vitality. It should not be. Nature started you with a constitution that ought to have held you good until you are eighty, and you ought to feel like a boy now. But you have overdone some things and wasted your vitality. You still have the constitution, but lack the force. That's electricity. You know that electricity is vitality. Electro-Vigor will restore it.

It is curing men of general nervous weakness, of rheumatism, kidney troubles, stomach troubles and of many special ailments, who had wasted their earnings for years on drugs without getting benefit. It cures them while they sleep by restoring vigorous strength to every ailing part of the body.

Electro-Vigor is a dry cell body battery. It is easily, comfortably worn next to the body during the night and gives out a continuous stream of that strength-building, nerve-feeding force which is the basis of all health. Electro-Vigor is not an electric belt—there is no charging to do.

* * *

I think Electro-Vigor is the most wonderful thing in the world, for it cured me of dropsy, catarrh, rheumatism and a weakness which made life miserable for me.

The doctors said I would be dead long ago. But Electro-Vigor has restored me to robust health, and I give it credit for saving my life.

I am 64 years old and working 14 hours a day now, and I feel as strong as a horse.
