MARSHALL BATTED OUT OF DIAMOND IN SECOND

Iron Man Johnson Is Substituted but Falls by the Wayside—Raftery's Great Catch Cuts Off Commuter Scores—Game Called in Seventh.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, June 20.—The Beavers toed the mark today only to be lost in the running. On the other afternoons a small semblance of a struggle was put up, but today there was never a moment that portended any energetic action on the part of the McCredie bunch. On account of the drizzle neither the Oaklanders nor the Beavers were in a hurry to engage in battle. In fact, it was only after a fair sized crowd had gathered that the signal was given for the game to be staged.

Youngster Marshall started to do the heaving to the pan for McCredie and lasted but one full inning. In the second, with the walks and bingles alternating with alarming regularity and no indication of the run getting stopping, "Iron Man" Johnson was run in from right field.

The Oaks were only prevented from scoring in the first spasm by a remarkable catch by agile Raftery. The bases were full and Hogan hit the ball hard. Three runs looked certain, but after a desperate run the Beaver center fielder pulled the sphere down, retiring the side.

In the second Raftery had no chance to shine and the dreadful doings went on apace until Johnson took Marshall's place on the mound. The whole sad affair started with a pass to Altman. Cook followed with a drive that gave him the second bag and boosted "Dutch" to third. On Wright's teasing bingle to left both Altman and Cook scored. Captain Van then did his duty by singling to center.

How They Did It.

After Haley had sacrificed, Heine Heitmuller hit a hot one at Cooney that bounded out to center, Wright and Van Haltren scampering to the plate. Eagan singled. Lewis singled. Six safeties and no sign of a letup. So Ote trots out. The next two batsmen were easy outs. Johnson twirled for revenge during the next few innings after Marshall's sudden farewell. He was not to escape, however. In the sixth four hits netted five runs.

In the seventh the drizzle had developed into a real shower and Umpire O'Connell called the game.

The best chance the Beavers had to score came in the third and was thwarted by a phenomenal one-handed catch by Left Fielder Cook. With one out Madden had singled and had a good lead when Johnson slammed the ball toward the clubhouse. Cook used all his great speed and just did get close enough to the leather to jump up in the air and spear it with his gloved hand. Madden had to stay on first and had no opportunity to get any farther.

TWO SPOKANE MEN PLAY REAL BALL

Jensen Pitches Heroically and Kippert Pulls Up the Grandstand.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Spokane, Wash., June 20.—The game today was a pitcher's battle. Errors piled up and most of the playing was below the average. Jensen pitched great ball for Spokane, winning the game almost single-handed. But the star of the game was Kippert, Spokane's center fielder. While Captain Nordyke of the Vancouver team was on third, he ran clear to the fence and caught a fly in bare left hand, preventing two runs. The catch was the signal for great yelling by 5,000 fans. The crowd was so large that seats are being added to the grandstand to accommodate 1,000 more people. Score:

NEW SPOKANE CLUB WILL HAVE BOXING

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Spokane, Wash., June 20. — Jack Kearns announced today that he had secured sufficient funds to assure a new athletic gym and club and that he would make known in a few days who his backers were. The new club will hold exhibitions of boxing and other features, having secured permission of the authorities for that purpose. Kearns promises it will be the best and most up-to-date gym in the west.

Portland officiated in two double plays. That's not so bad on a rainy day and the score big against them.

JUNIOR FOUR FOR REGATTA CHOSEN

Senior Crew Leaves Youngsters Boat Lengths Behind —Allen Takes Singles.

Against a headwind and a choppy river—that is, about as choppy as the Willamette ever gets—which prevented any records being broken and resulted in one of the shells being overturned, the try-outs called to assist in the selection of the junior crew of the Portland Rowing club which is to be sent to take part in the contests at Seattle, took place on the river yesterday afternoon.

In the four-oared double race between the two junior crews the shell of which Ed Gloss was stroke won out against Emerson Harley, stroke, in a run of about a mile, by a trifle more than eight boat lengths. This practically settles the question of which of the junior crews is to go to Seattle to take part in the northwest Pabific regatta, July 3 and 4.

Ed Gloss was stroke of the winning junior crew, with G. Sterling as No. 3, Jeff Tully as No. 2 and V. Dent in the bow. The defeated junior crew was composed of Emerson Harley, stroke, J. Tuck, No. 3, W. E. Ball, No. 2, and H. G. Chickering in the bow.

After defeating their brother juniors, the winning juniors went up against a crew more in their class—the seniors. This was the third and last race. The juniors, which only an hour before had beaten their opponents by eight boat lengths went up against the seniors full of confidence and as strong as they make 'em.

And besides, figured the winning juniors, the seniors were crippled, Loomis being out, and for a time the juniors, it is said that they did, thought that by chance they might defeat the ones who are to take part in the big event at Seattle.

The juniors were given a 10-second handicap. If it hadn't been for some driftwood the juniors wouldn't have been beaten so badly. As it was they were only behind at the end something less than half a mile. The race was a mile. To be exact, or rather to make a rough guess, the juniors were beaten about, oh, say, 20 boat lengths, that's near enough.

But everything considered, the juniors made a very creditable showing and for a quarter of a mile over the course they almost held their own with the men of the stronger arms who were pitted against them in yesterday's try-outs.

The juniors rowed in the same positions as earlier in the afternoon when their fellow juniors were defeated.

The line-up of the seniors, Dr. B. E. Loomis being sick, was as follows: Rex Conant, stroke, Captain A. C. McMicken, No. 2, A. A. Allen, No. 3, and A. Pfaender in the bow.

In the singles, Arthur Allen won out, beating A. Pfaender, and Charles Quitsow. This was over a mile course. Quitsow was put out of the race soon after the start by his shell being upset owing to the high wind and rough surface which prevailed.

The starters, in turns, were A. C. McMicken and William Patton. William A. Ormandy and E. I. McCable acted as the judges.

The races were started near the end of Ross island the finish taking place directly in front of the boathouse of the rowing club.

WISCONSIN CREW AT SPOKANE NEXT YEAR

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Spokane, Wash., June 26.—Dan L. Weaver, manager of the Spokane theatre, who is interested in boat racing, announces that unless something unforeseen turns up the Wisconsin crew will come up here to give an exhibition of their skill on Lake Coeur d'Alene. A crew is being made up to meet the eastern boys. The Wisconsin team is coming to the coast next summer to the A. Y. P. exposition and they will stop here two days.

"POP" ANSON WANTED WEE WILLIE COLLIER

William Collier, who will appear at the Heilig theatre next week in his successful play, "Caught in the Rain," is a baseball enthusiast. As a matter of fact he is something more than that. He is a mighty good baseball player himself. He was good enough some years ago to receive an offer from "Pop" Anson, of the Chicagos, to play professional ball as a pitcher, but he stuck to the stage.

Some years ago he organized the actors' nine at St. James, Long Island, N. Y. At first there was an idea that the actors would not amount to much as baseball players, but in a very short time it became noised abroad that the team under the management of William Collier not only could, but was playing fine ball. On Long Island there was an exceptionally strong amateur league of eight clubs. The first year that Collier's team entered this league they came out second. The next year and for five consecutive years his team won the championship.

The makeup of the team the first year it won the championship was as follows; The late Jerome Sykes, first base; Joe Coyne, second base; John Collier, left field; Lionel Barrymore, third base; Ignacio Martinetti, shortstop; Tom Beauregard, center field; Tom Lewis, catcher; Edgar Smith, right field and William Collier, pitcher. Charlie Bigelow and Peter Dailey were substitutes, but they were never allowed to play in league games.

Mr. Collier's enthusiasm is just as great for baseball today as it was then. This season he has organized a team from among the members of his company. They have their uniforms, hats, and all necessary paraphernalia. The official scorer is Ah Sam, the Chinese actor.

SQUEEZE PLAYS.

Cheer up, everybody.

• •

Every man a pinch hitter! Just think of Jess Garrett lacing the ball to the field with the bags full and everybody coming home. He did it in the memorable 15-inning tie Wednesday.

• •

We go south to Los Angeles next week for a series with the Angels. Hope the sun straightens out some of the kinks in the pitchers.

• •

Four straight to Oakland. What a nightmare to haunt us for the rest of the season. Unless the boys spruce up some we might come home in the cellar again.

• •

Van's vassals were certainly there with the willow yesterday. Perhaps they rolled up those 15 safe swats in revenge for the bunch the Beavers gleaned off the Oakland slabsters here last week.

Manager Mac must be in sore straits for twirlers when he will use Marshall twice in a week. But McCredie is careful of his men and probably elected to lose a game rather than hurt one of them.

PORTLAND BOY BREAKING WORLD'S RECORD

Although A. C. Gilbert, the Portland boy who is now in Yale university, held the world's pole vaulting record but one week, his great mark entitles him to the trip to London to compete against the world at the Olympic games. The picture shows Gilbert as he is vaulting 12 feet 7¾ inches high, June 6. It was the highest mark ever set in America and was considered a marvelous exhibition of physical strength.

However, his classmate, Walter R. Dray, whom he defeated in the Olympic games, one week later vaulted over the bar set at 12 feet 9¾ inches, two full inches better. While Dray must be given full credit for his wonderful performance, there are those who believe the Oregonian will ascend 13 feet before the season has passed.

Oregon has three members of the Olympic team, an unusual record for a state so far removed from the seat of activity. Every man of the Oregon contingent is a star of the first magnitude and each will probably set new Olympic records if not new world's records at London.

The other members of the team are Forrest Smithson, hurdler, now on the way to New York, to sail, and Dan J. Kelly, national broad jumping champion, who is at present a member of the Irish-American Athletic club and who will represent the state in the long jump.

Kelly has not been west since the Jamestown championships, where he represented the University of Oregon by winning the broad jump easily with a leap of 23 feet 11 inches. Kelly is always a point winner in this specialty. His reputation as a sprinter has diminished since his residence in the east, but if he is feeling right he will probably be entered in the 100 and 220-yard dashes in London. Dan still possesses great speed and it will not surprise his greatest admirers if he finishes in front of the flying Rector or Lawson Robertson or some of the other eastern cracks. But of course there is little likelihood of him being entered in the dashes with so many good men eligible.

Reports have it that Dan is covering about 25 feet of space. If he does that in the British stadium he will undoubtedly win the event from Peter O'Connor, the Irishman, who went 24 feet 11¾ inches across the pond. O'Connor has never been able to equal his masterful effort, while Kelly is said to have been going around the 25-foot mark with great consistency.

Gilbert is a wonderful vaulter. He was great when he left Portland to take up his studies at Yale, but his development has been extraordinary. He held the northwest record of 11 feet 7¾ inches and has been able to boost these figures an even foot.

Smithson's records are well known. With him and Gilbert and Kelly, the Beaver state will be well represented in the transatlantic athletic meet early in July.

HARD LUCK TRAILED ANGRY OSKIE JONES

Nifty Angels Cause Mohler to Chase Pitcher—Sutor Bumped Very Hard.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Los Angeles, June 20.—Hard luck was on the trail of Oscar Jones today and Captain Mohler thought it best to remove him after the opening overture, in which the Angels got him sizzling mad by scoring three runs in spite of all he could do. Sutor took his place and was touched up in the fourth and fifth for the other two tallies, giving the berryites the game by a score of 5 to 1. Score:

NATIONAL LEAGUE GAMES.

New York, 4; Chicago, 0.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

New York, June 2.—Before a crowd estimated at 31,000, the world's champions were shut out by the New York Nationals today. Mathewson was in superb form, only allowing the Cubs three hits and giving but one pass. Score:

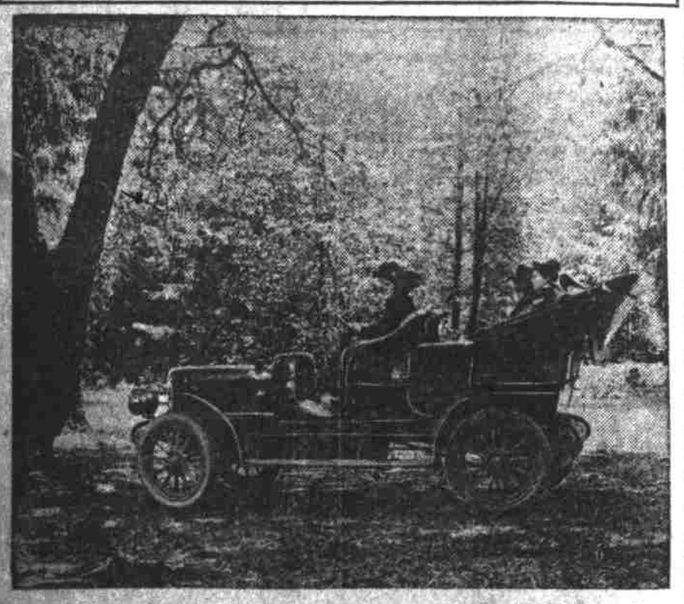
Motoring Among the Evergreens



(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Grants Pass, Or., June 20.—There is a vast territory of interesting country for the motorist in southern Oregon. A more picturesque region, and one of more beautiful natural wonders, is not to be found anywhere in America. It is a country of evergreen mountains, great pine forests, roaring rivers and laughing streams. Here the motorist can steer his car off the beaten paths and the busy streets and seek the solitude and peace of the primeval.

There are motor cars in southern Oregon, several hundred of them, and their coming has brought about the establishment of as fine mountain roads as can be found anywhere on Uncle Sam's domain. Modern road building is no longer a theory but a reality with the road supervisors of Josephine and Jackson counties. The long dry season, which extends from February till November, allows the operation of automobiles at least nine months of the year.

"Goin' campin'" by automobile is now a popular method of dropping business cares and hieing to the wilds in southern Oregon. The upper and lower Rogue river, the Coast and Cascade ranges with their innumerable camping places and hunting and fishing grounds are all accessible to the man with a motor car. Crater Lake National park is reached by a good wagon road, and will be visited this season by hundreds of motorists.

The road to the park follows Rogue river a distance of 85 miles from the open valley. Besides leading through a canon whose marvelous beauty rivals the famous Royal Gorge of Colorado, it winds across the largest forest of sugar pine in the world. The motorist finds good camping grounds anywhere and everywhere along the route, with splendid fishing in the river and an abundance of game in the mountains.
