

BOZORTH FAMILY HOLDS REUNION ON FARM SETTLED IN 1851

Bozorth original home, built in 1851. The fourth annual reunion of the family, which numbers 400 members on the Pacific coast, was held here last Thursday.

The fourth annual reunion of the Bozorth family was held at Woodland, Washington, last Thursday, on the original homestead of Squire Bozorth, on which he settled with his family of 11 children in 1851. There were 70 of the family at the reunion. The morning was spent in gathering data relative to their family history. At noon the dinner and then the business meeting. An address was given by Albert Napoleon Willis, whose mother was a daughter of Squire Bozorth. He spoke especially with reference to the debt the people of this country owe to the early pioneers.

John Owen Bozorth, the historian of the family, presented his annual report, from which the following excerpts are taken: "Our remote ancestors probably crossed the waters to America at least 200 years ago. Whatever credit there may be in having distinctive pure American blood, we certainly have the right to that distinction. The family name of 'Bozorth' would seem to denote French origin, and as our earliest known ancestor, as far as we know definitely at this time, Jonathan Bozorth, was a very early resident of Kentucky, and practically all the residents of that state at that time were immigrants from the Carolinas and Virginia, I think it very likely that the earlier ancestors were of one of the colonies of the persecuted French Huguenots who were driven from their mother country through the religious persecutions during the 60 years following the massacre of St. Bartholomew in August, 1572, and landed on the coast of Carolina. From there these people went principally to the south and west. The Bozorths have been a vigorous people and large families have predominated. Jonathan Bozorth was born in 1761 and lived in Kentucky. He died in 1836. I have no knowledge of his wife's maiden name. Seven children were born to him, namely: John, Abner, Ira, Reason, Squire, Nancy and Mary. Squire was born January 11, 1792, and on July

MARK TWAIN HEADS THEATRE PROJECT

New Organization Formed to Build a Big Playhouse for the Children.

New York, June 27.—The Educational theatre of New York, with Mark Twain as president of its board of directors, has filed a certificate of incorporation and will immediately begin to raise funds for a large building with an auditorium seating at least 1,000 for the presentation of plays by children and young people. This spring it was decided by the Educational alliance that the Children's theatre had grown to such proportions that it should be a distinct organization. This will begin its work on July 1 under Mr. Twain, Robert J. Collier, Stanley Hail, president of Clark university; the Rev. Percy S. Grant, Otto Kahn, Charles E. Miner and Miss A. M. Hertz, who compose the board of directors. Mark Twain first became interested in the work when he went to the Educational alliance to witness a production of his play, "The Prince and the Pauper."

Miss Hertz, secretary of the board, said last night: "The Educational theatre will strive to raise the morals of young people who haven't wide opportunities for recreation. It will be an outlet for youthfulness, and will save young men and young women from being drawn into the hands of elocutionists and later to a cheap stage, where they become fixtures." In the theatre to be erected by the new organization there will be classrooms and halls for social gatherings and orchestral rehearsals. For the present the theatre association will meet at No. 29 Grammercy Park, Mr. Collier's former home.

only children now living. The family located in Washington county, then moved to Vancouver and from there went to Lewis River and settled in 1851 on the homestead where Woodland now stands. The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: President, C. C. Bozorth; vice-president, A. N. Willis; secretary-treasurer, M. B. Bozorth, and historian, J. O. Bozorth. It was decided that future reunions be held on June 25 of each year. There are now more than 400 descendants of Jonathan Bozorth resident on the Pacific Coast.
