WEATHER REPORT

A trough of low pressure overlies the Rocky mountain states and a report received from Sitka last night gives the low barometer reading of 29.74 inches, which indicates more unsettled weather to the northwest of this district. The barometer is relatively high east of the Rocky mountains. During the last 12 hours light rain has fallen in western Washington and the weather is cloudy and unsettled over the greater portion of this district. Moderately heavy rains have fallen in southeastern Texas and in the Mississippi valley south of Minnesota, and light rain has occurred at scattered places in the Atlantic states. It is cooler in southwestern Idaho and warmer in western Montana. Elsewhere on the Pacific slope the changes in temperature have been small and unimportant.

The indications are for showers in this district tonight and Saturday, with lower temperatures east of the Cascade mountains.
