Wednesday was one of the liveliest days in the history of the Butte Boys Consolidated Mining company's sales, large blocks being disposed of, and, most gratifying of all, in a majority of cases to friends and acquaintances of the officers of the company. Men who have known the officers for years were the heavy buyers, and the day closed with the largest number of shares sold for any one day since the company was organized. The big demand for the stock is caused by the flattering reports from the foremen of the three properties being worked, the large amount of work being done, and the excellent reports from two of the leading mining engineers of Nevada. George W. Bever, vice-president and manager, will leave for Goldfield July 3, with parties who represent money and who have invested liberal sums, and will no doubt double their present holdings many times after inspecting the property. The holdings of the company are recognized by all who know the properties to be a bonanza, and there is no doubt but what every stockholder will reap a golden harvest. The company will soon take all stock off the market, as it is now assured of all the money necessary to carry on the work. It is now thought the Night Hawk lease has the famous Red Top ledge. The Butte Boys original mine is getting large bodies of milling ore, and the Florence lease has three leases adjoining it, which are producing high-grade ore. The last block of Florence ground secured by the company consists of over half of the Annex lease, which is proven ground. The company also has the use of a 500-foot shaft. Besides this, the Florence company has granted the company an additional two-months' extension on their first lease. The Butte Boys office is now at 325 Chamber of Commerce building.

Articles lost and found on the streetcars in the last few days: Fifteen umbrellas, one trowel, one package pictures, three purses, one belt, one pair overalls, one jacket or coat, one suit box, one foot tub, two pairs gloves, one pair shoes, one man's shirt, one roll of bills, one dice box, one can varnish, one bottle of medicine, one cuff button, one knife, one package screen door trimmings, one note book, one package collars, three suit cases, three satchels, on pair silk gloves, one lunch box, one bracelet, one lunch pail. The lady who called a few weeks ago for her umbrella with the "bird of paradise" please come again. Call at the lost article room of the O. W. P. railway station, corner First and Alder.

According to a letter received by Dr. D. L. Rader, editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate, Bishop Charles W. Smith, recently appointed as resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church for the Pacific northwest with headquarters at Portland, will not reach the city to assume his new duties until fall. In his letter Bishop Smith assures the ministers and laity of the church of his great admiration for the new country into which he is to come and of his high regard for the work that has been set for him to do. Owing to many engagements and much work made and started prior to his recent appointment, it will be impossible for him to leave Pittsburg and the east before the autumn.

County Clerk Fields' report for June shows that his office received $5,232.30 and the expenses were $3,215.50. This shows a falling off of $527 in receipts as compared with the corresponding month last year, and $384 less in expenses. The receipts in the recording department were nearly $100 greater than in June, 1907, making a good showing on the condition of real estate business. In that department the sum collected in fees amounted to $2,576. The county court department took in $1,245 and the circuit court branch of the office $7,414.

The funeral of Thomas McNamee, former constable, liquor dealer and hotel keeper, who died yesterday afternoon, will take place tomorrow afternoon from the cathedral. Interment will be in Riverview cemetery. Mr. McNamee came to Portland 20 years ago from Pittsburg. He died at his home, 280 Park street. He leaves a widow, a brother, John McNamee, of Seattle, and a sister, Mrs. Rosa Totten of St. Paul. Mr. McNamee had been sick since election day, when he contracted a severe cold. He was a member of the Elks and of the Eagles lodges.

A lawyer will raise the standard of intellectuality at the Kelley Butte rock pile for the next 30 days, for L. P. C. Godfrey, who says he is an attorney, will break the county's bread at that institution for one month. Godfrey was arrested for following a woman. At the patrol box he slashed Patrolman Richards with a penknife, and tried to escape. Judge Cameron originally fined him $50 in addition, but this was suspended, with the rockpile sentence left against Godfrey.

Boys and girls whose ambition is to succeed in the business world should not overlook the opportunity to win a valuable scholarship in one of the leading educational institutions of the Pacific northwest. The Journal's third annual scholarship contest began last week and will last three months. No further time should be lost in entering. Call on or write the contest manager for full particulars and instructions.

Arrested at Third and Davis for disorderly conduct, Otho Olesen turned upon Patrolman Burri at the patrol box while the policeman had the receiver at his ear, calling the police station. In the flight that followed Burri succeeded in throwing his assailant to the pavement, but not before Olesen had kicked him in the back. Olesen will kick rock at Kelley Butte for the next 30 days.

Why Ivory Soap, or any other, should be a valuable insecticide is hard to explain, but it is a fact. It has the advantage of not making the bushes unsightly as Bordeaux mixture does. THE PLAY

Heilig—"Othello."

By J. F. S.

Shakespeare's noisiest melodrama, "Othello," was most consistently misplayed by Mr. Mantell and his company last night. At once the most musical and the most superficial of the tragedies, its demands upon an actor are not great. Mr. Mantell has a fine voice—the chief requirement to play "Othello." He has a good presence and bearing—the other requirements. What more could be needed? Merely to play the Moor all the way through so that nobody could understand anything that was said or else so everybody could understand everything that was said.

But he declined positively to stand upon either of these alternatives. He started in by letting you know what he was saying. Then he suddenly switched from the council chamber distinctness to his scene first, with Desdemona and then Iago, where he prattled to one and then the other, said, "He loves me not a tall!" Neither did we when he talked that way.

It must be that Mr. Mantell has been at "Othello" so long that he has grown careless. It's too simple. You have to work up an enormous sweep of passion—fairly drown sense in noise and in the volume of the magnificent word music. But that doesn't mean running notes together, or words either. If the actor had only had faith in what was evidently his original conviction, then he might have got through the evening admirably and left the impression of a magnificent jealousy and a splendid flow of words. But just as he was most incoherent and musical there would come a twinge of conscience. He would decide that he must talk. The big concourse of sound would stop and he would speak in a conversational tone of voice. Vanish all illusions! Enter common sense and an appreciation of the fact that his jealousy was purely of the melodramtic brand that can be witnessed for a slight outlay at any time. It's in words that "Othello" excels "The Girl with the Green Eyes," or any one of a dozen other plays based upon jealousy. And unless you recite the words so that they make music, not sense, you had better devote yourself to Clyde Fitch.

But if "Othello," because its very shallowness is an easy role to act as much cannot be said for Iago. Francis McGinn had a task that threw that of Mr. Mantell quite into the shade. He came out of it surprisingly well. He was inconsistent and therefore he played the role most successfully. Iago begins as a blackguard, becomes charmingly witty and subtle and leaves you thinking him the prince of villains, perhaps, but a prince nevertheless. Miss Kingsbury as Desdamona tries my soul. I wonder if she has been as bad all the week. I foolishly took it for granted that she was good as Goneril in "Lear." Why, heaven only knows. But as Desdamona she was quite incompetent. In the first place she is physically far from being equal to the part. And while Mr. Mantell, in the role of the Moor, has quite sufficient excuse for overacting and theatricalism—it's all that can be done with "Othello"—that gave no license to Miss Kingsbury to be the same. The rest of the company was adequate and the production, scenically, was attractive. There was the usual cut of the Shakespeare play to make a "stage version."

Y. W. C. A. OUTLINES CHAUTAUQUA WORK.

Study Classes Arranged for Meeting—Camping Facilities Best Possible.

The state board of the Young Women's Christian Association begins its summer work with the opening of the Chautauqua assemblies at Gladstone and Ashland. At each place they offer permanent headquarters for young women. They do this in the hope of meeting two needs; first, that of minimizing a growing tendency of young women to camp alone; and second, to make it possible for women who get little opportunity for change and interesting or profitable entertainment to have the advantage of the Chautauquas at the lowest possible cost prices.

The headquarters will be comfortable and attractive in all ways. There will be a central reception room tent, and small dormitory tents (two single cots in each tent) completely equipped for comfort. The price per night will be 25 cents. Simple breakfast and lunches at 15 cents for those occupying the tents will be furnished. Miss Frances C. Gage, northwest secretary, will be in charge of the Gladstone camp and Mrs. W. J. Honeyman of the Ashland.

Holiday Worth While.

It will be a delightful and profitable holiday for young women all over the state. All desiring to avail themselves of this splendid opportunity should send in their names as soon as possible to Miss Gage, 192 McMillan street, Portland, Or.

At Gladstone in the central tent, three classes will be in progress during the morning. At 9 a. m. a class in practical sociology, led by Rev. Paul Rader of the Hassalo Congregational church, Portland. The text book used will be Josiah Strong's "Challenge of the City." Mr. Rader has had very successful experience in large cities and will give splendid power to the consideration of this one failure in American civilization—the city.

At 10 a. m. a class in foreign mission study will be taught by Professor Fred G. Boughton of McMinnville college, subject, "The Unfinished Task." Rev. Boughton is a professor of psychology and sociology in McMinnville college and has given much time to the study of world movements. He will make this terse text only just published by the Student Volunteers movement a basis for presentation of the world's present status.

Domestic Science Class.

It is hoped that many people who are intending to lead mission study classes next winter and who are especially interested in these vital themes will come to Chautauqua and avail themselves of these classes.

At 11 a. m. Mrs. Ellen R. Miller, well known at Chautauqua as an able teacher of domestic science, will have charge of the class on this subject. The usual small fee of 10 cents will be charged to cover the expense of material. The course of lessons is planned to meet the desires of housekeepers of every phase of life and Mrs. Miller will be ready to answer the questions of all as to economy or diversity or dietetics.

The same general plan will be carried out at Ashland, Miss Margaret Wishart taking the domestic science work and Rev. G. Le Roy Hall of Medford the mission study classes.

A New Departure

The cost of interments has been greatly reduced by the Holman Undertaking company.

Heretofore it has been the custom of funeral directors to make charges for all incidentals connected with a funeral. The Edward Holman Undertaking company, the leading funeral directors of Portland, have departed from that custom. When casket is furnished by us we make no extra charges for embalming, hearse to cemetery, outside box or any services that may be required of us, except clothing, cemetery and carriages, thus effecting a saving of $25 to $75 on each funeral.
