OLYMPIC GAMES BEFORE CHRIST

King Edward Will Open Worldwide Athletic Contests Monday.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

London, July 9.—Announcement that King Edward will be present in person at the inauguration of the Olympic games next Monday has served to increase public interest in the athletic contests of world wide scope that will take place during the next few weeks in the great stadium erected for the purpose at Shepherd's Bush.

For more than a year England has been preparing for these competitions. As a result of the excellent work done by the committee there are now gathering in London many of the foremost athletes of Europe, together with representative delegations from Canada, the United States, Australia and other parts of the world. Trained to the hour, these many marvels of speed, skill and endurance will during the next few weeks engage in contests for supremacy in the same manner as did the Greeks centuries ago.

The Olympic games take their name from Olympia, which in ancient geography was a valley in Elis, Peloponnesus, Greece, celebrated as the sanctuary of Zeus (Jupiter). The Olympic games, the most important of the great public games of classical antiquity and the greatest of the four Panhellenic festivities of the ancient Greeks, were celebrated at intervals of four years, in honor of Zeus, in a sacred inclosure called the Altis, in the plain of Olympia, containing many temples and other religious, civic and gymnastic structures, besides very many votive works of art. The festival began with sacrifices, followed by contests and racing, wrestling, etc., and closed the fifth day with processions, sacrifices and banquets to the victors, who were crowned with garlands of wild olive, and on their return home were received with extraordinary demonstrations and were accorded numerous honors and distinctions.

Founded Before Christ.

The actual founding of the games is anterior to history, but Iphitus, king of Elis, with Lycurgus, the great legislator of Sparta, reorganized the games at the bidding of the oracle of Delphi in the ninth century, B. C. The regular chronicle of Olympian victors begins 776 B. C.

The original and most important event in the games was the foot race in the stadium. At first the runners went only once around the course, but later they made two and even three circuits. In the period after the Persian wars the Olympic games attained their zenith. In the Roman period champions from all parts of the world came to Olympia to take part in the games, and the professional element made its appearance. The Greeks themselves took less interest in it, and the games slowly deteriorated.

The Olympic games were abolished by the Roman emperor, Theodosius the Great in 394, A. D., and were renewed in Athens in 1896, after an interval of more than 1,500 years. They were held in the Panathenian stadium, the old stadium of Herodus Atticus. The games games of 1896 were not as largely attended as were expected, many of the best athletes not being attracted on the first occasion. They were held on April 6, the Greek national fete day, and on the five consecutive days. The jumping and running races were for the most part won by American competitors. The Germans won the gymnastics, the Greeks the shooting, the swimming by Hungary.

Interest in Marathon.

Great interest was taken in the Marathon race, from Marathon to Athens, a distance of about 24 miles. A Greek peasant by the name of Loues won the race in 2 hours 58 minutes and 50 seconds. After the games King George crowned the victors with olive branches. The success of the games of 1896 assured their continuance, and at Paris in 1900 and again at Athens in 1904 the participation by different countries was extremely large.

The games to begin here next week, however, will break all records in the number and representative character of the entries. The United Kingdom, naturally, leads in the number of prospective contestants. France, Germany, Belgium, Greece and other continental countries have sent some of their best athletes, and both the United States and Canada will be well represented in all the principal events. The main attraction for Americans will be the track and field sports, for here the Yankees will have the strongest representation. Canada is regarded as a formidable competitor in the running events.

GLARING ERRORS GIVE SEALS GAME

Henley Pitches Great Ball and Whaling Aids His Victorious Stunt.

By R. A. C.

There was a tall sapling called Slivers,
Who gave me a dose of the shivers;
They chased up my spine
In the crookedest line,
I swear me my column still quivers.
—Mac's Mutterings.

Four two baggers and as pretty a triple as ever delighted fandom's fickle eye failed to fetch more than two runs for the Beavers yesterday, and the Seals breezed home in front, 6 to 2.

It was about the weirdest proposition we have gone up against this season for sure. Slivers Henley, that long drawn out species of phoca vitulina, was the busy individual who slipped the hemlock into our teacup. But Slivers was not all, no siree. That boy Whaling, recently arrived from Bushville, was responsible for more than one of the scorelets the visitors harvested. Whaling began to err in the second when he was at the receiving end, and then continued the dire stunt after he was shifted to the left garden.

But what's the use. We got skinned. We know it. We also know Los Angeles moved one notch higher. Yet we're going to start out to overhaul them this month, and then—look out.

Pitchers Started Well.

Kinsella started out in rare form, and might have continued serving puzzlers to the delectation of the grandstand not his teammates blown up at the critical time. Well, Kinsy started off by retiring the Seals in short order, although four faced him in the opener. Henley gave evidence of the fact that his trenchant soupbone was well oiled, for he caused the first three Beavers to sky out, two to Buddy Ryan and the third to Marquis Bassey.

We hate to say it, but this is the way it happened in the fatal second: Melchoir scratched out, and was sacrificed to second by Curtis. McArdle followed with another bingle and reached second when an attempt was made to catch Melch off third. Micky La Longe happened along opportunely for the visitors and copped the third single of the canto, scoring both Melchoir and McArdle. Henley was safe when Cooney threw La Longe out at second, and Slivers ambled to second when a Kinsella bender nipped Mohler on the arm.

The frisky Seals cavorted back and forth around their allotted stations until Whaling was worked into a frenzy of desperation. When the time was ripe the duet—Menley and Mohler—pulled off a double steal of amazing rapidity. Kinsella's error allowed both to land on the rubber. Hildebrand stole second on Whaling, but Impetuous Dora was caught trying to go down to third, Whaling's only worthy feat of the day.

Johnson's Great Hitting.

Johnson opened up the second with a ripping two bagger. It resulted in nothing. In this inning Raftery was soaked again on his sore antenna and had to retire from the game. This resulted in sending Whaling to the outfield and inserting Madden behind the bat. Whalen missed two flies that dropped directly into his paws and overthrew second twice.

Things looked good for a batting rally in the eighth, but after Ote Johnson's noble effort hopes fell flat, for McCredie was an easy third out. Ryan reached first on fielder's choice, forcing Casey at second. Then the Viking came through with his mighty biff to deep center for three bases. Buddy scored.

In their half of the ninth the Mohler bunch got busy again. Melchoir and Curtis singled successively, Melch reaching third and Curtis second, the latter on Whaling's overthrow. McArdle sacrificed Melchoir home on a long high fly to Bassey. La Longe flied out into left field, but Whalen muffed and Curtis registered. With the bases full on two errors by Cooney, Kinsella fielded the third out to Johnson at first.

Portland made her second run in the ninth. Bassey drew four wide ones and Madden drove the sphere into left field for two bags. Bassey reached home, but Tom died on the keystone station after Whalen and Kinsella went out and Casey, who had been walked, was forced a second by Cooney.

SQUEEZE PLAYS.

Portland is crippled badly again. Danzig is out of the game and Raftery's sore arm will probably keep him from playing today.

• •

Just now Ote Johnson is the man who gets the real cheers when he comes to bat. It used to be Danzig, then Madden and Bassey in turn. But now it's the Swede.

• •

Claude Berry got his first sacrifice under the new long fly rule Monday and now he thinks a player ought to get credit for a sacrifice every time he advances a runner on any base by the fly route.

• •

Manager Mac is praying the gods will be generous and allow Graney to reach here in time to pitch Sunday's game. "You ought to see little Graney pitch," enthuses Mac when the subject is broached.

• •

Several times yesterday Umpire O'Connell made decisions which did not meet the approval of the fans in the stand. Maybe there was cause for the voiced complaint, but Jack is one of the squarest fellows in the business. Things sometimes look different from the diamond than from the stand.

NELSON AND GANS FIGHT LABOR DAY

Durable Dane Will Get $20,000 of Purse and Two Thirds Pictures.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, July 9.—Battling Nelson, lightweight champion of the world, and Joe Gans, the dusky ex-champion, who lost his title to Nelson here July 4, are to meet in the ring for the third time, at Ely, Nev., Labor day, September 7.

This was decided upon last night at a meeting between the fighters, their managers and Tex Rickard, the Nevada fight promoter. The purse for which the boxers will fight is $30,000. Nelson is to receive $20,000, win, lose or draw, and Gans is to receive $10,000. Nelson is to receive a two thirds interest in the moving pictures and the club the other third, Gans being left out on this proposition.

Each of the contestants and Rickard posted $1,000 last night to bind the agreement. Rickard will post $10,000 more as soon as he reaches Nevada. The fighters are to select a referee on August 20, and in case of failure to agree, the club is to make the selection 10 days before the fight. The fighters are to weigh in at 133 at the ringside.

CHICAGO AND DETROIT LEAD LEAGUES AGAIN

There are two new leaders in the big leagues today as the result of victories and defeats yesterday. Chicago won from Brooklyn while Philadelphia took two games. The Detroit Tigers secured first place in the American by defeating New York.

Detroit was the only first division team to win yesterday in the American and by winning took the lead and also shoved the New York Highlanders into the cellar. Elberfield has been having his troubles even worse than Griffith had and it is safe to say that he would be a whole lot happier were Griffith still in charge.

The Tigers are living up to their reputation of being a great road team and have already captured three straight from the Highlanders. Jennings has for the first time this year his whole team in first-class condition. O'Leary and Rossman, who were out of the game for so long, are again playing while Big George Mullin has regained his pitching form. This gives Jennings his entire pitching strength and the Tigers are apt to hang on to first place from now on.

CIGARETTES

Over 125,000,000 Imperiales were smoked by the men of the West in 1907. The judgment of thousands of bright, energetic Americans is a good thing to go by.

And the popularity of Imperiales—we might almost say not unlike the popularity of so many of the nation's most celebrated men and women of literature, art and the stage, who first came from California—is rapidly assuming national proportions.

You can buy Imperiales everywhere. The mouthpiece Imperiales with their thin mais paper—crimped, not pasted—their clear, rich tobacco, have fenced off a field for themselves that no other cigarette has ever been able to trespass.
