BRYAN TALKS TO CITIZENS

Lincoln Folk Turn Out En Masse to Congratulate Fellow Townsman.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Fairview, Lincoln, Neb., July 11.—Citizens of every political creed did homage to their fellow townsman yesterday. Thousands of people thronged the vicinity of the Bryan home and the leader of the Democratic party was given an ovation without parallel at Lincoln. Every possible mode of transportation was used to convey the crowds to Bryan's home. When he appeared on the veranda to address them his voice was husky with emotion. He said:

Love of Country First.

"I like to believe that every American citizen places his love of country above his love of party. I like to believe that every American citizen prefers the triumph of that which is right to the triumph of that which he may believe to be right if he is in fact mistaken. And, my friends, building on this basis, we can be both earnest and charitable, for, if we love our country, we love our party; we desire the triumph of justice more than the triumph of erroneous opinions; we are prepared for either victory or defeat, for, if we win we know that the victory can only be permanent if it is a deserved victory, and if it results in the advancement of the commonwealth; and we know that if defeat comes, it can only be temporary if we are in fact right and those who win were wrong, and, thus believing in the omnipotence of truth, we are prepared to meet each other upon an honest footing, discuss our differences honestly, bow submissively to the will of the people, and pray that whichever party wins the country's good will be preserved. (Great applause and cheering.)

Can Afford to Lose If Right.

"My father was a devout man. He did not leave me much in the way of money, and I am not sure but that it was better for me that he did not, for I believe that great wealth is more often a curse than a blessing to the young man who inherits it. A prospective fortune large enough to relieve one from the necessity of toil is more apt to paralyze one's energies than to be a source of stimulation to him. But while my father did not leave me a fortune, he left me something that has been worth more to me than all the money of any millionaire could have been. He taught me to believe that every righteous principle would triumph. (Applause). He taught me when a boy that I could afford to be in the minority, but that I could not afford to be wrong on any question; that if I was in the minority and right, I would some time be in the majority. (Applause and cheers, and cries of 'you will now.') And that if I was in the majority and wrong, I would some time be in the minority.

"I say to you, my friends, that that advice given to me by my father has been worth more to me than any amount of money could be, and I believe that it is a principle that we should imbue in the minds and in the hearts of all, confidence of the triumph of every righteous cause. If evils come, let us have confidence in the intelligence and the integrity and the patriotism of the people. I am an optimist. I believe that the great movements for the uplifting of society are getting forward with resistless force. We can't stop the triumph of the truth. We may accelerate it; we may retard it; we cannot stop it. But if I were to talk too long on principles like these I might be tempted to the issues, and that is not my purpose this morning.

Nomination Comes Freely.

"A great honor has fallen to us. The voters of a great party have made me their standard-bearer. I need not tell you that I did not buy this nomination. I need not tell you that I had no way of coercing people. Why, my friends, I have no way of coercing the people who live about me—no way of coercing the people of Normal or of Lincoln or of Lancaster or of Nebraska, much less of the United States. It is not for me to say whether they have acted wisely at Denver or not; I'm glad that the responsibility is theirs, not mine. (Laughter.)

"This I know; I appreciate it because it has been a free-will offering presented by some six million of my countrymen. We are going to do the best we can to present to the public the issues of this campaign. We are going to meet you as best we can, and then we are going to believe that, whatever the result is on election day, it is going to be good, and, if it is for us, we will feel that we are going to be permitted to put into practice the principles which will be presented, and, if it is against us, we will know that we can learn by the manner in which our opponents apply their principles whether they were right in advocating them or we right in opposing them.

"You have come out at the beginning of the campaign. Come out just as often as you will. And there is one thing about it, the pleasure of success will be moderated by the fact that it will take us from you, and the sorrow of defeat will be softened by the fact that it will leave us with you."

FIRST PHILIPPINES MEDAL M'GEARY'S

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Washington, July 11.—J. A. McGeary of San Francisco is wearing the first medal of honor issued by the government to the volunteers who remained in the army in the Philippines after their terms of enlistment had expired in 1899. Five thousand dollars has been expended by the United States in having these medals made, and men in every state in the union will be decorated when all have been issued.

McGeary, who is employed in the quartermaster general's office, is proud of the fact that his medal bears No. 1. The San Franciscan was a member of company K, Fourteenth United States infantry.

The issuance of the medals was recommended by General Otis, who cabled to President McKinley on July 1, 1899. The president recommended that Otis' suggestion be adopted by congress.

BISHOP M'QUAID'S 40TH ANNIVERSARY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Rochester, N. Y., July 11.—Owing to the state of Bishop McQuaid's health there will be no elaborate celebration tomorrow of the fortieth anniversary of his consecration to the episcopate. Bishop McQuaid is now in his eighty-fifth year and is the oldest member of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in America. On the occasion of the recent visit to Rochester of Cardinal Logue the venerable bishop overtaxed his strength and has not been well since. Owing to his advanced years his condition is regarded as somewhat critical.

Bishop McQuaid is the first Roman Catholic bishop of this city, having been consecrated July 12, 1868. He has held pastorates in New Jersey and for a time was rector of Newark cathedral. He is the founder of Seton Hall college and seminary, and for ten years was its president.

BRITISH TRUST TO FIGHT TRUST

Ironmasters See Ruin in Advance of Carnegie's "Infant" Industry.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

London, July 11.—British steel manufacturers are taking steps today to combine with the Scotch and Welsh producers to fight the threatened invasion of a great international trust composed of American, Russian, Belgian and German concerns.

The British market is already in a state of unrest caused by the vast quantities of steel dumped into the market by foreign concerns. The outsiders have been able to place their surplus output in this country at prices below the actual cost of production here and have threatened a number of English firms with bankruptcy.

According to the Iron and Steel Trades Journal, the new international trust will be composed of the Carnegie trust, three Russian concerns, four German and one Belgian company. Clever agents will be put into the field and a thorough campaign for business commenced.

INSURANCE RATES AGAIN

Underwriters' Position on the Question of Proper Electrical Installation.

In view of what has been said relative to the action of the underwriters in regard to the recent increase of rates on account of the improper electrical installation in this city, it is only fair that the public be given an idea of the underwriters' position in the case.

On December 24, last, the Portland office of the Board of Fire Underwriters informed the Portland Railway, Light & Power company that their method of installation of motors for commercial purposes was not in accordance with the National Electrical code, the accepted authority. The company took no action, and in March the matter was referred to the Board of Fire Underwriters' office in San Francisco. To verify the opinion of the Underwriters' Electrical Engineers in Portland they sought the opinion of Professor Charles L. Cory, head of the department of electrical engineering of the University of California, who reported as follows:

"San Francisco, March 23, 1908.

"Mr. Alfred Stillman, Secretary Executive Committee, Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific, San Francisco, Cal.

"Dear Sir:—My attention has been called to a communication bearing the date of March 14, 1908, addressed to you, from the Portland office of the Board of Fire Underwriters, this communication containing a list of 318 risks, each of which has connection with 550-volt, direct-current electrical circuits, so that electrical energy is supplied from the same generators which furnish electric power for the operation of electric street railway trolley cars with ground returns.

"Such grounded 550-volt, direct-current service to general customers is absolutely wrong and creates an undesirable state of affairs, and one which should be rectified at the earliest possible moment.

"The generally adopted standard for electrical installations, viz., the National Electrical code, states specifically that:

"'Lighting and power from railway wires must not be permitted under any pretense in the same circuit with trolley wires with a ground return, except in electric railway cars, electric car houses and their power stations; nor shall the same dynamo be used for both purposes.'

"The practice of furnishing electric power to individual customers contrary to the above rule is condemned, not only by underwriters, but, as I stated in my opinion rendered to your executive committee of the board in October, 1901, such electrical service is condemned by electrical engineers and street railway managers as well. The National Electrical code also forbids such electrical service in an entirely different section, where it is stated that:

"'Two-wire direct-current systems having no accessible neutral point are not to be grounded.'

"Where such power service is done to the extent reported in Portland, there exists not only the individual hazard in each risk were the 550-volt grounded service is in use, but, owing to the very large number of such grounded services, there can but result a complete and serious conflagration hazard.

"Very truly yours,

(Signed) "C. L. CORY,
"Consulting Engineer."

Upon receipt of Professor Cory's report the following communication was sent to Mayor Lane:

"March 24, 1908.

"The Hon. Harry Lane,
"Mayor of the City of Portland, Or.

"Dear Sir:—I am instructed to respectfully and urgently call you attention to a condition which, it is believed, can be controlled by your honor and the honorable council of the city of Portland, as affecting the public safety. I enclose a report from the underwriters' electricians in Portland describing a method pursued by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, regarded as highly dangerous by the Association of Electrical Engineers, whose code is accepted by electricians throughout the United States as conclusive; also a letter from Professor C. L. Cory, head of the electrical department of the University of California, copies of the National Electrical code, Professor Cory's opinion rendered our executive committee in October, 1901, and Electrical Fire Hazard Pamphlet No. 3, giving a number of authorities on this subject.

"The various underwriters having risks in Portland cannot consistently disregard the opinion of so high an authority as Professor Cory, which is conveyed in the concluding paragraph of his letter. Each company is provided with a duplicate of the list enclosed. If each company having liability in any of the buildings mentioned relieves itself of that liability, it will still be subject to a hazard for which the premium at present charged does not compensate, since fires so started may be communicated to other property covered by insurance.

"The executive committee is confident that it is only necessary to fall your attention to this inexcusable violation of a provision of the one recognized code of safe electrical installation, to have it rectified. Yours very truly,

(Signed) "ALFRED STILLMAN,
"Secretary Executive Committee."

The mayor then took the matter up with the light and power company in an effort to have the defect remedied, but with no avail. All efforts to have defect corrected proving fruitless, it became necessary for the underwriters to make an increased charge of 25c to the rates on all risks thus affected. Hence on April 22, 1908, the following circular was sent to all Portland agents:

"Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific.'

"Portland, Or., June 22, 1908.

To Agents':—You are referred to Electrical Report No. 37, containing a list of buildings in the city of Portland in which are installed motors supplied from grounded trolley generators.

"Radical improvements, requiring a year or more for completion, are contemplated by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, which will relieve the underwriters of a hazard not contemplated in the present rates generally applying to the city. The plan to increase the rates applying to the city of Portland, to offset the conflagration hazard, is temporarily abandoned in view of the expressed intention by the electric company, and minimum charge only made to apply exclusively to these buildings and their contents in which motors continue to be supplied with power from the improperly installed system.

J. C. STONE,
"District Secretary."

We understand that the light and power company is making every effort to comply with our request, and when the defects are rectified the original rates will be restored.
