

RAILWAY TO STAND ITS SHARE OF GILCH BRIDGE

That the Portland Railway, Light & Power company will recede from its present stand and pay its share of the cost of the East Twenty-eighth street bridge and extend its tracks north was construed from the remarks of President Josselyn this morning when Mayor Lane and nine members of the city council accompanied by President Josselyn and General Manager Fuller made a tour of inspection of the streets on which the company desires a franchise. The inspection was not completed this morning as it terminated at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The first stop made was at Halsey and East Nineteenth where the city council was met by delegations from the Irvington Improvement association, and the Holladay Improvement association. The present franchise covers a line on Broadway east from Fifteenth to Nineteenth, thence south to Halsey, where the line turns east to Twenty-second.

The residents of the district and the company want the line extended east on Broadway from Fifteenth to Twenty-second, which would cut out a dip of four blocks and save time coming and going to the city. This plan will undoubtedly be resisted by the council because of the unanimity of opinion prevailing and because of the fact that Halsey street is only 24 feet wide.

Will Cross Bridge.

An automobile was provided at the point by the delegations and the council members were taken around East Twenty-second, East Twenty-fourth and other streets in the Irvington district in order that the members might see the territory over which the company desires to install its tracks.

It was while making the trip in the automobile that President Josselyn referred to the tracks across the East Twenty-eighth street bridge and from his remarks it was inferred that the company would in all probability desire its share of the cost of the bridge and share the tracks across the bridge and invade the rapidly growing territory north of the gulch.

When the party returned to the car a trip was made to Killingsworth avenue where the company has a permit between Union and Broadway avenue. This part of the street is being improved and the company has already started installing its tracks. A franchise of this section which is about 1,500 feet long, continuing the car basis on Killingsworth avenue, where a rest of a few minutes was taken while the official inspected the clubrooms provided for the employees.

Make West Side Tour.

When the trip was resumed the party next stopped at Patton avenue, where President Josselyn explained that the company wished a franchise east on Patton avenue to the Graybrook tract, where the Swift company has a plant, which will be established just east of the site and outside of the city limits.

This afternoon the party will meet at 2 o'clock and inspect the streets on the west side of the river. Before making the tour the committee will inspect the Kamm tract where the city is proceeding with the extension of Salmon street from Fourteenth to Chapman.

Kamm filed a sensational remonstrance against the proposed improvement the other day in which he stated that the city pay a judgment he received from the state circuit court in 1907 on a suit for damages. The judgment amounts to $14,500 and he wants the amount and interest for 23 years before the city makes the improvement.

contractor, and has completed plans for pushing construction of the line for the first seven miles. Rails for that distance are daily expected to arrive in Portland having been en route several weeks. The necessary equipment for building the line is now being brought by Mr. Greenough from recent work completed in Washington.

This move means that Linton is to become an important suburb of Portland and that the city will have two electric railway main lines. It is taken to mean also that there will be a contest for the construction of electric lines to Tillamook, the Oregon Electric having recently officially announced its intention to build a line to Tillamook.

The United Railways company has work toward Tillamook further advanced than its rival, as it has for some months been doing survey work via two or three routes over the coast range. It has run lines via the Wilson river and the Cannon river, and the Cannon river route will probably be adopted.

Since the election of Thomas L. Greenough as president of the United Railways, the settlement of controversies with the city actual construction of the road from Portland to Hillsboro and Forest Grove, and the extension to Tillamook is assured. Mr. Greenough is a large stockholder in the company, and with Seattle associates controls it in policy. He is an experienced railroad

BREAK THROUGH AT R. R. BRANCHES

Ground was broken for the new electric line to Linton this morning by a force of men of the United Railways company. Grading was begun about one mile south of the Claremont tavern, and another spoke in the wheel of suburban lines radiating from Portland is assured, this time giving rapid transit to the north on the west side of the river.

The franchise to the United Railways was granted a little less than two months ago, one stipulation being that the privileges granted should be forfeited unless the work were begun in good faith within 60 days. The track to be laid on the extreme eastern side of the road. The county is to have the right to haul crushed rock from quarries along the road free of cost, and a low price has been fixed for rock that the city may desire to use in street work, making it possible to cut down the cost of rock purchased by the city.

Since the election of Thomas L. Greenough as president of the United Railways, the settlement of controversies with the city actual construction of the road from Portland to Hillsboro and Forest Grove, and the extension to Tillamook is assured. # COUNCIL WILL PASS ALL CITY BOND ORDINANCES

Members of the city council are practically unanimous in passing all the ordinances covering the amendments to the city charter which were declared valid by the supreme court Tuesday at the same time. The council will be in session to pass the ordinances or if there will be, none has shown thus far.

With the same unanimity the members have expressed themselves in favor of the water bonds. They declare that this ordinance authorizing the sale of bonds for a new bridge from Bull Run river to the city is the most important of all and are eager to get a chance to vote on it as soon as possible. As soon as a report is received from City Attorney John P. Kavanaugh to whom the city council gave credit for the city's victory, the ordinance will be drawn up and put through without a dissenting voice. The opinions expressed by the nine members who made the trip of inspection with officials of the street railway company to view the streets over which the company desires a franchise this morning, count for anything.

Of the nine members present on the trip one expressed an opinion that did not favor the immediate passage of all the ordinances, but will be necessary to proceed with the work outlined by the amendments. While they recognized the immediate needs of the city, they also recognized the importance of the other measures, and the general sentiment was in favor of having the city attorney's office draft all the measures and pass them at the same meeting.

While this plan will throw a tremendous amount of work on the city officials at one time it is believed that it will be the best plan in the long run. They say that once the preliminary work is finished the system of transacting the city's business in regard to improvements will be so greatly improved that much of the extra work will be finished in the time upon the city officials will be done away with and the affairs will proceed more smoothly.

ASKS MERCY FOR DEPOSED SLEIGHTS

A Walter Wolfe filed an appeal with the civil service commission in the case of the detectives who were discharged by the police committee several days ago this morning, asking that the decision of the committee be set aside.

Wolfe also expressed himself as intending to have Chief of Police Gritzmacher and Chairman Greene cited for contempt of court.

How this can apply to Greene was not explained by Wolfe. In Gritzmacher's case it is different. An order was issued by the circuit court restraining the chief of police from interfering with the detectives and testifying against them. It has been construed by Wolfe, who appeared as one of the attorneys employed by the detectives, as a violation of the court's order and he says that he will have Gritzmacher haled into court and explain his action.

"Ya-a-a-h," she yelled, and screamed the pickaninny. The mother objected at the top of her voice until the elevator was out of the station. Isabel yelled on the ground floor. Between the pair nothing whatever could be heard in the street, and Isabel was sent home in a hurry.

Taylor had much trouble with his wife a couple of years ago, and a divorce suit, which was very sensational, was instituted. He was accused of not existing to burn John Banister's barn and grainfield. Banister is a brother of Mrs. Taylor. Taylor accused Banister of making the plot between him and his wife. The crime of arson was fastened upon two men, Richard McGrath and Monroe, who were arrested and turned state's evidence, saying they had been hired by Taylor. After a hard fought trial the jury rendered a verdict against Taylor, the plaintiff, and Judge Ellis, now congressman, sentenced Taylor to two and a half years. He was pardoned after serving 18 months.

Taylor claims his enemies in the case were John Banister, his divorced wife and R. J. Bodie of Athena, who is also a brother of Taylor's. These he sues for $50,000 damages.
