

MERCHANTS AND PROFESSIONAL MEN ARE TAKING TO OUT-OF-DOOR LIFE

One-half acre of tomatoes on the farm of J. C. Hostetter near The Dalles. It netted the owner $855.46 last year.

The large quantity sold directly to the local cannery, in the neighborhood of 100 carloads were shipped last year by the Dalles.

The drive through The Dalles suburbs is one of the most fascinating in the state as the country is rolling and the scenery on that account subject to frequent change.

At present these roads are in fairly good condition, but by and by, when the country is fully developed and the era of road improvement strikes in the thoroughfares about the cherry city will prove its most attractive feature.

The future is full of promise for The Dalles as it is for all the Columbia river towns with large agricultural sections surrounding them.

INDIAN WANTS WHITE MAN TO KEEP OFF

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Pendleton, Or., July 16.—Suits has just been filed by Marion Jack against A. E. McFartridge, United States Indian agent, and Roy Perringer.

Back of this complaint lies an interesting story. The government places 440 acres as the limit of Indian land which may be leased by one party.

Commissioner Leupp and Secretary Garfield, who have just been upheld Agent McFartridge in the work of striving to enforce the government's order that no more land be leased.

Itself as are the waving fields of wheat and other grains.

Potatoes and melons are everywhere in evidence and much attention is given to garden truck of every variety known to the temperate zone.

During the last year three new tracts have been opened to settlement near The Dalles and land can be purchased for farm or orchard purposes at from $50 to $200 per acre, according to location and improvements.

Five-year-old cherry tree grown by Dr. G. E. Sanders near The Dalles. There are hundreds of acres of these trees just south of the town.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

The Dalles, Or., July 14.—You may not have heard of this peculiar ailment though you have seen it often. It is an old disease with a new name. Americanitis is spreading rapidly through the United States and the number of its victims is increasing daily. It is responsible for the constantly-growing suburban settlements around large cities, and the exodus which is everywhere taking place from the towns is one of its results.

When a man acquires Americanitis in its most virulent form he is unable to look a city squarely in the eye, and he is never afterward satisfied unless he is in the country and is pottering around an orchard or a potato patch.

The worst thing about Americanitis is that it makes men who are unable to gratify the desires which it engenders, restless; and the best thing about it is that it drives thousands of good people everywhere into the out-of-door life who never had any business to be anywhere else.

The Dalles has caught the infection in its most virulent form, and as a result the country back of it and for miles throughout Wasco county is being turned into magnificent farms and orchards. No one there wants to see the disease abate—and why should they? Its continuance means increased wealth to them and a new title—the Cherry City.

Cherries Are Ripe.

It is a good time now to visit The Dalles. The birds are singing and the excursion is a pleasant one. But do not go there unless you mean to take a drive behind the bluffs which overlook the city on the south, even if you must take the risk of infection from the new disease. It will not hurt you if you catch it, and it may make a new and independent man of you.

At any rate, you will see a panorama of rare pastoral beauty, and if your senses respond to the poetry of nature, you will be well repaid for your time and expense.

The cherries at present are hanging from thousands of trees in great red clusters and the burdened limbs are groaning under their loads of luscious fruit. In every direction now they are picking them, and the camps of their bearers are pitched near the very roots of the trees. If you want to view the orchards in all their native loveliness don't delay, but make the trip at once.

It is surprising to see what has been done in The Dalles section within the last three years in the way of reducing range country, orchard and farm. The townspeople seem to have reached the conclusion all at once that there is big money and pleasant diversion in developing their tributary zone, and they are going at it with a will. Already they have planted several miles of cherry, peach, apple, plum and prune trees, and the area is increasing constantly.

Recently companies have been coming into the field with the purpose of taking over some of the large tracts of land heretofore held onto tenaciously by the owners and whose object is to sell them off in small parcels to farmers who will set them out in trees or otherwise cultivate them. Activity of that kind means much to The Dalles, the importance of which as a shipping point more than the general public, but the every new tract which is placed under improvement.

From 10 to 50 acres of orchard land near the town means independence for any reasonable man after the trees reach the bearing period, and the beauty of it is that the one who owns it is also independent of irrigation. It is just the good old natural process which prevailed in the Garden of Eden, plus modern methods of handling the soil.

With this article appears a picture of a five-year-old cherry tree growing in the orchard of Dr. G. E. Sanders near The Dalles. It certainly does not look as if it lacked nourishment.

Freedom's Visions.

In earlier paragraphs much has been said about cherries and in fact columns might be added regarding variety and yield which would interest orchardists more than the general public, but the impression is not to be derived that The Dalles people are devoting themselves exclusively either to them or to general fruit growing.

An important fraction of the soil is being set out in grapes and one sees acres of them in every direction as he drives back from the town. The rich green of the leaves and the regular well-kept rows of vines is one of the charms of the panorama which presents
