Summer Visitors at the Seashore.

SEASIDE, Or., July 18.—Hundreds now throng the beaches and this resort has never had a season that offered a better outing than the present one. The weather has been ideal and the man who chronically complains of the weather has had to carry a white flag around all week. Reports from the upper Necanicum say that trout fishing has never been better. I. N. Fleischner of Portland was a successful fisherman last week and also Kenneth Fenton of Portland and Ted Higgins of Stanford. There are any number of shell fish too, and not a cottage on the beach but has all it can use.

Now that the season is well started the social side of affairs at the beach is beginning to become more prominent. There have been a number of informal gatherings during the week.

A Queer Craft.

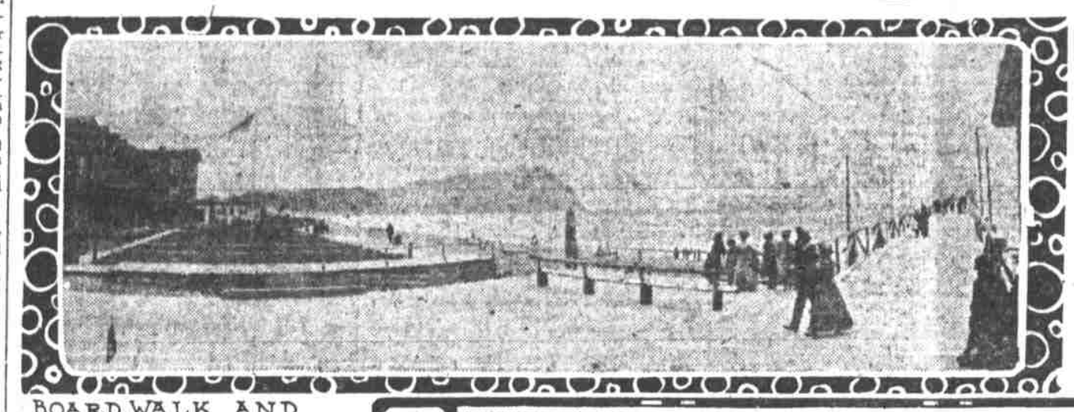
Lily Cardiff is the name of the only foreign vessel that has ever navigated the peaceful waters of the Necanicum. Although this little craft is only seven feet long it has visited all of the principal ports of the world. She was built in Cardiff Spain and has been through all kinds of seas and weather from the rough waters of the German ocean to the pellucid waves of the Red sea. The Lily Cardiff has passed through the straight of Gibraltar, the Suez canal and the Golden Gate. She is built in the form of a tug boat and driven by a propeller. Her length is seven feet and her beam two feet. She carries but one passnger who is engineer, pilot and captain. This man of many occupations sits in the hold of the vessel with his head coming higher than the small smokestack and sends the Lily Cardiff spinning through the water by working pedals with his feet. As the propeller turns she glides through the water with all of the grace and dignity of a Cunard liner. The little craft is guided by a regular pilot wheel which is just in front of the operator. She is fitted out with a compass and prepared to navigate in any bay or harbor of the world. The Lily Cardiff was built by the sailors on the ship Galena which was wrecked near Seaside some time back. She was in service for some time and was used by the crew to come from the Galena to shore in many of the principal ports of the world. One man could get in the littlt tug and quickly work his way to shore. The craft is at present the property of Mr. Will Taylor of the Necanicum boathouse. A large number of visitors at the beach have been attracted by the Lily Cardiff and have been photographed in her.

New Cement Walk.

Seaside is to have 1,200 feet of cement sidewalk to replace the historic old Shell road. The new walk will be eight feet wide and will extend along the Shell road from the Necanicum to the boardwalk on the ocean front. Over one-half of the money for the enterprise has been raised and bids are in the hands of the committee in charge of the construction. Work will be begun in the course of a week and the new walk will be in service before the height of the season is reached. The new walk will follow the Shell road in the main but will be straight. It will be a great convenience to almost every person who visits Seaside. The new walk will be a continuation of Bridge street and make it possible to reach the boardwalk without going through the sand and dirt of the old Shell road. Persons arriving on the train will have a straight walk from the depot to the ocean front and from the board walk at its intersection with the proposed cement walk they will have a mile and a half in each direction. Along the Shell road, which the cement walk will replace, there has grown up quite a little summer city. Over 30 places of business front on it and every few days adds another to the list. Postcard stands, electric theatres, restaurants, shooting galleries, and stores, a dancehall, a bowling alley, a photographer, and a fortune teller are among the enterprises which will be reached by the new walk in the short distance between the bridge and the ocean front. Almost every person in Seaside has occasion to pass down this street each day and the importance of the walk is realized. The committee in charge of the work is: A. H. Wilson, Harry Wheatley and G. M. Grimes. D. C. Pelton of Portland is among those who are promoting the project and almost every property owner of West Seaside is giving it his hearty support.

Elk Near Seaside.

During the past week reports have come to Seaside that there are a number of elk in the hills beyond the resort. It has been told around town that a whole herd of elk have been seen on several occasions in the hills near Seaside. While old hunters discredit this report they say that there are some elk in the hills and most of them are counting on getting one when the season opens. Reports from those who have been in the woods are also to the effect that the black-tail coast deer are plentiful, as are also the black bear.



BOARD WALK AND PACIFIC PIER, SEASIDE.

Seaside, as well as being a beach resort, offers opportunites to hunters and many take advantage of this. As soon as the open season begins a number of parties hunt big game with successful results. There are hunters around the resort who take parties out. It is scarcely over 12 miles from town to where big game is hunted.

Old-Fashioned Flowers.

One of the novelties of Seaside is an old-fashioned flower garden of E. Damann of Necanicum Inn. Mrs. Damann has devoted a half-acre tract back of her cottage to the culture of flowers and especially to the old-fashioned varieties which have been greatly neglected by gardeners of late years. In this small space the industrious little woman has some 60 different kinds of flowers, most of which are of the old-fashioned species. Dahlias, verbenas, fox glove, sweet William and daisies flourish in the sunshines and the salt air adds color to their blooms. There is honeysuckle, forget-me-nots and pansies in any quantity and poppies of every variety, for poppies are Mrs. Damann's special favorite. The collection in the garden has been growing in size from year to year and every summer finds the diligent gardener with a larger number of her old-fashioned favorites. Some of the flowers grow quite well in the sandy soil, but for other species ft has been found necessary to bring in heavier earth. Mrs. Damann works in her garden a number of hours every day and will seldom trust any one with the care of her flowers. During the summer the display of flowers attracts the attention of many visitors at Seaside and those who like the old-fashioned varieties find Mrs. Damann always ready to show them through her garden.

LONG BEACH AND VICINITY

North Beach, Wash., July 17.—The week past has seen a steady increase in the population of the entire beach. While the traffic at the hotels is not quite as great as it was last week more cottages have been opened. The mail line at the Long Beach postoffice has extended out on the sidewalk for the first time this season, which indicates the increase in the cottage arrivals. Those at the different resorts along the beach are enjoying themselves in every possible way and not a minute of vacation time is allowed to pass without something to make it worth while. Charles Arthur has two large automobiles on the beach and parties are being taken to the wrecks and other points of interest. There is horseback riding, fishing, swimming and dancing. Bonfires illuminate the beach from one end to the other. Moving picture theatres entertain crowds. Fortune tellers have opened their booths and Professor Griffith, the phrenologist, explains to the beach visitors the great possibilities in the bumps on their heads.

Guests, neighbors and visitors of the Driftwood cottage enjoyed themselves Thursday night at a quilting party given by the clever little hostess of the cottage.

Mr. Hutchinson of the Salt Air hotel gave a dinner party during the week for his friends.

Sunset cottage had a bonfire Wednesday night.

Swimming at Long Beach.

The Crystal Baths have opened at Long Beach and the big plunge is very popular. Swimming in the surf is impossible except to experts and even when indulged in by them it is accompanied with danger. On account of this a great many persons who enjoy swimming go to the plunge every day. The fact that the chill has been taken from the water and an average temperature of 75 degrees maintained makes the bathing especially enjoyable. The big tank is filled every day with a fresh supply of salt water. While a number of expert swimmers and divers spend a part of each day following the sport there are also many beginners visit the plunge, where they learn to swim. Frank Canaris, one of the fathers of Long Beach, is the owner of the place and is around the office, where he greets his many old friends.
