PORTLAND MOST POPULAR CITY WITH BROOKLYNITES

Some of the most valuable advertising Portland has received as a favored tourist resort is growing out of the visit of the Brooklyn Tourist league, which made this city its place of sojourn for a day. The Brooklyn Eagle of July 13, under a heading, "Brooklyn League Chooses Portland," printed the following letter from J. B. Creighton, the league secretary:

"At the close of the transcontinental tour of the Brooklyn league, embracing 9,000 miles of rail travel and the inspection of 25 cities, a vote was taken at the journey's end among the 75 members as to the most popular city seen. Portland, Or., won by a large majority. It is interesting to note the reasons why these citizens of Greater New York should render this verdict, for among Pacific coast cities alone there were included, besides Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"Only one day and an evening was given to the Rose City, but it was a glorious, bright and busy day.

Begin to Notice.

"Our train had made the short run from Tacoma in the night and came to a halt in the Portland depot at 5 o'clock in the morning. Every one dressed leisurely and strolled up to the Hotel Portland for breakfast. Once on the street, we noticed the cleanliness of the city and the substantial aspect of its buildings. Arriving at the hotel, we found it one of the most beautiful and commodious we had seen. Before breakfast was over we had a call from a delegation of prominent citizens, headed by 'Tom' Richardson, manager of the Portland Commercial club, who may be styled a human dynamo and a walking encyclopedia on Portland. Mr. Richardson did not waste any time in letting us know what had been planned for the entertainment of the Brooklyn party, and started by saying: 'We are going to take you for the grandest trolley ride on the American continent.'

Straining Superlatives.

"All through the west we had been hearing such superlatives as 'biggest,' 'greatest,' 'highest,' applied to things in Spokane, Seattle and Tacoma, so we listened to Mr. Richardson's assertions with a mental reservation that he could not 'make good' any more than the enthusiastic citizens of other places. But before the day was over we learned that Portland had a story which draws heavily on the English language and sometimes makes even a superlative inadequate. As the fragrance of the all-pervading odor of Portland roses persists in memory, so does our recollection go back to the unparalleled freshness of Columbia river salmon, served at the Portland hotel. We confess we never knew before or since what salmon is. With the adequate development of continental rapid transit, New Yorkers will insist upon going to Portland for luncheon, just to taste Columbia river salmon, three hours out of the water.

"The trolley ride about the built-up portion of the city showed us a business section in all respects as modern as anything in the east, a residence section where people live in beautiful detached homes with well-kept lawns and rose bushes in bloom on every walk. But the crowning feature of the ride was to Council Crest, where, after a winding journey, the car came to a stop 1,200 feet above the city. From this height the towering form of Mount Hood was seen resting against the eastern sky—silent, snow-capped, majestic. On the right the broad, placid surface of the Willamette, and to the north the Columbia, America's second largest river, and here visible for 75 miles. In the middle distance a billowy succession of small mountain ranges, with here and there glimpses of a mirror-like lake, and vistas of deep valleys and towering trees everywhere. Enveloping all that inspiring landscape was the sweet-scented air—cooled by the snows of Mount Hood, tempered by the warmth of the Japan current to the west and perfumed by growing flowers.

"All who have visited the tomb of Napoleon will recall the effect of light passing through prisms and shimmering down upon the sarcophagus of the hero of France. The beauty of it is awe-inspiring.

No Scenery Like It.

"The perspective from Council Crest, looking toward snow-covered Mount Hood, contains a natural atmospheric prism, which, about sunset of a clear evening, produces the most beautiful outdoor color effects on this continent. Delicate shades of pink deepen into royal purple, and after darkness rests upon the foothills the gleaming summit of Mount Hood shines out clear and white, still illumined by the rays of a sun which for us has already set.

"Our day in Portland was at an end and we realized too late our mistake in giving so short a time to a place where earth and sky, river and sea intermingle.

"At the departing train our new friends came to bid us good-bye and to fill the staterooms with roses. We were again on the road, and distance between us and Portland was ever increasing, but the fragrance and beauty of her roses traveled with us, while the memory of her happy people and her glorious atmosphere seem as distinct today as on that August evening one year ago.

J. B. CREIGHTON.
"Secretary Brooklyn League."

"Now, what shall we name the baby?" inquired the professor's wife. "Why, this species has been named," answered the professor, in astonishment. "This is a primate mammal, homo sapiens."—Pioneer Press.

CITY BONDS SELL AT BIG PREMIUM

Bidders Eager to Land Portland Securities—Local Men Win.

If there were any Portlanders left yesterday who believed that times are not good; that there is any of last fall's financial flurry remaining, all those skeptics had to do to convince themselves to the contrary was to attend the meeting of the ways and means committee of the city council yesterday afternoon when $78,672.54 worth of city improvement bonds were sold at a premium which ranged from 2 4-10 per cent to 3 per cent. There were 10 bidders submitting 14 bids and not for more than a year have the bids been so keen and spirited as yesterday.

City Auditor Barbur said that the bidding was the best since he had been auditor and added that the bidding indicated the financial tone of the city more than anything that could be put forward. The lucky bidders were all Portlanders and their bids and amounts follow:

Frank S. Dodge, for the water department, $49,000 with a premium of 2 per cent. A. H. Maegley, $10,000 at 2¾ per cent. J. D. Kelty, $5,000 at 2.61 per cent. Mayor Harry Lane, for the police and fire relief fund, $4,000 at 3 per cent. A. O. U. W. $5,000 at 3, and the A. O. U. W., $5,672.54 at 2.6.

RAILROAD EMPLOYES GET NEW SCHEDULE

As a result of daily conferences which have been held for the last five weeks between officials of the O. R. & N. and officers of railroad men's organizations a new schedule was decided upon yesterday covering conditions of employment and rates of pay for men in the train service. The dispute was as to what constituted a day's work in freight train service. The contention of the employes was that the O. R. & N. was not putting into effect fully the agreements made in Chicago in April, 1907.

The chairman of the organization of conductors was William Buckley of The Dalles. G. L. Richardson of Portland acted as chairman of the committee representing the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. S. M. Berry, vice-president of the Order of Railway conductors, living at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and James Murdock of Cleveland, vice-grand master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, were here also.

The conferences began June 5 and were concluded yesterday. The trainmen made their headquarters at the Hotel Perkins.
