Convention at Portland Will Strive for Highway Legislation.

More earnest interest and enthusiasm is being shown in the forthcoming good roads convention at Portland than was ever before displayed by Oregon people. The various counties are to be well represented, and the delegates ar coming with well defined ideas of what they want to accomplish in actual results through Oregon's road I mprovement campaign

Among the strongest delegations will be one numbering 20 men, headed by be one numbering 20 men, headed by Judge J. W. Woodin of Washington county. They have discussed the questions that are involved in road improvement and are prepared to submit propositions that they desire to see crystalized into legislation. It is being realized throughout the state that Oregon cannot go far toward better roads until there are necessary laws on the statute books to enable the progressive elements in a community or county to initiate and carry out road improvements.

Washington county has built some

Washington county has built some good magadamized roads, and the few miles built have shown the people enough to convince them that kood roads pay. They want more of the same kind of roads.

"I must respectfully decline to put in my time and the expenses of my automobile to carry visitors about Portland and suburbs." said a local business man who has been in the habit of responding to all requests for showing tourists the city and surroundings whenever a call is made upon him and his car.

"The city of Portland has its wonderful features, and the surrounding country is a heautiful region for tourists to visit, but I am getting weary of bumping over some of the roads that run past the mest valuable hand and lots. The owners of these properties would like to have the city grow and property continue to rise in value, as a result of the coming of new people to our city and state, but when it comes to improving the streets they are not at and state, but when it comes to im-proving the streets they are not at

We are expected to go on just the "We are expected to go on just the same driving visitors about to show them the city and country, and sending them back east filled with enthusiasm to advertise Oregon to homeseckers. What justice is there in booming the property and lands of people who will do nothing to help their own interests or assist the people of the state to improve conditions."

These are the questions that men are asking and the attitude that boosters are disposed to take toward the moss-back elements of the state that neglect of the state. It is said there is no use trying to sell farms that cannot be reached by wagon in bad weather, or town lots where wood and coal cannot delivered in winter time because of impassible condition of roads and Maine's Latest Snake Story.

From the Lewiston Journal.

An old hen with a large family of emigrants to the United States than small chickens was recently given an empty harrel turned down on its side for a coop on the writer's premises. One day recently the hen gave the signal of distress used by all good grangers and the harrel was quickly surrounded by the fighting members of the household.

A large smake was found in the bar-rounded by the lighting niembers of the household.

A large snake was found in the barrel and quickly lynched. Several busches were noticed on the reptile's testion called with emphasis to the conbody and he was ripped up the back with a pair of shears and seven chickens were found gasping for breath. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Chicago, July 24.—A determined fight against increase of freight rates by railroads centering in Chicago was began today when a committee of shippers appointed by Fred W. Upham of the Illinois Manufacturers association met at the headquarters of the organization.

W. C. Brown, senior vice-president of New York lines, is expected to attend the session of the conference on behalf of the railways. Upham said:

"The shippers are willing to meet representatives of the railways for the purpose of finding out what they propose to do, but the fact is, the shippers are prepared to fight. A proposition to increase freight rates at this time is not to be viewed with equanimity by those who are trying to fosfer the revival of trade in this country."
