Rev. Doctor McComb of Boston Gives Novel View of What He Terms New Form of Religion—Cure by Mental Process.

(From a Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 7.—Dr. Samuel McComb, the distinguished American divine, head of the Emmanuel movement in Boston, and author of the now famous "Religion and Medicine," has made a big impression here. An organization for carrying out the doctor's ideas has been established in London, and before many years, if the movement progresses in the future at the same rate at which it is going today, London will have an institution similar to the one in Boston. Since Dr. McComb arrived in England he has received thousands of letters, written by persons all over the United Kingdom, asking for his advice as to how to treat difficult mental and physical cases, and he has delivered many addresses before various learned and religious bodies.

Plans for Future.
In order to learn something about Dr. McComb's plans for the future, and to obtain an account of his work in London so far, the writer recently interviewed him at his hotel near Trafalgar Square.

"It might now be said," remarked the doctor, "that our movement, started in so small a way in Boston a few years ago, has become international. When I go back to America I shall leave behind in London a loose organization which will gradually take permanent and definite form. We hope in time to establish a great central place where we can give treatment to those in need of our help."

Plans for Future.
"I am generally recognized today," continued the doctor, "that the mind exerts a very powerful sway over the body, and modern science admits the influence of course I differ entirely from the Christian Scientists in limiting the field of operations to disordered states of the nervous system. I hold that to apply mental treatment in the region of organic disease is to waste valuable time which might otherwise be used to the better advantage of the patient."

Mental Healing.
"Where we differ from most of the 'mental healing' fraternity is the fact that in reaching our diagnosis, and even in subsequent treatment wherever possible, we call in the most expert medical aid we are able to obtain. At the same time we do not discount the power of the mind over the body. The investigations of Charcot, Dubois, Oliver Judge, Crookes, and hosts of others have fully demonstrated this fact. Our treatment applies especially to such cases as hysteria, hypochondria, neurasthenia, psychosomatic, fixed obsessions, and all those disorders which may be called on the borderland of functional mental diseases. Another type of character which we treat are those who suffer from alcoholism, morphinism, and even semi-criminalia."

WIFE AND BABY PLACED IN JAIL

Kalama Woman Deserts Part of Family to Elope With Father of Three.

A mother, with her young baby in her arms, is in the county jail because she left her husband and two other children to meet another man who in turn left his wife and all of his three children to be with the woman.

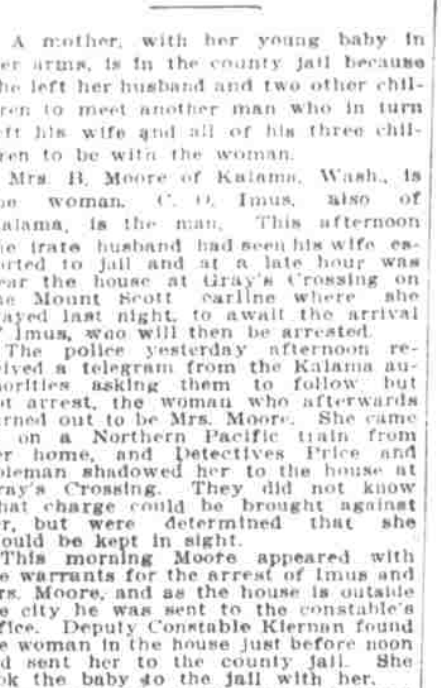

Mrs. B. Moore of Kalama, Wash., is the woman. C. O. Imus, also of Kalama, is the man. This afternoon the late husband had seen his wife escorted to jail and at a late hour was near the house at Gray's crossing on the Mount Scott carline where she stayed last night, to await the arrival of Imus, who will then be arrested. The police yesterday afternoon received a telegram from the Kalama authorities asking them to follow, but not arrest, the woman who afterwards turned out to be Mrs. Moore. She came in on a Northern Pacific train from her home, and Detective Price and Coleman shadowed her to the house at Gray's Crossing. They did not know what charge could be brought against her, but were determined that she should be kept in sight.

This morning Moore appeared with the warrants for the arrest of Imus and Mrs. Moore, and as the house is outside the city he was sent to the constable's office. Deputy Constable Kieran found the woman in the house just before noon and sent her to the county jail. She took the baby also to the jail with her. Imus, so far as known, has not visited the house. There is a statutory charge pending against him, and he will also be taken into custody as soon as found. Moore formerly taught school in Enterprise, Or.

Judge Cleland set August 29 as the date upon which Mrs. Collins should appear in court and show cause why the order asked for should not be granted.

EXPRESSMAN AGAPE AT FEMINE BEAUTY FALLS THROUGH WINDOW

Many a man has had his head turned by feminine beauty, for the charm of woman's loveliness is proverbially disconcerting. But the results are not always so disastrous or so sudden as those which attended the fascination yesterday of an expressman by the beauty of a bevy of California girls.

There are eight of the girls, successful subscribers to the magazine, are being given a tour of the Pacific north-west yesterday they arrived at the Hotel Danmore, where they are stopping under the chaperonage of Mrs. E. R. Hayward of this city.

The girls were all about the entrance when the expressman was unloading their trunks. Charmed, he could not keep his eyes off them, and as a result met disaster. There is a glass window in front of the hotel, with a down-lapping fringe of glass panes. The man smashed his head into these, breaking three of them out and knocking himself even more unconscious than he was before. However, his head will probably recover before his heart does.

The girls all express themselves delighted with their trip, and especially with Portland. They expect to leave Monday for Tacoma, Seattle and the sound. On their way north they visited San Francisco and Shasta Springs. The young ladies who make up the party are: Elizabeth Walters, Los Angeles; Bernice Gustave, Los Angeles; Agnes McMartin, Ventura; Helen Hirschfeld, Ventura; Pauline Howard, Los Angeles; Louanna Satterlee, Monrovia; Madeline E. Hill, Los Angeles; Eva Tattersall, Redlands.

BRITISH RULE IN INDIA DOOMED.

Returning Traveler Says Natives Have Learned Their Strength.

Los Angeles, Aug. 7.—Referring to the United Press dispatches from England saying that a general uprising in India is feared, Louis H. Hartman, a prominent politician of Albany, N. Y., who has just returned from India, said today that the fear was well founded. He expressed the opinion that very few more of the natives would starve under British rule.

"The natives are beginning to feel that it is time they are treated as human beings," he said. "England has ruled India for 150 years and it would have prospered under its own rule. It is equally true that England's benevolence toward the Indian has been mixed with commercial selfishness and stamped with the glory of the British crown."

"The Hindus are a mild people, but the progress of Japan has awakened them to the power of their great numbers and it will not be long before they will be in a revolt that will stir the whole world."

FEDERAL PRISONERS BREAK FOR LIBERTY.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Aug. 7.—A cordon of soldiers was thrown across Angel Island today in a systematic search for men who were under sentence at Alcatraz island military prison. The men escaped while at work with a number of other prisoners at the quarry on Angel Island.

Heavy guards are patrolling the shores, as the military authorities believe the fugitives have been unable to reach the mainland. The men who escaped were short-term prisoners, one serving a six-months and one a nine-months term. Sentries with loaded rifles guarded the prisoners as they took out rock for use on roads and government buildings and had orders to fire on anyone trying to escape. The army officers believe the fugitives are still on the island, no boats having been reported missing. They say the men could easily subsist on nuts and berries which grow luxuriantly on the island and are now ripe for a period of 10 or 12 days. There are plenty of springs to provide them with water.
