Paris Streets Blocked—Wine-growing Districts in Distress—Louis Latapie on Socialists.

The labor crisis has been brought home to Paris by the lamentable conditions of the streets, nearly a third of which are obstructed with heaps of gravel and mortar, wheelbarrows, scaffolding, sheds, barriers and every description of impediment. Not since the commune of 1871 have Paris thoroughfares been in such a terrible condition. The complaints of the public are loud and threatening and popular indignation is expressed against the General Labor confederation which the Parisians feel convinced is the cause of all the trouble.

M. Bienvenue, chief engineer of municipal works, declared that the demands of labor unions have become so excessive that the cost of excavating a cubic meter of soil has increased 50 per cent within 12 months. Almost every day workmen strike, and even when they put in an appearance at the sheds they lounge about and scarcely do any work.

Already the Chamber of contractors has decreed the suspension of work at the principal sheds and demanded revocation of contracts with the city of Paris, owing to the impossibility of executing them because the workmen have reduced the amount of daily work by 40 per cent. and demand between 30 and 50 per cent increase of wages. Meanwhile the Paris streets in those parts of the city where work has been begun and abandoned remain practically impassable.

The wine-growing districts of the Midi are again in distress. One of them, at least, the district of Beziers, is far worse off than it was last year at the time of the municipal strikes in our departments. But this time the misfortunes of the Midi arise from thunder and hailstorms. Large tracts covered with vineyards have been devastated. Reports received at the ministry of agriculture state that 15,000 acres of vine yards have been destroyed in the Beziers region. With their harvest prospects ruined, great numbers of peasants will, it is feared, be in need of public relief.

Trammels due to the law are stifling French industries and enterprises, in the opinion of M. Louis Latapie, who in the "Republique Francaise" discusses the strike of the employes on the Seine passenger boats. He says:

"The socialists have only recently discovered the power of the arm which the law of 1884 has put in their hands. They are beginning to handle it with a certain mastery. They have already driven abroad such industries as clothing, weaving, embroidery; they held the building trade in check in Paris for more than a year; they almost succeeded in stopping the construction of the Metropolitan, and are openly preparing for a general strike. And all this by the sole employment of the law of 1884, which the government and the chamber dare not reform. Union man! The term answers to everything, or rather enables one to reply to nothing. Union labor has all rights and no duties. The union is all-powerful and intangible."

GERMANY

Inventor of "Blood Cure" Sentenced—Emigration Decreases 80 Per Cent.

The extraordinary credulity which still prevails among a large section of the population was well illustrated by a prosecution at Brunswick, which resulted in a man named Charles Albrecht being sentenced to three years' penal servitude for criminal quackery. Albrecht practiced as a quack doctor at Kirchbrak, and to his many clients he recommended the blood of executed murderers as a remedy for all kinds of ailments. The demand for this gruesome medicine was enormous, and in order to cope with it Albrecht obtained a quantity of pig's blood, which he bottled and sold as the blood of beheaded murderers at 12s a bottle. His profits were very large, and his patients, who numbered hundreds, blindly obeying his directions, drank the pig's blood, believing it to be the blood of criminals who had died on the scaffold. The same remedy was recommended for heart disease, consumption, gout, skin disease and practically every other form of sickness.

There has been a remarkable fall in the volume of emigration from the ports of Hamburg and Bremen during the first six months of the present year, and if this may be taken as a sign of the general well being of the working classes in Germany the empire ought to be particularly flourishing at the present time. During the first six months of 1907 111,317 emigrants sailed from Hamburg; this year the number was only 29,890. From Bremen there sailed 130,696 persons in the first half of 1907; this year the number has fallen to 25,474. The flow of emigrants is always largely composed of Russians and Poles, and as the desire to escape to new homes across the Atlantic shows no falling off on the part of the two nationalities named, the decline must have been almost entirely on the part of emigrants from Germany proper. As a matter of fact, work is so plentiful throughout Germany that immigrants from neighboring nations are flocking thither and are welcomed.

A German statistician who made inquiries to find out in which European country people live longest arrived at the following conclusion: Germany, with her 55,000,000 inhabitants, has only 78 persons who passed the age of 100, while France, with her population of 40,000,000, has 213 centenarians. England and Ireland have 146, Scotland 46, Denmark 2, Belgium 5, Sweden 10, and Norway, with her 2,200,000, has 23. Switzerland cannot boast of a single one, but Spain counts 410 among her 18,000,000 population. The number of centenarians is astonishing in the Balkan states. Servia has 573, Roumania 1,084, and Bulgaria beats the record with 3,883—one to every 100 inhabitants.

TREE A MONUMENT

It Marks the Grave of an Admirer of President Jackson.

Salem Correspondence Philadelphia Record.

In the Baptist graveyard at Canton, near here, lies the body of an old Revolutionary soldier named James Sayres. A rude, unlettered sandstone marks his grave, but a more conspicuous monument is a large hickory tree, the trunk of which, three feet from the ground, measures 51½ inches in circumference.

James Sayres was an ardent admirer of Andrew Jackson, so often called "Old Hickory" from the character of being so unbending in any cause which he believed to be right. Mr. Sayres always wore a sprig of hickory on his breast on "training days," and before he died directed that a hickory tree be planted on his grave. This was done, and after the tree attained proportions deemed unsuitable to adorn a grave it was dug up. Another tree sprang from the roots left in, and this in time was also dug up.

When a third tree appeared, with a persistency in a good cause worthy of emulation, relatives of the deceased directed that it be not disturbed. Hence the tree of large proportions that annually showers its nuts over the grave of the deceased admirer of "Old Hickory."

LIFE BELTS CONDEMNED.

Inspectors Order New Equipment on Transpacific Liner Siberia.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, Aug. 8.—A pile of worthless life preservers is lying on the pier where the big Pacific Mail liner Siberia is docked, having been dragged from the cabins of the big ship by United States inspectors. The investigation of the inspectors revealed that the belts condemned are filled with tule reeds that have split, and cork that has rotted to such an extent as no longer to be able to support the weight required.

It was also discovered that much of the ship's rubber hose is in bad condition.

The Pacific Mail people are said to know nothing of the matter, but the big pile of worthless life preservers is still on the dock.
