

FORESTERS WILL HONOR SUPREME CHIEF RANGER

Strenuous Enthusiast at Head of Great Order Will Be Escorted by Marching Members to Big Meeting at Armory Tuesday Night.

Oregon and Portland Foresters have completed all arrangements for the convention which has been planned for this week in honor of John J. O'Grady, supreme chief ranger of the United States. Mr. O'Grady will arrive in Oregon today and will be entertained at Salem before coming to Portland.

A. L. Brown, of Salem, and grand chief ranger for Oregon, will meet Mr. O'Grady at Redding, Ore., today and escort him to the state capital. Leaving Salem the party will come to the Rose City by the electric carline and take a trip up the Columbia to view he has gone he has met with enthusiastic receptions and much good is expected to result from his visit in Oregon. He will be accompanied through Washington and Idaho by W. H. Klepper, past chief ranger of Oregon.

Mr. O'Grady is a comparatively young man and is a lawyer in New York city. Since becoming the head of the order about a year ago he has worked untiringly for the good of Forestry and has built up the organization to a point of efficiency never before reached. He depends largely upon the support of the energetic efforts of the younger mem-the vast waterway that feeds the great wheat empire of the Pacific northwest.

Tuesday evening the real entertainment in Mr. O'Grady's honor will commence in Portland when a street parade of Foresters from Oregon, Washington and Idaho will be held. The marchers will proceed to the Armory where Mr. O'Grady will deliver an address to the members. A. Brauer, chief ranger for Oregon, will introduce the visitor and preside at the meeting. Music will be provided by a band, the Swedish Singing club and the Oregon Male quartet. The public is cordially invited to this meeting where arrangements have been made to welcome them.

Many to Be Initiated. A union meeting will be held Wednesday evening for Foresters at which 300 candidates will be initiated into the secrets of Forestry. The initiation will be indulged in by a select team. Mr. O'Grady will also take part in the ceremonies as will grand court officials of Washington.

After leaving Portland, Mr. O'Grady will visit Washington and Idaho as

PRINTERS' DELEGATES GATHER FOR INTERNATIONAL MEET

Portland will be represented at the International Typographical union by A. R. Lawton, delegate from this city chosen by the local Typographical union.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN. (Copyright, 1908, by Frederic J. Haskin.)

Washington, Aug. 8.—The eyes of every printshop in the United States will be on Boston today. Union typographers from everywhere will gather there for tomorrow's annual convention of the International Typographical union. The organizations constituting the other five of the allied printing trades will also be on hand, among them the stereotypers, the pressmen and the linemen. They will all work in harmony toward the solution of the problems which confront organized labor in the printshops of the country.

When the printers get to Boston they will have one of the times of their lives. The president of that city, Paul Revere, traveled in announcing the impending danger that threatened the people. Sight-seeing automobiles will be used to carry the delegates to the other historic points in and around Boston.

There will be a good deal of business before the convention, one of the things to come up before it for consideration being the old age pension question. Attention will be directed to the flaws that the actual working of the system has developed.

Most Progressive Union. The International Typographical union has won for itself the reputation of being about the highest and most progressive body of organized labor in the United States. It has been a pioneer in many movements in which the country at large is deeply interested. One of these movements is that of old age pensions. While other organizations have been debating the question among themselves, or knocking at the doors of congress to establish such a pension fund, the union printers have gone to work and established one, and have it working in fine working order. It is true that the pension they give is only $4 a week, but the assessments are correspondingly low, and as soon as sentiment within the organization reaches the pitch which will warrant an increase of the assessment, there will probably be an increase in the weekly pension.

Printers' Home. The printers have also established themselves a home for their sick. It is at Colorado Springs, Colo., and represents an investment of nearly $200,000. The average number of inmates last year was 113, with such a large waiting list that it is a task of increasing the assessments for it from 10 to 15 cents per member in order that the home may be enlarged. A great many of the inmates have tuberculosis, and it is said that under the treatment they get at the home about 50 per cent of them recover. The printers throughout the country are proud of this home and feel that all of them have in it a sort of insurance against the evil day when prolonged sickness visits them.

The newspapers of the country are kind to the printers and are anxious to check the spread of tuberculosis. Forced to do indoor work, often in unsanitary and ill-ventilated places, they are peculiarly susceptible to the ravages of the white plague. This led them to join the vanguard in the work of eradicating the disease. Tuberculosis, and no other organization of its size in the country has contributed more to the promotion of this campaign. The union printers of the country, out of 203 members of the New York union who were examined, 27.5 per cent of the whole number, or 55 per cent had tuberculosis. Yet the death rate shown by the official records is only 1.7 per 100.

Boon for Young Men. A well-equipped correspondence school of printing has been organized by the union, and it is said to be giving a perfect solution of the problem. The school is very low, and as a result the school is proving a boon to a large number of young men. There is another movement with which they have identified themselves, and for which they are body and soul. It is the movement to stand in season and out of season, to stand in the government ownership of telegraphs. At such a meeting they have advocated such ownership by the voting of strong resolutions in its favor.

Many a dollar has been spent by the printers in their crusade for shorter hours and better wages. It is estimated that in the last three years the organization has spent over $4,000,000 in that direction. But this has not been money wasted as will be seen when it is stated that their wages have been increased $2,000,000 a year for three years and that their hours have been reduced more than 7,000,000 a year in that time.

Not Letting Up. The printers are not letting up in their fight. Their official organ, the Typographical Journal, each month takes the larger offenders and managers to task in one way or another. One of their favorite ways is with the little stickers which they paste on every piece of printed matter not bearing the union label that comes their way. This they send to the manager of the printing done, and before long—if his business is affected by organized labor—their printing is done at a union shop. In some sections every possible device is used to familiarize the public with these little stickers. At some places they throw them on theatre curtains with a magic lantern between acts.

The union is now in the throes of a lawsuit to determine whether it has the right to wage war on an establishment which stands for the open shop. The Butterick Publishing house refuses to recognize union labor in any of the branches of its activity and the printers are now having a going affair, hot and heavy. At last the publishing company asked the federal courts of Montana to determine whether the union had a right to designate it as a scab and its office as a "rat" office. The matter is still pending, but the union is confident that it will win out in the end.

Organized Labor. Organized labor has been enjoying a phenomenal growth the world over. It is said that there are now 8,000,000 white organized workers in the world, of whom 2,500,000 are to be found in the United States. Of these 1,500,000 are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Germany is a stronghold of union labor. There are fully 6,000,000 organized printers there, and they have nearly $1,400,000 in their treasury. In England the printing trade workmen are strongly organized, and they have grown in influence and in numbers in the last few years. There has been a steady growth of the number of local unions affiliated with the parent body. During the past fiscal year there were 51 new charters issued, making a total of 418 locals in the union. There has also been a gradual extension of the membership in the local unions. Reports show that 85 per cent of all the typesetting machines in the territory covered by local unions are operated by union men. A year ago the paying membership of the union was 47,740. When a last convention was held at Hot Spring, Ark., the cry was raised for 50,000 members by the time of the present meeting at Boston.

Oldest Union. The International Typographical union is the oldest trade union in the United States. It was organized in 1850 as the National Convention of Journeymen Printers, and was conducted under that name until 1862, when the title of the organization was changed to the National Typographical union. This name, in turn, was changed to the present name in 1869. The union is now the largest in the world, with the American Publishers' association providing for arbitration. It was made in 1900 to run until 1907, and has since been carried forward to 1912 on practically the same terms.

The practical masters of the art of printing, and the printers of the United States, are an intelligent body of men. Progressive, filled with the national helplessness and mutual cooperation, they have done much to help along the development of American printing, and have aided in the growth of American printing the best in the world and American printing the finest exponent of the trade anywhere to be found.

Abreast With Times. Identified in a most intimate way with the great work of making the American newspaper, they keep abreast with everything that goes for progress and are making themselves more than a force united in their own interests. They are making a leading factor in the onward march of civilization, and their early advocacy of measures to check the spread of tuberculosis, their first solution of the old age pension question, their advanced ideas on the care of their sick, are but a few of the things that have led in the solution of the great and intricate problems which confront a growing nation.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 8.—A man 60 years of age and reportedly dressed as a woman was found wandering about St. Louis, Mo., who appears to be a victim of forgotten identity. He was unable to tell his name or give any account of himself, only to say he was born in France. In his pockets were found a gold watch and three diamond rings were found.

INSURGENTS WAR ON MOSLEM FARMERS. (United Press Leased Wire.) Meadonia, Aug. 8.—There is a wide feeling of discontent in Meadonia. For a considerable time past Moslem landowners and farmers in the village of Meadonia have complained of the manner in which British insurgent bands have crossed the frontier and committed outrages in all directions. In his pockets nearly $400 in gold, which cannot be traced to any source, have proved worse than useless. The Object of His Visit. The object of his visit to the Pacific coast is to bring about a stronger working condition in the order and to aid the coast members to attain the highest degree of efficiency in promoting the cause of the Foresters. He is a clean-cut, likable man, with a frank, winning manner which marks him as a leader and executive of the best and aggressive type. He is athletic in his tendencies and has never outgrown his boyhood love for sports.

Grand Chief Ranger A. L. Brown, who met Mr. O'Grady at Redding today, is a prominent citizen of Salem, where he has been superintendent of the waterworks for 21 years. He has long been identified with the Foresters and is one of its most prominent members. He has twice represented the Oregon grand court at the supreme court in Salem. Mr. O'Grady has never been represented by a membership with the highest body of the organization.
