H. C. Brandes, the popular restaurateur, Sixth street, advertised a six-room furnished cottage for rent in the famous Want Columns of The Oregon, Journal and secured a desirable tenant the next day. He requested The Journal to discontinue the ad at once, as the large number of applicants was a source of annovance to his household.

The reason why The Journal gives superior results is simply because in Portland and in Oregon nearly everyone reads The Journal. It reaches the masses and the classes, irrespective of creed, politics or nationality, and is read daily by thousands of prosperous people who never see any other Portland paper. It pays to advertise in The Journal. -
