Eugene, the prosperous county seat of Lane county, has recently become known as the city of public spirit, as the city of rapid advancement and almost unprecedented growth, but of the beauty of her homes and fascination of her suburban foliage, little is known to the outsider.

Why is it that this one city so far exceeds other Pacific coast towns of its size? Why is this thriving town a metropolis in miniature? Why indeed? Most people will give the woman's answer, "because." But there must be some real reason back of it all. "Metropolis in miniature" is what some of the Portlanders called it, when they visited Eugene on commencement day, last June. Take a pair of opera glasses and look through the wrong end at Portland and you see Eugene.

To ascribe Eugene's rapid growth to its paved streets is not correct. Last year Eugene paved only its main business artery from the railroad station to Eleventh street. To those who were used to mud roads, this was quite an accomplishment, but to the city-bred man, this piece of pavement half a mile or so long, was nothing wonderful nor startling and if anything, rather drew attention to the unpaved remainder.

This summer the side streets have been paved to Eleventh street from the main business street clear out to the university. And now, the place looks different. It is what some of the Portlanders called it, when they visited Eugene on commencement day, last

Some of the older houses, as shown here, are even more picturesque than the new edifices. They have the advantage of beautiful surroundings. Evergreens, rose bushes, shade trees and climbing vines take time to become attractive. These older homes have them. Most of the new ones are still in surroundings which plainly announce their youthfulness.

Is it the new, expensive, up-to-date residence or the old-fashioned, much-beloved, perhaps unobtrusive house that gives Eugene its fascination? Probably the latter. By all means. Some of them are located in veritable parcs and several spots remind one irresistibly of Cleveland's beautiful Euclid avenue, or Chicago's Woodlawn avenue in Hyde Park.

A Southern California giant over its properties, northern California over its gigantic firs, so Eugene "points with pride" to its maples. There may be other spots where they can have the direct benefit of this Temple of Learning and the indirect benefits which come from its very presence. That undoubtedly is the explanation. Of course, Eugene's location at the head of the Willamette valley, its not too close proximity to the state's metropolis, Portland, and its beautiful hills all around, all add to make it the coming city of Oregon, next to Portland, but the taste, refinement, intelligence and yet withal, the democratic spirit of those already here, are what appeals to the visitor and makes him return. Or, if he travels along, makes him crave to come back to Eugene.

Eugene, which almost doubled in population between 1905 and December, 1907, will probably double again before 1910, and is destined to become a city of importance. All visitors fall in love with her and as a sailor boasts of the attractions of his sweetheart, so they forthwith become living advertisements which all redound to the benefit and the upbuilding of this city, which rightly has been named "Lovable Eugene."

RAIN FALLS AT HARRIMAN CALL

Wall Street's Dictator Figures in New Kind of "Wizard" Role.

Odessa, Or., Aug. 17.—E. H. Harriman has been calling on his neighbors near his summer home on the Klamath lakes. Mrs. D. Griffith, who presides over the summer hotel at Odessa, four miles from Pelican Bay, noticed an elderly man trying a boat at her wharf, and then leisurely walking around her premises on a tour of inspection. He was dressed very plainly, and wore an old straw hat. Something in his manner aroused her suspicions, and she walked up to him and asked:

"Who are you and what are you looking for?"

Whereupon the elderly man doffed his hat, and with a smile back of his glasses, said:

"My name is Harriman. I'm your neighbor, ma'am, and have come over to call."

He then received the apologies and proper welcome of his neighbor at Odessa.

Telford & Son of Klamath Falls are engaged in rearranging the Harriman launch, making wider seats, higher backs and softer cushions. "Comfort" is the one thing at Pelican Bay.

Clouds obscured the sun for several days and Mr. Harriman questioned the old settlers if that meant rain, saying unless it meant rain, he would not see him next year. All are rejoicing over a nice shower that came the same afternoon, insuring the distinguished guest's return.

The Harriman ladies have had good success with the Pelican trout and fish just like the Klamath girls do; for on finding a big trout on the end of their troll line they scream as joyfully as the plinnest little Klamath fisher girl.

ELOPEMENT ALLEE SAME MELICAN KIDS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
North Yakima, Wash., Aug. 17.—Tina James and Chin Chan, a Chinese boy and girl for whom the couple's love has been running unusually rough owing to the opposition of a stern father, having decided to take matters into their own hands, were married at the Baptist parsonage yesterday morning.

Both the young people are Christians but the girl's father adheres to the traditions of his ancestors to the extent of demanding a bride price of $200. If Chin Chan would hand over $200, though the parent, he might have Tina and welcome. The Americanized young Celestial indignantly refused to buy his wife and with the aid of Tina's parents an elopement was carried out.

CRUISER COLORADO IN DOCK FOR REPAIRS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Navy Yard, Puget Sound, Wash., Aug. 17.—The cruiser Colorado will be docked at the navy yard, Puget sound, for several weeks, undergoing repairs of the damage suffered when she ran her nose on the shore at Slip Point Saturday morning. This fact was gathered from the examination of her hull by divers Sunday afternoon.

Eight plates at least will have to be removed. The bilge keel on the starboard side is also damaged, and it is estimated that several weeks work will be necessary to put the cruiser again in service.

DROWNS WHILE ON FISHING EXCURSION

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Eugene, Or., Aug. 17.—A. E. Taylor, a local pianist, was drowned yesterday before the eyes of his wife and friends off Hayden's bridge, in the McKenzie river while fishing. A. T. Miles made desperate efforts to save, his friend, but could not overtake him in the current. The body has been recovered.

When the office seeks the man, the man is usually a pretty good dodger.

GILLIAM NEEDS MORE TEACHERS

Some of the Best School Districts in the County Without Instructors.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Cannon, Or., Aug. 17.—There is a dearth of teachers in Gilliam county and some of the best school districts have not as yet been provided with instructors for the coming school year. In Cannon all the teachers have been chosen and so far but one resignation has been filed.

Miss Clara Irvin of Aurora tendered her resignation, which was accepted, and Miss Scott of Eugene was chosen to fill the place. Miss Minerva Thelsson of Arlington was also elected to teach in the new county high school.

It has been decided that for this year at least the county high school would be held in some of the vacant rooms of the court house. The need of teachers here is all the more manifest because only six applicants took the recent examination.

Third grade—Misses Christine E. Wilson of Rainier, Ethel M. Barrow, Carrie Eliottson of Clatskanie, Harriet V. Bush of Ingalls, Lucy M. Hall of Rainier, Fannie Sharp of Klamath Falls and the Misses Kate G. and Lena Baker of Warren.

There were no applicants for state papers.

SIXTY-SEVEN PASS IN LANE.

Eighty Make Application for County Papers—20 for State.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Eugene, Or., Aug. 17.—Out of 87 applicants for county papers 87 school teachers in Lane county passed according to the report of the examiners. Twenty teachers and masters also took the state examinations the papers of which were sent to Salem for correction because of marking. Several complaints were registered with the examiners that the queries were too hard.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Eugene, Or., Aug. 17.—Eugene's new station, the best in Oregon outside of Portland, was opened yesterday to general business. Tickets were sold through the windows for the first time. The old station will be added to the present freight depot.

NEW SCHOOLHOUSE AT CLAM.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Cannon, Or., Aug. 17.—Clem, the thriving village 15 miles north from this city on the railroad is to build a new schoolhouse. The contract has been awarded to J. D. Estes, a Cannon contractor. It will be a two-room structure and modernly equipped.

FARMERS ORGANIZE CREAMERY COMPANY

Columbia Dairymen Subscribe $1,500 in an Hour Toward a Cooperative Creamery.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Clatskanie, Or., Aug. 17.—The farmers of this place met yesterday and began the organizing of a cooperative creamery. M. E. Paze was elected temporary chairman and W. A. Hall secretary.

In one hour after a motion had passed to erect a creamery, $1,500 was subscribed; $1,500 more will be raised among the farmers the coming week. All are anxious for a creamery. If $3,000 can be raised an ice plant will be erected in connection.

BUSINESS DISTRICT OF TEHAMA BURNED

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Tehama, Cal., Aug. 17.—This town today is without a business center, as the result of a disastrous fire last night which swept the main mercantile district and caused damage amounting to $100,000. The fire started in the Tait hotel and burned fiercely for three hours before it could be checked by the volunteer fire company. In addition to the Tait house, the flames consumed the Heider hotel, a large livery stable, a hardware store and a butcher shop.
