one great man who has given Venezuela a semblance of internal peace and order. Under Castro's leadership, Venezuela has violated every ordinance and convention of international propriety. Yet Castro's diplomacy has been uniformly successful, from the Venezuelan point of view.

Just now there are no diplomatic relations between Venezuela and the United States, France, The Netherlands or Colombia. The Lutch quarrel assumed the proportions of a war cloud, and the Dutch navy has been making demonstrations in West Indian waters. The French quarrel is but one of a long succession of ruptures, this one being-precipitated by the personality of the French representative in Caracas. The Dutch quarrel had many causes, the gravest being the Dutch minister's publication of an article reflecting upon Venezuela and Castro's indifference to the spread of bubonic plague, which seriously threatened the neighboring Dutch island of Curacao. The quarrel with Colombia is an ancient feed of characteristic Latin-American origin and history.

Monroe Doctrine.

The state department softly declares that the cessation of dictiomatic relations between this country and Venezuela was not a hostile rupture, but rather a withdrawal of representation, signifying displeasure. To those who have no mind for splitting hairs betwixt nor and nor east, the diplomatic situation is just this. Venezuela refused to accede to the demands of the United States for arbitration of some claims and for the rearbitration of another. After more than two years of fruitless endeavor, the American government showed its indignation by withdrawing its legation from Caracas and ending diplomatic relations. Two weeks later Castro replied in kind, said "You're another!" and withdraw his representative from Washington. And there you are.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—Technically at war with four nations, the republic of the United States of Venezuela is actually more irranquil and peaceful than ever before in its history. In the eyes of the world a freebooter and a tyrant. Cipriano Castro at home is the one great man who has given Venezuela a semblance of internal peace and order. Under Castro's leadership, Venexuela has violated every ordinance and convertible of laternational venezuela. Case Arbitration Didn't Settle.

Not long after Castro had subdued his rivals and assumed full power in Caracas he discovered that he was the heir to a troublesome lot of unpaid bills. The collectors were importunate and one day Castro found his ports blockaded by the combined naval powers blockaded by the combined naval powers should fump on little Venezuela scemed farcical, but nevertheless they stopped commerce, occasioned a coal famine in Caraca, not consciousness of Cipriano Castro. That gentleman's government agreed to arbitrate everything with everybody.

So it happened that in the summer of 1903 there were ten full international arbitration commissiones assembled in Caracas, not to mention another set of French commissioners. Arbitration was the order of the day. Among other claims presented was that of the Orinoco Steamship company. It asked for a judgment for $1,401,599.03. The question finally got up to Dr. Harry Barge, the Dutch umpire selected by the queen of Holland. He granted the company was not satisfied, and neither was the American government. Therefore the Washington authorities immediately asked for a revision of the case, alleging that certain grave and immediately asked for a revision of the case, alleging that certain grave and gross errors were committed in the original trial. The American government has ever since insisted upon the reopening of this case, and Castro has declined.

Even an Ingrate Has Memory.

So far as Venezuela is concerned, its most serious quarrel is with the United States of American. Every Latin-American country leans to some extent upon the arm of the powerful "republic of the north," as our country is known south of Mexico. The Monroe Loctrine, which declared the purpose of this nation to protect the weaker republics of the western world, was promulgated at a time when the I nited States itself was a weakling. It was vitalized and emphasized many years later when this country risked a third war with England in defending the interests of Venezuela. The Venezuelans remember the western world, was prome a time when the United States lisen was a weakling. It was vitalized and emphusized many years later when this country risked a third war with England in defending the interests of Venezuela. The Venezuelans remember these things, even if they have no gratitude, and they depend much upon the Monroe Dectrine.

The state department softly declares that the cessation of diplomatic relation to the fact that the cessation of diplomatic relation of diplomatic relation of diplomatic relation of diplomatic relation of disconnecting to a hostile rupture, but a hostile rupture. But Castro this Orinoco Steamship United States commission of 1866, consenting to a fresh arbitration, and abiding by its decision, which saved the government of t Venezuela over $1,000,000. But Castro still says that this Crinoco Steamship to case is settled, that the United States and Venezuela agreed to abide by the section of the tribunal, and that Venezuela is abiding by it.

One of the Strongest Claims.

The claim of the Orinoco Steamship company, which the Dutch umpire cut to 2 per cent, is one of the best supported of the American claims. The company was organized in New Jersey in 1902 and succeeded to the rights of an English company which was four years older This company has the right of exclusive navigation of certain navigation o

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas.
