A Recent Snapshot of Premier Asquith of England on the Steps of the Parliament Building.

men and women who are on the brink of starvation, who have sought to look forward to a life of industry and industry but death in the meantime.

On January 1 over 500,000 men and women above the age of seventy will receive benefits from the state of sums from $1.25 to 25 cents a week.

Mr. Asquith has estimated that in the United Kingdom there are 1,246,000 persons of 70 years of age and over, and that out of this total there are 522,000 people eligible for pensions.

The provisions for disqualification have been considerably amplified since the bill was first drafted, one very strong feature relating to disqualification is that no man shall receive a pension unless he has been in the work according to his ability, opportunity or needs for the maintenance of himself and those legally dependent upon him.

Local pensioners, spiritual issues and persons entitled to imprisonment without the option of a fine will be disqualified during detention, and for a further period of ten years after release.

The pensioners are to be divided into two classes: those who are 70 years of age and over and those who are 70 years of age and over and have received for that period in the United Kingdom...
