SETTLERS LOOK FOR VICTORY

Court Decision Has Important Bearing on Umatilla Entries.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., Aug. 27.—A local decision which will affect the settlement of the Umatilla Indian land cases is to be tried in the United States federal court at Portland this fall, was rendered by Register E. C. Brunswell of the La Grande landoffice last evening.

The decision decides a contest between T. J. Tweedy of this city and A. F. Boyce. Back of it and interwoven into this case is the entire issue involved in the 300 entries under the Fulton amendment which have been held up by the government.

T. J. Tweedy filed on a claim near Meacham in the Umatilla reservation. It contained some agricultural and some range land. It is said to be about the best "farming land" of any of the Indian claims.

Since the Indian lands were supposed to be more fit for grazing and timber than for agricultural, Boyce filed a contest against Tweedy on the ground that the land was more fit for agriculture. On this same ground about 300 entries on the reservation have been held up.

The landoffice last evening gave Tweedy the land, saying that he had complied with the law, that the land was not more fit for agriculture than grazing and that under the Fulton amendment he was entitled to the land.

This opens up the entire question of the validity of all the filings under the Fulton amendment and will have a great bearing on the cases to be heard in Portland this fall. There is much rejoicing among Umatilla entrymen over the decision, as it is considered a decisive victory for the settlers.

PASTOR IS MOURNED

perform at night he organized a concert company and gave shows in the schoolhouses. That was his star as a manager, but his bosses didn't approve and spoiled his plan. His brothers, Frank and Billy, were in the same show, one a bareback rider and the other a tumbler. Tony tried riding too, but fell off too often to make a success at it. Ultimately, however, he became a ringmaster, vocalist and dancer in the side show.

Something About His Life.

At times he took up clowning and he stuck to circuses until in 1861 he turned up at the Broadway Music Hall as a comic singer. In 1861 he went to the famous 444 Broadway and in the war time he aroused enthusiasm by appearing on the stage with a big flag and urging every one to join with him in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Here it was that he saw the future of vaudeville. Variety shows at that time were a little too coarse for family consumption. Liquor was sold in the audiences and smoking was allowed. Tony Paster decided to branch out as a manager and put out a variety show on a higher plane. His money went into the idea and, with Sam Sharpley, the minstrel manager, he leased the Volks Garden in New York and in March, 1865, he announced vaudeville fit for women to attend. He was a vaudeville manager always after that.

Success didn't come without a lot of hard work, but it arrived finally and in 10 years he opened his new theatre at 585 Broadway and began his policy of bringing over European performers and of encouraging local talent.

Introduces Lillian Russell.

Thus he introduced Nat Goodwin and Lillian Russell in 1876 and bestowed upon the latter her stage name. She was a Miss Leonard and asked Pastor's advice about changing her name for professional purposes. He suggested "Lillian Russell" and she approved. May Irwin and her sister, Flo, played under his management early in their careers, as did many others whose names are now well known both in vaudeville and in the so-called "legitimate." Some of them, who might well be called the Pastor alumni and alumnae, are Florence Brindley, Gus Williams, Richard Carroll, Francis Wilson, a song and dance artist under Pastor, Denman Thompson, later of "Old Homestead" fame; "Old Hoss" Hoey and his partner, Charley Evans; Billy Barry, who did his first negro monologue for Tony, Jennie Yeamans and Pat Rooney.

Pastor also introduced the first version of condensed comic opera in his presentation of "Pinafore" at the old theatre. In 1881 he moved his theatre to Fourteenth street and there he brought out Jenny Hill, the English music hall singer; Vesta Tilley, Bessie Bonehill, Bessie Belwood and Vesta Victoria.

His Opening Bill.

His opening bill on Fourteenth street was little different from the show he continued to give last year. Tony himself sang his old songs, such as "Down in the Coal Mine," which he had to repeat when he appeared on the stage on his birthday in 1908. He wasn't much of a singer, as voices go, but his audiences liked him immensely just the same.

The theatre next door to Tammany Hall apparently satisfied his ambition. He thought of branching out again to upper Broadway, but thought again, and thought better of it.

"I owe my good health and my good spirits," he said last year, "to the fact that I am not worried by ambition. Frequently I have been asked why I did not move up on Broadway. Once I listened to these suggestions and actually commenced negotiations with the Sires. Then something or other went wrong and I never made another attempt.

"I look with amusement and respect at the men who own three or four playhouses and enjoy it apparently. This one is work enough for me, but it is congenial work after all. I come down every day and attend to the booking, etc., and when that is over I am free."

CARRIERS WILL ASSIST COMMISSION

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)

Salem, Or., Aug. 27.—In response to the request of the railroad commission, the Northern Pacific officials have consented to supply the Oregon commission with whatever figures are necessary to determine the physical valuation of its property in this state. The self-explanatory communication from General Counsel C. W. Bunn of St. Paul shows the attitude of the Hill line toward the effort of the state to obtain the physical valuation of the railroads in those states. It is written to James B. Kerr, attorney for the Hill roads in the northwest.

It is understood that the Portland Railway, Light & Power company will also comply in this same regard with the wishes of the railroad commission. The valuation of the Southern Pacific, O. R. & N. and other Harriman lines will be obtained by a series of hearings. The branch lines have been taken up already.

Soldier Given Knockout Drops.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—Norman Gregory, a private in the 14th coast artillery, died early today from morphine poisoning after being picked up in an unconscious condition by the police on the Barbary coast shortly after midnight. The authorities believe the soldier was the victim of knockout drops administered in one of the dives of the quarter.

Gregory enlisted from Waggoner, Utah, in April and is said to have been of temperate habits. The police are making an effort today to trace his movements last night in the hope of finding the persons who administered the poison.

WEATHER REPORT

Since yesterday morning a small disturbance has made its appearance off the Washington coast, and the low pressure area over Manitoba has remained nearly stationary. The barometer is relatively low over Arizona and New Mexico. The high pressure area yesterday over the north Pacific states has contracted in area and moved to Wyoming, and a new high pressure area has made its appearance off the north California coast. The large high pressure area over the Canadian province of Ontario has remained nearly stationary, and the low area over the south Atlantic states has disappeared. Light rain has fallen in western Washington, northern Arizona, northern New Mexico and in the Atlantic states from Boston south to Charleston. It is warmer in the north Pacific states and much cooler in eastern Colorado, western Nebraska, eastern South Dakota and northern Minnesota. Elsewhere the temperature changes have been unimportant. The indications are for rain Friday, except in southern Idaho, where fair weather will probably continue.
