WILL CAN WHALES FOR EXPORT TRADE

New Industry on Coast Said to Hold Out Big Promises.

MONSTER SPECIMEN CAUGHT OFF COAST

Representatives of Stations on Vancouver Island Visit Portland on Tour of States for Purpose of Exhibiting Skeleton of Whale.

Before long a number of specimens of whales now furnishing sport for passengers traveling along the Pacific coast will be selling in the orient as canned meat—whale meat, and eventually, it is believed, white people will be having whale meat on their bill of fare.

Investigation during the past few weeks has led to the discovery that every whale carries several tons of the most palatable meat, better than beef, and that it will can as easily as beef. Herds of whales travel along the coast every summer and it is estimated that the eatable meat alone will represent a value of millions of dollars if put up in commercial form.

Captain G. F. Langley, manager of the North Pacific Whaling Exhibit company of Vancouver, B. C., and W. E. Anderson, a whaler from the whaling station on Vancouver Island, are in the city on a tour through the states with a skeleton proclaimed to be the largest specimen ever exhibited, and they say that very shortly a canning establishment will be added to the whaling plant on the island at the entrance to the Straits of Juan de Fuca.

"The whaling station is an unqualified success," said Mr. Langley this morning, "and it will be increased right along. Since the first of May this year 500 whales have been captured and turned into oil, whale bone, guano, bone meal and leather, and yet this is only the third season.

"Most of the whales captured this summer were of the sulphur bottom variety, the largest whales to be found, and the specimen from which we obtained the skeleton was 102 feet in length. Reduced to a skeleton the length is 80 feet. The weight of each jawbone is 850 pounds and the total weight of the jawbone and skull over four tons. The specimen was killed from the whale steamer St. Lawrence last May. It was killed by means of an explosive harpoon fired from a gun in the bow of the craft. The harpoon hit the whale right back of the head, killing almost instantly.

"The whales brought to the stations are turned into many articles of value —whale bone, oil, guano, fertilizer and leather, both the hide and intestines being used for that purpose. The hide and intestines are shipped to England and France and there transformed into the finest grades of material.

"We have experimented with the meat and found certain parts palatable. Our intention is to can it and make shipments to the orient for a starter. It compares favorably with beef and is much cheaper. I feel confident that after awhile the market can be extended to the white people."

MORE SHIPS ARRIVE IN.

Salmon Laden Ship St. Nicholas in From Bristol Bay.

Two square-riggers were outside the river this morning bound in. One proved to be the American ship St. Nicholas with salmon from the Bristol Bay canneries and the other is believed to be the American ship Berlin, due from the same place.

The steam schooners St. Helens and Northland and the steamers Alliance and Homer have reached Columbia river during the past 24 hours, and this evening will present busy scenes along the water front since yesterday's arrivals were numerous.

The St. Helens is in to Frank Waterhouse & Co. to load wheat at Montgomery dock No. 2 for San Francisco, and the Northland is going to load wheat and lumber at different docks for the Bay City. The Homer is in from San Francisco via Coos Bay with general cargo, and the Alliance brings freight from Coos Bay. The Homer and Alliance will berth at Couch street dock this evening.

Captain Erickson of the Northland reports that good weather prevailed most of the way up the coast. A strong headwind was encountered to Cape Blanco, but it did not hold the Northland back much because she passed nine steam schooners that had left San Francisco several hours before she got away.

The steamer Geo. W. Elder, Captain Jessen, arrived at Martin's dock at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, bringing a fair freight and 110 passengers.

WITH THE GRAIN SHIPS.

Two Vessels Clear and Two New Arrivals Take Berths.

Two grain cargoes were cleared this morning through the custom house. The French bark Eugene Fautrel cleared for Queenstown or Falmouth for orders with 111,891 bushels of wheat, valued at $100,703, and the British steamer Braemount cleared for St. Vincents, Cape Verde, for orders with 170,678 bushels of wheat, valued at $153,600.

The Norwegian bark Daghild and the French bark Michelet arrived in the harbor during the night to load wheat for Europe. The Daghild dropped anchor in the stream and the Michelet went to Columbia dock No. 2 to discharge ballast. They will begin loading soon because wheat is now pouring into the warehouses at a lively rate.

MAN STILL UNIDENTIFIED.

Name of Hassalo Victim Remains Mystery to Those on Board.

Officers of the O. R. & N. steamer Hassalo were unable to shed any light upon the identity of the man who fell overboard on the trip to Astoria Monday night when they returned last night from the round trip. They had searched his grip but could find nothing in it giving his name. It contained only a few articles of wearing apparel.

The man is described as being of large stature and about middle age. He had bought a ticket for Kalama and appeared to be heavily intoxicated. He got up from his seat in the stern of the boat when near St. Johns and stumbling over the rail fell into the water before anyone could stop him.

THREE TRAINS TO DODGE AT ONCE

Nine Workmen in Panic Huddle in Front of Flyer Near Chicago.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Chicago, Sept. 2.—One man was killed, two were fatally hurt and six were severely injured today when a Northwestern elevated train going at a rapid rate struck a gang of workmen.

Three trains were approaching at the same time and the workmen in a wild endeavor to escape ran directly in front of the swiftly moving city-bound train. John Soehne was hurled 50 feet through the air and instantly killed. The others were scattered along the tracks for 100 yards. The train was heavily loaded with passengers going into the city and the accident caused a small panic aboard, but no one was injured seriously in the rush, as the guards held the gates and doors closed.

USED KNIFE IN SELF DEFENSE

Following the appearance of the story in yesterday's Journal of the stabbing affray in the Hotel Kenyon, Seventeenth and Washington, Tuesday night, a thorough investigation of the house was made last evening by Detectives Baty and Maloney. Two women only were found in the house. One of them was Emma Gleason, who will be an important witness in the stabbing case.

John Brown, an employe of the W. C. Noon Bag company, is in the city jail, charged with slashing Fred King, also employed by the same company. Brown, whose story is believed by the detectives, declares that he went to the Kenyon at the invitation of King, and that between King and the Gleason woman he was robbed of $15. King declined to return his money, and, so Brown declares, he believed he was about to be assaulted when he drew his knife and inflicted several flesh wounds on King.

The Gleason woman has been charged with vagrancy. It is understood she works in a shirt factory. The case will be heard in the municipal court later in the week.

Aberdeen, Wash., Sept. 2.—The invention of a motor life saving boat by Ray Northrup is bringing him a great deal of prominence. He is now organizing a company to finance his invention. Sea faring men who have seen the model say its use will revolutionize the method of propelling life saving craft.

The boat can never be injured by grounding the propellor, as it is constructed so as to run even when the boat is high on the beach.

"STRANGLER" SMITH WRESTLES TONIGHT

Strangler Smith and Herman Newman will wrestle at the Oaks tonight. Both men are in good trim and the patrons of the resort are expecting a good battle on the mat. Newman, who has been spending the summer in the Idaho mountains, is in rugged health and expects to make away with the Strangler. Smith, who has already two victories to his credit, expects to add the third tonight. Tomorrow night the crack middleweight will meet Springer, a 180-pounder from Sellwood, who is an excellent wrestler.

Smith stated this morning that he would meet L. A. Grant, provided the latter would put up a $100 side bet and concede the strangle hold. Grant weighs over 200 pounds and Smith about 150. If the men sign up it will be an interesting match, as both will go into active training for it.

ENGLAND CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY OF CRICKET

London, Sept. 2.—Nearly all of the distinguished cricketers of the day have gathered this week in the little village of Hambledon, Hants, to take part in a celebration of the centenary of England's national sport. It was in Hambledon that the first recorded cricket match was played. The feature of the week's festival is to be a reproduction of the first game, in which the players, as in the old days, will wear top hats and black frock coats. The bat is to be of the original pattern—half broomstick and half golf club—and the wicket will be like diminutive goal posts, one foot high. Conspicuous among the participants in the celebration are the famous "Ranji" and the veteran Dr. W. G. Grace.

COURT ANNULS MITCHELL'S FINE

Estate of Late Senator Will Not Be Required to Pay $1,000.

The fine of $1,000 imposed upon the late Senator John Mitchell, in addition to a brief term of imprisonment, July 25, 1905, upon his conviction of having acted as private attorney for Puter and others before the departments while serving as United States senator, need never be paid. United States Circuit Judge Wolverton handed down a decision to this effect this morning.

Mitchell appealed his case to the supreme court on a writ of error, and, while it was still pending before that court, he died. The appeal was, therefore, dismissed without further hearing or proceedings had, upon motion of his attorneys. Consequently the government, through the district attorney, presented a claim to the administrator of Mitchell's estate for the amount of the fine, together with accrued interest. The administrator came before the court with a motion to have the proceedings abated and the fine cancelled.

In his decision rendered this morning, Judge Wolverton says:

"The sole question for consideration is whether the cause created by the decease of the defendant, so that the government is not now entitled to receive or recover the fine imposed from the deceased's estate.

"Imprisonment in its general sense is the restraint of one's liberty—and is personal to the accused. It is a thing self-evident, therefore, that the death of a person upon whom such a judgment is imposed would put an end to an infliction or enforcement of the punishment. A fine being a pecuniary punishment imposed upon the person, it would seem that a like result would follow.

"In passing judgment, whether of imprisonment or fine, it is the purpose of the court and the law that the accused be personally punished, for the amendment of his life and of his deportment in the future, and to deter others from committing like offenses.

"I am of the view, therefore, that by the death of Senator Mitchell the cause abated entirely, so that no enforcement of the payment of the fine can be made out of his estate.

"The judgment of the court will be that the entire cause is abated and that the fine imposed is not a subsisting claim or demand against the estate of the deceased."

CONSTABLES WILL ATTACH LOCOMOTIVE

The constable's office is today preparing to attach a locomotive belonging to the Southern Pacific, because the company has not paid over $67.25, the wages of L. C. McLean, whose salary has been garnisheed.

A personal letter from the private office of E. H. Harriman figures in the case. J. E. Fellows & Co., who garnisheed McLean's wages, were, it is understood, informed by a letter from Mr. Harriman's secretary that McLean's debt would be settled, as a bond had been deposited. This, however, was not enough security, so attachment proceedings were begun in the justice court. At noon today Constables Wagner and Kiernan had decided to take possession of a locomotive before the day is over.

CARELESSNESS TO BLAME FOR HURT

The libel of Kinney versus the Clan Graham and Brown & McCabe was dismissed by United States Circuit Judge Wolverton this morning, he holding that the libelant had no ground to collect damages for the stevedoring grm of Brown & McCabe unloading wheat from the vessel Clan Graham on December 28, 1905. He fell through an open hatchway and broke his leg and was otherwise injured. He brought suit for damages, claiming that the accident was due to the carelessness of the defendants in that the hatchway was covered up by a seemingly solid planking, which tipped and let him fall through when he stepped upon it.

The judges held that the ship, being of open-between-decks construction, did not owe to the libelant or anyone else the duty of laying down solid decking between the hatchway and the wing, and the plaintiff, being a longshoreman and accustomed to working on such vessels, should have known better than to trust himself to any planking thrown across the hatchways.
