Chief Probation Officer Hadiey, who quit his cosition last night to accept the principalship of the Steph-ens school, attributed the shortage of cases in his domain for the last week or two to the opening of work in the hop fields. Much of the juvenile court "material" is out of the city, he ex-plained, camping with the hops. Next week the juvenile court work will be under the direction of Otto Tauscher, who has been a traveling agent for the Boys' and Girls' Aid society. The Hebrew Educational league was recently organized in the city of Port-

Two Hundred Graduates and Students Hold a Lively Session.

Two hundred graduates, students and ex-students of the Oregon Agricultural college met at the Oregon hotel last night and organized the O. A. C. Alum-night and organized the O. A. C. Alum-ni association of Portlanu. It was a typical college men's meet-ing--college yells, songs, stories and all the rost of it, mixed with enthusiasm such as is never found outside an as-semblage of college men belonging to the same school. The principal object of the formation of the association at this time was to prepare a welcome for the Oregon ath-letes who will arrive tomorrow night af-ier their triumphant trip to England where they won honor for themselves and glory for the state. Smithson is an O. A. C. boy, hence the enthusiasm of the alumni. It is the intention on the part of the new association to make their recep-tion to the returning heroes a big thing. There will be floats, decorations, tally-boes and everything else that enthusi-sm and school pride can suggest. H. Brodle, '04, was chosen president of the association, J. Gault, '04, vice-president, and R. Barnett secretary and treasurer.

president, and R. Barnett secretary and treasurer. It is stated that the purpose of the organization is to make itself felt in Portland as a body. The members will take part in all public college events, class days, etc., and will try above all things to keep enthusiasm for the school at an intense pitch. There are about 150 graduates of the O. A. C. in Port-land, and those who are now students there or have been wanout being grad-uated, will swell the total to about 300 or 400.

The alumni association and students of the college will meet Monday even-ing at 7 o'clock in front of the Oregon hotel to take part in the big parade.

NABBED FOR SELLING BOOZE OVER-PLUS

P. Schrantz, proprietor of a saloon at 86 Russell street, was arrested last evening for selling liquor to a man al-ready intoxicated. Patroisnam. Ellis found W. A. Williams in the saloon buying more liquor, though he had pienty inside already. Schrantz and the man who had been his customer were both brought to the police station in the patrol wagon. Schrantz finally obtained beil after much telephoning, but Williams was the guest of the city for the remainder of the night.

Judge Webster in the county court resterday directed the payment of $22,-538 in claims against the estate of W. C. Noon, also $2,000 in part payment of attorney fees of Northrup & Northrup. attorney fees of Northrup & Northrup. These payments are made possible through toe sale of the Noon farm in Columbia county and a few other real estate sales, which brought over $27,000 into the hands of the executors, and also through the act of the Noon heirs in waiving for the present the payment of their claim of $47,000, being the sum owing to the W. C. Noon Bag company. The Noon heirs holding this claim are Emily J. Noon, the widow. Viola E Noon, Alma E Noon, Emiph A. Noon and Stuart Freeman. This claim originally was only $24,000, but has grown with interest since $504.
