THE DOUBLE "A" ON THE PACIFIC

white and yellow struggle which so many Australians deem inevitable for the control of the Pacific, it is the general conviction that Americans and Australians will fight side by side.

Identified as the majority of the lawmakers are with the Anglo-Japanese alliance, there is every indication in fact that their deliberations will be distinctly unfriendly in tone to the home government.

Many of the members are understood to be prepared to argue that it was practically useless for the colony to prepare for war, alone, but that with American assistance assured there is every reason to count on the maintenance of the white man's empire, provided the white men are ready and armed to fight in their own defense.
