PORTLAND TAKES SIXTH STRAIGHT

Mohler's Seals Manage to Slip Over Last Game of the Series.

Portland and San Francisco split even yesterday, the score being the same in both games, 2 to 0, the locals assuming a 27-point lead for second place in the league race. Long Robert Groom was the winning pitcher for Portland and Browning the lucky one for Frisco. By winning the first game the locals made it six straight from the Seals, the best record they have made this season.

Both games were hummers and filled with fast plays by both teams. In the opening game Portland scored first in the second inning when McCredie started the canto with a pass. On a signal for the hit and run play McCredie was half way down to second when Ryan singled to right, the ball coming up against the fence with a noise like a pistol shot. It was too fast, however, and Melchoir recovered it in time to hold McCredie at third while Ryan stayed at first. Whaling hit to Zeider and with an easy double play in sight Mohler dropped Zeider's perfect throw, McCredie scoring on the play.

The next run came in the fourth when, after two were out, Ryan got hit in the shins with one of Griffin's speeders. Then Bert Whaling lifted a beauty into left field, Ryan taking second and both men moved up a peg when McArdle left Hildebrand's return get away from him. Groom drove a grounder between third and short which Zeider by a great one-handed stop kept from traveling into the outfield. He was unable to put any one out, however. This put Ryan over with the second run.

Frisco was dangerous all through the first three innings and in the second came within an ace of scoring. Williams opened the inning with a pass and after Beck went out Berry singled. Mohler drew a pass and McArdle went out on a fly to Cooney. Griffin struck out but Madden dropped the third strike and Williams was almost home when Madden recovered and beat him to the plate. It was one, two, three for the Seals after that.

Frambes, the new catcher, went into the second game and made good from the start. He had two bad throws, but when you consider that he has been traveling for the past week and only reached Portland yesterday morning, he should not be judged too harshly. He has a beautiful peg and receives well, although he was not used to Garrett's peculiar style of pitching.

This second game was a beauty and for seven innings the two teams failed to score a run. Both pitchers were doing beautifully and the hits were few and far between. Several men got to first base but four double plays broke things up effectively. It was a hard game for Garrett to lose, for he pitched well. Mohler scored the first run for the Seals in the eighth inning, when he lined a hot one to Ote Johnson, which the latter partially blocked. But Ote could not catch the little manager at first, and he went to third when Frambes threw wildly, trying to catch him stealing. He scored on Berry's single to left field. Hildebrand scored the next one on Cooney's error, Berger's sacrifice and Melchoir's single to center, which Raftery booted long enough to let Hildy score.

Rolly Zeider was put out of the game by Cheyne in the seventh for making too much noise with his mouth, as the saying goes. He had been caught out trying to make two bases on Melchoir's grounder to Johnson, but couldn't see why Johnson had the ball there waiting for him and there should have been no question about the decision. The score:

The all engrossing topic of the lovers of the great American game is not politics, but who will carry off the pennants in the two major leagues. Predictions are always guesswork. There is in indefinite something, which for lack of a better term is called strong finishing, that will win out against great odds, as Detroit and Chicago pulled out last year.

It is interesting to note a few facts concerning the balance of the schedule which will show the work cut out for the various teams. In the American league Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Cleveland are so close that either one may carry off the rag. Chicago has one less game to play than St. Louis or Detroit.

Chicago's Games at Home.

There are only fourteen left for Chicago. A glance at the schedule will show that twelve of these are home games, nine are with second division teams and five with first division teams. Detroit runs up against three straight games at Chicago near the close of the season, which may decide the place of Chicago and Detroit. It is undoubtedly more advantageous for a team to play on its own grounds, so that Detroit will have to go up against a stiff proposition to win out.

Cleveland has ten games with second division teams, all at home, and five with first division teams. Detroit plays twelve home games during the balance of the season and three away. St. Louis, which is making such a run for the pennant this year, has thirteen home games and two at Detroit. Five are with first division teams and ten with second division teams.

The schedule has been so carefully arranged that in the fifteen games which constitute the finish of the American league there is little advantage in one team over the other. Cleveland has twelve home games and three at St. Louis. If the pennant race should settle into a fight between Chicago and Detroit, Chicago would have the undoubted advantage of playing on her own grounds with Detroit at the end of the season.

New York's Easy Schedule.

In the National league the Giants, Chicago and Pittsburg are safely in the lead. Chicago runs up against three games with the giants on their home grounds and during the balance of the season will only play one more game at home. New York, on the other hand, has a schedule which calls for the balance of the season on home ground. Philadelphia has fourteen home games and three away. With the lead that New York has and the considerable advantge of the entire balance of the season on home ground, the Giants should pull out by a safe margin; but she runs into the strongest competitors in the league, with the exception of the Boston games on October 5, 6 and 7, and this may have considerable weight.

Chicago has only eleven more games to play, while Pittsburg has only thirteen and New York seventeen. Pittsburg runs into Boston, Brooklyn and St. Louis and two games with New York at New York. With the comparatively poor showing of the second division the Pirates ought to be in at a close finish unless some surprises are sprung. The two New York games will have considerable weight in deciding the chances of the Pittsburg aggregation.

DAN CUPID GETS BUSY WHEN OREGON ATHLETES RETURN FROM ENGLAND

With the home coming of the three Oregon athletes, Smithson, Gilbert and Kelly from the London Olympic games last week, Dan Cupid got extremely busy. Of course all of the three boys were not victims of his unerring darts, but one was.

Well, here is the layout the little fellow had prepared for the returning champions: Last Wednesday he saw Harold S. Gilbert and Miss Katherine Luckey safely launched on the matrimonial sea. Then he rested for a few days in anticipation of a strenuous Saturday. On the afternoon of Saturday he shifted from the Gilbert family to the Smithson household and was sponser at another launching fete. This time it was the marriage of Miss Etoyle Smithson, sister of Forrest C. Smithson, world's champion in the hurdles, and Charles W. Henry.

Then he shifted the scene of his operations and took a hurried trip to Seattle, where he was the most prominent guest at the wedding of Alfred C. Gilbert and Miss Mary Thompson. Alfred is the world renowned polevaulter and Harold is his brother.

Just what the little fellow has in store for the future he is keeping a secret.

Players Back From Trip to the Mountains—Forbes Reaches University.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

University of Oregon, Eugene, Sept. 21.—Trainer Hayward returned yesterday with the six football men who have been doing their preliminary training on the McKenzie river. While there the boys have been doing good work practicing punting, running with the ball and regular line work. They also did a great deal of tramping and fishing.

Mrs. Hayward, who accompanied the party, surprised them one day by catching 1b trout of good size. One especially large one got away with the greater part of her rod, breaking it at the first joint.

Those who took the trip beside Mr. and Mrs. Hayward were: Captain Moullen, Clarke, McIntyre and Coleman from last year's team; Main from Lick high, and Latourette from Portland high.

Robert W. Forbes, Oregon's new coach, also arrived yesterday and will be out with the squad for the first practice this afternoon.

PROMOTER KING APPROACHES TRIAL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—It is expected that before the end of this week the case of Cardenio F. King, the financial promoter, will be reached for trial in the superior court. Only a few months ago King was one of the most widely-known promoters and stock-brokers in Boston and New York. His extensive and alluring advertisements had drawn thousands of dollars into his coffers from the pockets of would-be speculators, a large portion of whom were residents of rural communities. When rumors of King's financial embarrassment were circulated the promoter disappeared and his whereabouts remained unknown for several months, when he returned to Boston and surrendered himself. During his absence he had been put through bankruptcy and several indictments had been returned against him for alleged fraud.

GET RICH QUICK OFF AMALGAM

Gang of Four Charged With Robbing a California Gold Dredge.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 21.—The county authorities declare they have unearthed a plot to systematically rob the dredges of the Folsom Development company of rich amalgam and that in the arrest of four men on charges of grand larceny they have the leaders of a gang that has already taken more than $30,000 from the dredges. The men in jail are Frank Cole, E. Cordell, W. Wells and Charles Lombardi.

The arrests were on information from the San Francisco mint that a man had been selling amalgam in great quantities and that he always took the metal to the mint in person and called for the coin in the same way, instead of making shipments by express in the usual way. Detective Lamphrey discovered that Cole had been disposing of amalgam at the mint and the arrests followed.

Cole and Cordell had been working on one of the dredges for months. They purchased a saloon at Folsom some time ago and Lombardi was installed as barkeeper. The officers claim that Lombardi was a go-between.

Cole admits having sold metal at the San Francisco mint, but says it came from a mine owned by his mother at Iowa Hill. The officers say the men had access to the dredges and that they could easily have scraped off some of the metal every day.
