CURE FOR SNAKE BITE.

How Ranchman Treated a Wound When Far From Settlement.

From the Los Angeles Times.

Bitten by a rattlesnake in the calf of the right leg in the Santa Ana mountains last Saturday, John McCormick, a rancher of Grapeland, saved his life by making an incision with his pocket knife and inserting a piece of the reptile's flesh in the wound. He bandaged it tightly and walked seven hours before he reached his ranch, where he could receive medical treatment. Dr. Sumner J. Quint was called from Los Angeles to attend McCormick. When he arrived he found that his patient was suffering from slight poisoning. He declares that McCormick saved his life by his own treatment.

McCormick was hunting through scrub oak when he felt a peculiar sting in his leg. He looked down and saw the snake dragging on the ground as he walked. Its fangs had become fastened in his leggings and it was unable to withdraw them.

With the butt of his gun McCormick knocked the snake off and then crushed its head with his heel. As quickly as possible he ran into the open and carried the snake with him. When he bared his leg he squeezed all the blood he could out of the two punctures which the fangs had made. Then opened a gash, cutting through the two wounds and letting out the blood and poison. He cut a piece of flesh out of the snake's back and inserted it in the wound. McCormick used his handkerchief for bandages and then tied his leg again just above the knee to stop the poison from working through his system.

McCormick was miles from any settlement where he could secure medical attention, so he started back to Grapeland. His leg pulsated with pain and he soon became deathly sick. In his weakened condition he was compelled to rest on the road time and again. When he finally reached home he was almost exhausted and his leg was dreadfully swollen and almost black.

McCormick says that his treatment was famous among the Indians for snake bites and he has known of a number of instances where its application has saved lives.

Cheap Wedding Breakfast.

Astoria correspondence San Francisco Call.

After making special arrangements with a restaurant proprietor to decorate a table with flowers and assign special waiters to it, a bridegroom who was married here recently, who had said that a wedding party of 22 persons would order after they had seated themselves, appeared at the appointed time with the party and ordered coffee and cake for them, which they took one hour to consume.

After finishing their feast the happy husband gave the much chagrined proprietor $1.25 and left.
