UNRAVELS MYSTERY

 They were scratched by splinters and the empress' silk dress was spashed with blood.
 Pieri and Orsini were arrested and Gomez was sentenced to life imprisonment. Orsini was arrested that night with several other persons but released the next day. De Rudie still lives in and the building will represent an expenditure of about $40,000.

 tell the story and Eugenie, an exile from her own France, may read.
 "The conspiracy was vast and the histories relate," said De Rudie. "Many other persons besides those usually mentioned were involved. Our first project was to procure by a certain means at our disposal an invitation to a banquet ball, and to rid the world by noiseless weapons between one dance and the next. We later abandoned this idea and devised the well known plan. The bombs used in the attempts were cast, not in London, as is generally believed, but in the Taylor Foundry at Birmingham."
 "We took our places at the front of the opera-house. The police and soldiers formed about the carriage and the crowd pressed close in. As the carriage drew up I could observe Gomez across the street. Then I saw his arm swing back and I whispered to Orsini to crouch, as Gomez was about to throw his bomb. Just as I whispered to Orsini came the explosion. Gomez had aimed badly and killed a number of soldiers who formed a cordon along the sidewalk in front of the opera-house, and I am told, sat through the performance.

 "Queen Victoria Saved Me."
 "I owe my life to my wife, Miss Booth, an English woman, still my companion, who succeeded in intercepting the London Times in my fate. The influence of that powerful journal in Queen Victoria to bestir herself to secure my reprieve from Empress Eugenie.

 "Pieri and I were condemned with Orsini to die. It was arranged that Pieri was to be executed first, I second, and Orsini, regarded as the chief culprit, was to witness our end and to be beheaded last. We started for the scaffold. Our hands were tied behind our backs and also chained to our feet. We wore the collarless shirt. It was raining and snowing at the same time. I was smoking my pipe. A person whose breast was covered with decorations advanced with airily on horseback. He whispered to the guard and I was taken abruptly from the line and led toward the prison.

 "And still today, after half a century, I tremble when I think of the fallaciousness of human justice. Fellow Orsini and Giuseppe Pieri, the two most severely punished, the two guillotined, were among the four accused, the only ones who had not thrown bombs, who had not shed blood."
