

WRECK ON RUNAWAY TRAIN

Brakes Fail on Logging Road Near Scappoose and Thirteen Laborers Are Buried Under Heavy Cars—Injured Brought to Portland Hospitals.

Sliding down a 12 per cent grade for a quarter of a mile, a deep cut making it impossible for them to jump and thus save themselves, six men were killed and seven badly injured in the wild ride of a locomotive and gravel car down the tracks of the Portland & Southwestern railroad yesterday.

All of the men who were killed and injured were foreigners and were employees of the Chapman Timber company, owners of the P. & S. W. They were riding on the gravel car and when the car left the track at a curve were thrown into the brush and pinned beneath the gravel car and its load.

LIFE'S ROAD

Smoothed By Change of Food.

Worry is a big load to carry and an unnecessary one. When accompanied by indigestion it certainly is cause for the blues.

But the whole trouble may be easily thrown off and life's road be made easy and comfortable by proper eating and the cultivation of good cheer.

Two years ago I made the acquaintance of Grape-Nuts and have used the good food at day and sometimes twice, ever since.

At the time I began to use it life was a burden. I was for years afflicted with bilious sick headache, caused by indigestion, and nothing seemed to relieve me.

The trouble became so severe I had to leave my work for days at a time. My nerves were in such a state I could not sleep and the doctor said it was on the verge of nervous prostration.

I saw an ad. concerning Grape-Nuts and bought a package. I was told it was a two-story brick with full basement. Mr. Knighton is also having plans prepared for a one-story and basement building for the Portland Marble Works.

Brakes Fail on Hill

As nearly as can be learned, the brakes on the Shay locomotive which was pushing the loaded gravel car up the hill failed when the car was on the grade. The locomotive was taking a construction gang to their work after dinner and the engineer, Charles Troxel, tried to hold the train with the air-brake, but he found they would not work.

Troxel, his fireman, William Bishop, J. Monahan, woods foreman, John Sparks, track foreman, and others were riding on the locomotive. When they felt the slipping back down the hill they tried to stop the train.

The locomotive and gravel car, gaining momentum with every foot, tore down the mountain side to where there is a sharp curve. The locomotive took the curve safely but the coupling-pin broke and the car and its load leaped the track and turned over on its side.

Every one of the 13 men on the car was killed or hurt. They lay there until the crew from the locomotive had reached the scene, when the work of recovery began. The car and its load were taken from the logging camp, a few hundred yards distant, and 100 men were soon at work raising the flat car and digging the victims from beneath the gravel.

As fast as they were taken from underneath the wreck they were carried to the logging camp and later all were taken to Scappoose, eight miles away.

Tell Different Stories

Stories of the men seem to differ concerning the cause of the wreck. One story was to the effect that the train had come to within 100 feet of the top of the divide when it began raining, and the locomotive was unable to make headway on the slippery rails.

Antonio Rheinwald, one of those in the Good Samaritan hospital, said this morning that there had been no rain for some time and that the tracks were dry, and that 150 workmen had failed to work when Engineer Troxel attempted to apply them.

Of the wreck victims three were killed instantly, two died in the car while being taken to Scappoose and the third died in the Good Samaritan hospital yesterday evening.

MAY BE PERMANENT RESERVATION

Bird's Eye View of Fort Sill.

Fort Sill, Okla., Oct. 2.—Indications point strongly to the establishment at Fort Sill, Okla., of a permanent national military reservation by the government. It is understood congress will be asked to appropriate sufficient funds at the coming session to materially increase the size of this brigade post, and that it will be made the central gathering place and training ground of the army. The fort is at present of the rank of brigade post, and has approximately 50,000 acres, and is richly located at the foot of the Wichita mountains. In the midst of a climatic condition which enables open air drilling the year round. There was some question as to the availability of water supply, and the government is now testing out this to determine quality and quantity of water at hand.

Fort Sill, which will become one of the greatest military reservations in the world, is rich in historic interest. Fort Sill has been the center of things doing for more than a half century. As far back as the early 50's it was that a general campaign was ordered against the Indians in the southwest. The Comanches, Kiowas, Cheyennes, Navajoes and Arapahoes, the Wichita Indians he moved his troops from Fort Reno to Fort Sill and quartered his soldiers here several weeks. Interrupted by the civil war, Fort Sill did not advance in construction work for nearly 20 years after its founding. With but a very few cabins to mark the spot where the post was located, there it remained until a renewal of the construction was resumed in 1868 and continued until the seventies, when it was designated by the government as a permanent army post. From that time onward Fort Sill has always been looked upon with favor by the war department officials. During the transformation of the post from its village of a few houses to its present proportion Fort Cobb and Fort Arbuckle, in close range of Fort Sill, were abolished, and Fort Sill became the headquarters for the posts merged and for the army of the southwest.
