Cattle Lose and Then Regain.

A loss of 25c in the price of best steers was quickly regained the very next day in the local yards during the past week. While arrivals were not nearly as liberal as last week ago, packers were inclined to be bearish on the steer situation for a while, but they got over their case of nerves in a very short time and are again paying former top levels. For the week a total of 919 head of cattle arrived, compared with 1,354 last week and 1,090 a year ago.

Sheep Market Is Very Firm.

A very firm tone is shown in the sheep market because of the very limited supplies offered in the yards during the past week. In all but 930 head arrived. This compares with 1,480 a week ago and 1,561 head for this same week a year ago. Values in the yards are showing practically no change.

Yards Representative Sales.

The following sales of livestock are being reported by the leading livestock commission men:

Benson & Gould—Hogs are holding quite well considering everything. Cattle are firm; likewise sheep.

Hunt & Lacy—Cattle market is in good shape and the decline in hogs this week was expected.

Wheeler—Hog market is about 25c lower all around for the past week. Present outlook is for a continuation of these prices.

COMING WINTER TO MARK HIGH POINT OF DISTRESS

Chicago's Reign of Terror to Be Explained in Part by Desperation of Workless Workers—Worst to Come—Policeman Talks From Inside.

By John E. Lathrop.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Twenty thousand children go to school hungry every morning; 10,000 go to school without breakfast; and about as many mothers abstain from eating that their little ones may break their fast in the morning.

Official report to this effect has been made by the Chicago school board. No denial has been offered; all action following that stupifying disclosure has been predicated on the accuracy of the assertions.

Holdups are of daily occurrence in the residential districts. It would be difficult to exaggerate this condition. When I went to live on the north side here, during my stay in Chicago, I was warned by every one:

"Don't carry money with you, more than a few dollars; it is better to have a few dollars, else the robbers will beat you in their own way. I have always had my boarding house two men have been held up in a few weeks; across the street two others."

All along these residential streets it is the same. And it is within a football kick of the mansion of the wealthy McCormicks and the others of their class.

The beautiful boulevard along the shore of Lake Michigan, exceeding in charm anything I ever have seen, is not a safe resort after dusk, except where masses of people congregated; and these are quite as common as the coming of the days.

The charity publication of the city has suspended the funds devoted to getting it out will be used to buy bread for the hungry.

"What is the use of gloating over these facts?" a police sergeant said to me. "What is the use of closing our eyes to the truth?"

"Well, with the understanding that this is between us, I will answer. I have talked with men who have arrested for holding up people. You would be surprised to learn that many of them would to have been working men. It has been proved, have looked for jobs. The general agreement among this class is that they are being kept out of part of their fruits of toil in the past are now thrown out of work from no fault of theirs," was the answer.

Just Like the Higher-Ups.

"They said in many instances that the people had been told that higher-up business men had been doing wrong practices of so many kinds that they decided that they had the right to go out and collect what had been withheld from them in the past."

This police sergeant then went on to relate how a man who had been working for a hardware store, had a family, had lost his job, his wife and little ones were hungry, and he simply went out to beg in a dwelling house and was killed by the owner.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND THEIR WORK

Edited by Mrs. Sarah A. Evans

DURING the past week Portland has been the hostess of the state society of one of the oldest women's organizations in this country, and one that has grown to such proportions that the sun never sets upon its flag—the knot of white ribbon.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of today is the evolution of various temperance societies that began a century ago, and was crystallized into perfect form and methodical, systematized work under Francis Willard, one of the greatest women the world has ever known.

The meeting of the past week marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the state organization of Oregon. It was largely attended, but it is needless to say the personnel here almost wholly changed since that first enthusiastic meeting a quarter of a century ago. Here and there, however, might be seen a time-worn, yet beautiful, face, crowned with the silvery glory of well spent years. The reminiscence of from time to time, punctuated the program exercises were most illuminating, while later victories lent a clarion note to all the proceedings.

An incident of the opening exercises was a gift of 25 silver dollars from the Prohibitionists of the travel department of T. S. McDaniels, who said among many bright and appropriate things, that the "Prohibition" which is the appreciation of the help and support of the W. C. T. U. tendered them a little souvenir of 25 silver dollars, he hoped would add to the welcome they extended to the convention.

At this point Les Pagett came forward with a small silver vase which were filled the 25 new and shining silver dollars.

The meetings were all held in the Taylor Street Methodist church, where the organization had its birth. The pulpit was beautifully decorated with white flowers and greenery, and the altar was adorned with white ribbon in great profusion. The most conspicuous thing upon the platform was a picture of Miss Willard, buried almost in bloom of purple tint and draped with the insignia she loved. The four-day program was most interesting and every number worked in beautiful harmony and consecrated an immense amount of work and entertainment was accomplished. Many women of prominence were present from various parts of the state, and the reports they brought encouraged and encouraged them forward with the work they have undertaken.

The most prominent person in attendance was Rev. Eugene St. John of Kansas, who is an ordained minister and national lecturer. She was her way to the hearts of the women, her sweet womanliness and stirring addresses. Aside from the office she held, which would not be mentioned in a convention, a marked figure at the convention was the president, Mrs. Henrietta Brown of Albany. Mrs. Brown is a handsome, accomplished, and personable woman, with a fine and gentle face and bearing, she nevertheless gives the observer the impression of a sad and conscientious force, and much dignity behind this placid exterior. The busiest person, perhaps, at the convention was Mrs. A. J. Stiles of Portland, who, with characteristic energy, took hold of the business end of things and fairly made them hum.

Another notable figure was Mrs. Shane, the treasurer, who was one of the most energetic of the women's organization, and through sunshine and stress has stood faithfully at the helm, and with sound advice and guidance has helped to guide the organization over many a dangerous place. Mrs. Marsters of Roseburg, the recording secretary, and Miss Gotschall, her assistant, were well known and welcome at the convention, and their long terms of service testify to the efficiency of their work.

During the week many small social affairs were arranged, which followed the regular meetings. Included the officers, delegates and their friends by Mrs. O. P. M. Jamison at her handsome home on Madison street.

HOOD RIVER now becomes the infant child of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs. During the past week the Women's club of that thriving little city sent in its application for membership in the state organization and was immediately accepted.

This club resembles the apple that have made the town famous—if center be excelled and the system of work in which they have gone to work, with the most up-to-date year-book in Oregon, shows the progressiveness of the women who constitute its membership. The year's announcements come, not as usual in one book, but in four. There is first the year-book proper, which contains on its inside cover page the terse announcement, "Our First Year Book, wherein we attempt to body forth ideas and ideals for the betterment of the women who are preparing for life by living."

In passing we may remark that there is a whole sermon in this first book, which contains all the club information such as the names of officers, the membership list, social, press, entertainment, music, calendar and auditing; the time of meetings for committees, departments, etc., and then the program. In this feature the club has proven itself not only up-to-date, but possesses with the rest of the idea. Every program is arranged along the line of committee or department work, the whole year is filled with most tempting and interesting subjects for talks, papers or discussion, yet every one bears on the actual work of the club. The names of those who will appear on the program are left out—another progressive step—for often the program is so full of interest and so delicate matter to ask some one else to fill in. The club meets every alternate Wednesday, beginning September 2. Thirty minutes is given at every meeting for the discussion of current events and civics.

The club shows 101 members with the following officers: President, Mrs. E. E. Goff; first vice-president, Mrs. F. J. Guff; second vice-president, Mrs. J. P. Batchelder; recording secretary, Mrs. H. S. Richmond; financial secretary, Mrs. Agnes M. Cunningham; business manager, Mrs. G. R. Gardner. The directors are: Mrs. J. F. Watt, Miss Linda Earl, Mrs. F. H. Button, Mrs. H. H. Huxley, Mrs. A. A. Jayne, Mrs. Stafford.

Besides the regular year-book which contains all the above information, the club has gotten out three other books.

NO OPERATOR NEEDED.

Some message will be received on the receiving typewriter exactly as it appears on the sending one.

In some respects it resembles the familiar stock ticker and other printing telegraph instruments, but unlike these it makes possible the use of capital and small letters as in ordinary letter writing. The receiving machine records the message just as written and gives what corresponds to a carbon copy made on the original machine.

There is said to be no chance for mistake. The machine takes down the message just as sent. There is no human receiver to make a mistake by faulty hearing or carelessness in neglecting as it the case with the present Morse system of dots and dashes in use all over the world.

The only experience required is that of an operator working a typewriter. The message is sent in the same manner in which you would proceed to write a letter on an ordinary typewriter. This New Instrument Sends and Receives Without Making Mistakes.

The latest device in telegraphy is a telegraphing typewriter. It can be attached to and placed under any ordinary typewriter, and the Electric World. When so connected it becomes a complete sending and receiving telegraph instrument, and both sending and receiving instruments record the message.

W

HEN the fourteenth amendment was under discussion in the United States senate a member said, "Suffrage is a political right which the few may give or withhold at pleasure."

"Let that idea," replied Sumner, "crystallize in the minds of the American people and you have rung the death knell of American liberties."

Abraham Lincoln once said, "No man is good enough to govern another man without that other man's consent." The principle of consent underlies all human government. In all the dealings of God with the Israelites, their right of consent was recognized. If they were overthrown to gratify them; nor would Jehovah himself maintain a theocracy over them without their consent. "Choose ye this day whom ye shall serve," was reiterated constantly in their history, as it is evermore in the history of each soul. In this divine recognition of individual integrity is the charter and justification of all human rights.—Wisconsin Citizen.

On W. C. T. U. Convention.

Our ribbon white, dear band, has drawn you here; For each of us home and all the world to pray. The blighting drink-curse, in the home you fear to stand, to guard that home today.

Our chieftain marked a consecrated way; The way of truth and temperance and light, And henceforth with us still, her magic way Inspires our hearts and courage gives tonight.

Long years have passed, yet still that Rings out with power in accents sweet and strong, And woman's life is in a broader And woman's place is where there is a wrong.

She leads us yet from heights of power sublime; She sees her cause triumphant win its way; Her message still goes out to every clime; And henceforth, a coming temperance day.

The call of God, for woman's help you heard; For blighted homes, defrauded childhood sweet; Your woman's heart for human woe was stirred, You to the rescue came, with flying feet.

Our ribbon white for purity and love, Gleams forth with message for the world's great need; A mute appeal for God and things above, A gospel not of creed, but loving deed.

From homes where prohibition's reign Brings joy and blessing, and a reign of love; You come to us who toll 'mid sin's dark way, And courage give and faith in God above.

Your lives, your faith, your prayers, A blessing bring; In council sweet, we'll plan for coming years; And faith and courage in our hearts will sing; We'll see the bow of promise e'en through the bow.

With grateful hearts of victory we'll sing, Of triumph over crime and sin and shame, Through Oregon we'll prohibition ring, And build up God's dear kingdom in His name.

O, loyal hearts, on such as you is laid The burden of the world's vast need; But you will see the bow of promise e'en through the bow.

Your faith and strength will overcome the foe.

Our leaders brave who toiled 'mid hope and fear, And sacrifice, have passed beyond our sight, But they, with us, review the fruitful year; They wait the harvest in supernal light.

Faces of those we loved appear tonight, And visions of the time that yet shall be; They speak of God's eternal love and might; When all the world from sin shall be set free.

God keep you all and guide you all through life; And give you vision 'till your journey's done. To see the gleam amid the toil and strife, Of God's eternal, blessed, righteous throne.

This original poem was read by Mrs. L. M. T. Hadden as a greeting to the state convention from the local union.
