PRETTY MISS OF PONY BALLET OWNS PLANTATION IN VIRGINIA

Seven hundred acres of good, rich old Virginia soil in her own name. And still she is a chorus girl. Miss Thelma Audrie, (with an acute accent on the "e," if you please), one of the seminary girls in "The Honeymoon" company, at the Baker last week, is the girl who has the land. But Thelma Audrie, ("w" accented again), is not her real name. And this isn't a press agent's notice, either. Miss Annie —, but what's the use? you don't know her, and it would make her angry if her real name were printed. Miss Thelma Audrie—that's her stage name, (all stage folk have a stage name, you know, whether they are in the chorus, or otherwise)—lives in Washington, D. C. This land that she owns, (really she owns it and no kidding about it), is not far from Alexandria, Va. Alexandria is just across the Potomac from old Washington. If you saw "The Honeymooners," during last week, perhaps you noticed a petite, lively, little thing in the pony ballet. That's Miss Audrie, the owner of that Virginia land. Miss Audrie won't mind the things being printed about her land and the mention of her graceful dancing in the ballet, and all that, but she would object like the dickens to having her real name printed, in spite of the fact that away out here in Portland no one knows Miss Audrie or her real name. But some one in the east might see and know. That's why Miss Thelma's real name is left out. Miss Thelma has one great ambition. Some day she plans to live on that 700 acres. And alone. Young Hunter Shoots Companion. (United Press Leased Wire.) Fresno, Cal., Oct. 26.—Henry Lung, 17 years of age, is under arrest for killing Carl Berg, of the same age, by shooting him in the neck with a rifle. Lung asserts that the shooting was an accident and that he was loading a gun at the time. The boys were with a party of comrades when the killing took place. Lung had fired at a squirrel and dropped behind to reload. Powder stains about the wound indicate that the shot was fired at close range.
